MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it, it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. Webb's residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 62s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.
NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,

&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

JOHN WHITE, MANUFACTURER, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.—

UPWARDS OF FIFTY YEARS' experience has fully confirmed the superior reputation of these Lozenges in the cure of ASTHMA, WINTER COUGH, HOARSENESS, SHORTNESS OF BREATH, and other PULMONARY MALADIES.

RECENT TESTIMONIAL.

August 23, 1869.
Dear Sir,—Having tried your Cough Lozenges in India, I have much pleasure in testifying to their beneficial effects in cases of incipient consumption, asthma, and bronchial affections; so good a medicine ought to be known to be appreciated. I have prescribed it largely with the best results.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, February 6; Agra and Calcutta, February 2; Madras, February 1.

Now that the Kookie raid has ended and the earth ceased to quake in Eastern Bengal, a general quiet reigns, with one exception, through British India. The news of the week is comparatively cheerful, even in respect of the districts so lately stricken with famine. Thanks to the tardy rainfall the face of nature is brightening in most directions, and prices are steadily falling with each shower. There will still of course be much distress in places, but the great catastrophe which seemed at one time inevitable has been averted, and Government can now face the future with comparative fearlessness. The octroi duties on grain have been suspended in several districts in the North-West; and the Rao of Cutch has issued similar orders for the whole of his dominions.

THE exception abovenamed refers to a telegram of March 1, subsequently received from Bombay, which declares, on official information from Peshawar, that "the garrison of Kohat has been surprised" by a Bezotie raid. We are further told, what seems incredible and is probably untrue, that "the British loss was 300 men." This is sad news, even if we assume thirty as the real figure. It seems, if true, to confirm the Delhi Gazette's repeated assertion that the frontier tribes have not been cowed by the late "demonstration," and were threatening a fresh raid into the Agroah Valley. Kohat is some way from Hazara, but the new outbreak looks ominous.

LORD MAYO held his first levée on the 27th January, and a very brilliant affair it seems to have been. The gentlemen presented took nearly an hour and a half in filing before the Viceroy. On the previous evening the little Opera-house was crammed to the last corner with visitors curious to see the Earl and Countess of Mayo, who attended in state. A drawing-room on the 2nd February, and a State ball on the 5th, were the next events in prospect when the mail left. No such state has been kept in Calcutta since Lord Dalhousie's time. In amusing contrast we have a picture of Sir John Lawrence "sitting cross-legged on a table" on the deck of the steamer that bore him and a few friends down the river on his way home.

THE meaning of the Kookie raids on the borders of Sylhet and Cachar is still—says the Friend of India—a mystery to the authorities as well as the public. It is not known as yet what clans and chiefs took part in the fray, although Gokool Singh has been sent a prisoner to Dacca. The official theory is that a chief named Kanhaya Singh instigated the raids in order to divert the attention of our police from Munnipore, the true object of his desires. According to another reading the clansmen of a Loshai chief lately dead wanted a certain number of heads to deck his grave with. It is said that they really carried off their victims' scalps, and certain it is that numbers of coolies in the outlying tea-gardens have been frightened away from so dangerous a neighbourhood.

ACCORDING to the Bombay papers, the railway accident on the Bhoze Ghaut incline might not have happened had there been a safety siding at the end of the reversing station. There are two of these, it seems, lower down the Ghaut; but, as often occurs with similar precautions against possible risks, they were either too few or out of their place. The Commission of Inquiry however may be expected to throw some light on what is still a dark matter.

At the Trades Association dinner in Calcutta on the 27th of January Sir R. Temple was one of those who addressed the numerous company there assembled. His speech was an eloquent defence of his Government from the charge of over-legislation. The Legislative Council, he said, legislated only at the request of some local Government or departmental head. And how many new laws were passed yearly after all? In the last twenty-five years the number has risen from thirty to fifty-five, of which thirty only are passed by the Supreme Government. Of the whole fifty-five ten only are Imperial, all the rest being local. In those twenty-five years "our trade and our revenues have doubled; large provinces with many millions of people have been added to the Empire; a vast number of private enterprises has been undertaken, each and all requiring legislation; many departments which used to be regulated by executive rules have now to be regulated by law; the courts have multiplied; the expenditure on law and justice has expanded; the European bar has grown, and the native bar has been almost created." And yet much of the passing legislation consists in codifying or simplifying old laws. Compare our new laws too with those of England, where last year 150 public and nearly 200 private Bills were passed, for about thirty million people instead of 150 millions. All this is very true; and yet in some things we may be legislating too fast for some parts of India.

SIR R. TEMPLE was to make his financial statement early in March, and then take six months' leave to England; Mr. Strachey being named as likely to act for him during his well-earned holiday. The financial returns for the past year will probably show a surplus of about £200,000. Sir R. Temple will propose to equalise the salt duties; and it is generally believed that he will declare a large loan for public works.

THE same telegram which tells us of the Bezotie raid has an unintelligible piece of news, to the effect that Azim Khan has "occupied" two cities in Turkistan, and that Abdurrahman Khan "immediately proceeded thither." An early interview between the Viceroy and Shere Ali is "therefore considered doubtful." What does it all mean? Is another surprise in store for us, or has somebody been making a hash of the whole matter? Meanwhile we offer for solution the following telegram from England, which reached India, says the Pioneer, a few weeks ago:—"Only elected green price apricot relinquished Scott favour of Hartington."

THE death of the Nizam is announced by telegram from Bombay.

GENERAL BALFOUR's resignation was not accepted after all—a fact which we somehow forgot to mention in our last issue. He was persuaded, it seems, to reconsider his hasty withdrawal from a post in which he had made himself useful to the Government as a financial reformer. From all we hear of him it would seem that he has failed to hit the taste of either Horse Guards or War-Office. If he has gone with the latter in its plans for cutting down expenditure, he is said to have sided with the former in its attempts to make the new Department of Control a mere branch of the military executive. According to the scheme which he and Sir H. Storks are supposed to favour, the amalgamated supply departments, instead of being co-ordinate with the fighting branch of the army, and taking its orders direct from the War-Office, would be made entirely subordinate to the Horse Guards. This departure from the principle of the French Intendance, however consonant with the views of Lord Strathnairn's Committee, certainly seems at variance with the great principle of complete civil control over all military matters. Still it is always of prime importance that the general in the field should not be thwarted in his movements by any rival authority on the spot, and that any demands of his on the supply services should be attended to without delay, himself being held accountable for their expediency. It is possible however to secure this end without reducing the Control Department to a mere branch of the military organisation, and the present head of the War-Office will doubtless take good care that all needful control over military expenditure shall remain in the hands of those whom Parliament holds responsible therefor.

OUR correspondent "Miles" will see that we have given him "fairplay," fairer perhaps than he has given us. Our former remarks on the good discipline of the old Company's Europeans were provoked by a disparaging reference to them in a contemporary journal of some weight. If discipline means anything, it certainly includes good conduct and efficiency in the field, the end of all military drilling being to make soldiers fight and march well. We had no thought of disparaging the "Royals," but only of doing justice to their comrades of the Indian Army. And the best of it is that "Miles" himself comes to our aid by allowing that the men enlisted for the Company's service were, as a class, "very superior" to their rivals in the Line, and so forth. But enough of a discussion which we were not the first to raise. With regard to our correspondent's objections to reviving a local army for India, we can only say that, in the present mood of the nation, such an issue seems inevitable sooner or later. If short enlistments for three or four years become a main essential in the home army of the future, it follows that recruits for Indian and Colonial service will have to be engaged on a separate footing for a longer term of years; six or seven at the least. In view of such a likelihood it matters little whether the new local army will prove worse or better than the old one, or whether a home army cut off from ordinary foreign service would cease in effect to be an army. Certainly the Prussian and American armies were not found wanting in soldiers at a pinch; and even if India had a local army, a certain number of the men would be continually returning home to form the sinews of a reserve force in this country.

MR. BRIGHT seems to have taken up the hint lately dropped by Mr. Reverdy Johnson touching an ocean penny postage. In his speech to the Chambers of Commerce in the Freemasons'-hall last Wednesday he held that "it would be possible for the Post-office to negotiate a system by which letters should cross the ocean for a penny." The Post-office, he argued, was never intended to be a source of much revenue to the State, and the public had "a right to expect that for what they pay for their postage they should have the greatest possible convenience and advantage." If the Chambers of Commerce all over England will only take up with a will this important "question of pennies," we imagine that their success would not be a question of many years, or even months.

SEVERAL questions concerning India have been asked in Parliament during the last week. In reply to Sir S. Northcote, the Under-Secretary for India informs us that the first of the new competitive scholarships for natives of India has been won by a native of Assam, whose arrival in this country might be looked for in a few days. The Nawab of Tonk and the presence of Indian vagrants in our streets were the topics mooted by Mr. Stacpoole. He was told that the papers relating to the former would in due time be produced, and that the said vagrants were chiefly adventurers who came over "of their own accord." That is true to a certain extent, for many of these foreigners seem to prefer a life of vagrancy here to a voyage home. But might not some others tell a different tale? Is it true or is it not that troops of Indian jugglers for instance have been lured hither by promises which have not always been strictly kept? A good many native servants make a trade of voyaging to and fro, and these of course need no help. But are not others brought home by their masters and mistresses, some of them to be afterwards turned adrift without due provision made for their journey home?

ANOTHER inquirer was assured by Mr. Grant Duff that the question of a change in the seat of Indian Government has not yet come under the formal consideration of the Home Government. That, we allow, is a question which can wait. Indian viceroys practically settle it for themselves by spending half their time at Simlah; and we are glad to see that Lord Mayo will not be frightened out of his summer trip to the Hills. A much more pressing question relates to the Government of Bengal. When is that to be decided? We believe that the Indian Government has at last come round to our way of thinking by recommending a separate Council for Bengal. We can only trust that the home authorities, who are now considering the question, will improve the wisdom of the recommendation, give Bengal a full Government, and detach the outlying provinces under a Chief Commissioner. That done, the North-West would soon follow suit.

THE Friend of India will have it that disturbances have been caused in Oudh by the working of the new Rent Act, and that more are in prospect. The Indian Government on the other hand, which ought to know best, contradicts the Friend's assertions, declaring that no disturbances have been reported, nor are any expected. We can only hope that the fears of the Calcutta journalist will prove as groundless as his statement of things as they are, and that the landlords of Oudh will not use their powers of eviction unfairly.

COLONEL SYKES might well ask the Under-Secretary for India for an explanation of the great discrepancies between the Parliamentary and non-official returns of the probable muster-roll of officers of each rank in the Indian armies up to 1873. Mr. Grant Duff's explanation hardly accounts for the very different calculations that leave thirteen lieutenants on the one hand and 480 on the other. We imagine that neither is quite correct, but very much doubt the superior accuracy of the latter, if based on the yearly death-rate alone. Unless some broad scheme for clearing off the older officers be quickly adopted, the lower ranks will hardly be recruited up to their proper strength by 1873.

A LIBRARIAN IN A FIX.

A CORRESPONDENCE more strange than edifying has of late been cropping up in the pages of the Athenæum. It turns upon the Hodgson MSS., of which Mr. W. Hunter has made so good a use in his Dictionary of the Non-Aryan languages of India and High Asia. In his "Annals of Rural Bengal" Mr. Hunter had told us how in the course of his researches in the India Office Library two trunkfuls of these documents, the fruits of Mr. B. Hodgson's labours during thirty years among the Himalayan tribes, "passed into his hands." And in the Dissertation to his later work he names Mr. Hodgson himself as having "kindly placed at his disposal" the MSS. in question, which had been "made over for safe keeping to the India Office." The incident thus described has given birth to a series of letters, the first of which, signed "M. A.," appeared in the Athenæum for November 21. Its author wanted to know what Mr. Hunter meant by saying that the MSS. in question had "passed into his hands." Had they been given him or sold to him for a small sum by the India Office authorities? These and other queries bring forth a reply in the next number from the Librarian himself. Dr. Hall complains of scant courtesy paid him by Mr. Hunter in return for service done. It was he who first put him in the way of seeing and borrowing the manuscripts. "I obtained Mr. Hodgson's consent to the risk of their being lent;" but Mr. Hunter, "regardless of facts," ignores the Librarian's agency altogether. In his seeming eagerness to do so "he has issued in a combination of misstatement and équivoque." Besides making this sorry return for all the Librarian's trouble, he has begrudged Mr. Hodgson himself the acknowledgment due, almost laying himself open to the charge of taking as plunder what might else have been lawful prize.

Here was a direct issue between Dr. Hall and Mr. Hunter. The former accuses the latter of carefully ignoring—by "tasking himself to be crooked"—his obligations to one person, and of understating his vast obligations to another. Let us see how Mr. Hunter meets these charges. Writing from Calcutta in January, he owns that "my attention was directed, in the first instance, if I remember rightly, by Dr. F. Hall," to the two trunks in question. This was in answer to "M. A.'s" letter, the only one he had then seen. A correspondence between Mr. Hodgson and himself ended in his receiving the papers at Mr. Hodgson's written request, he himself giving a formal receipt for the same. In reply to Dr. Hall, he passes over that gentleman's personal grudge, and shows by quotations from his own book that he did do ample justice to Mr. Hodgson. "In some respects I look upon myself as the editor of materials collected by him rather than as the author of an original work." Such a passage is in itself a sufficient answer to one of Dr. Hall's charges. The other seems to be substantially refuted by Mr. Hunter's reference to his direct dealings with Mr. Hodgson.

But the Librarian's mishaps are only beginning. The next number of the Athenæum contains some very curious revelations, marked by a common tendency to bear hard on Dr. Hall. It turns out that the M.A. who wrote the original letter was Mr. Furnivall, and that his letter was substantially the same as one which Dr. Hall had given him for insertion in the Athenæum. The latter however chose at one moment to deny all knowledge of the letter, at another to impute the authorship of it to Dr. Goldstücker, a former candidate for the librarianship. On this gentleman's proceeding to clear himself, Dr. Hall denied that he had ever coupled his name with "M.A.'s" letter to more than one person, and spoke of the imputation as a surmise started by others, but rejected by himself. To meet this denial however, two or three witnesses at once spring up; among them Mr. Hodgson himself and a friend of his, both of whom are made to attest the incident which Dr. Hall once more disavows. In the very last number of the same journal another witness adds his testimony to that of Dr. Hall's opponents. And thus the matter stands for the present. The Librarian of the India Office denies that he ever accused a defeated rival of having written a letter whose real authorship he himself must have known—a letter which hinted serious charges against himself as Librarian. He also denies that he wrote a private letter sustaining the false accusation. On the other side several independent witnesses of good repute declare that his denials are directly in the teeth of proven facts; that he suggested the writing of a letter of whose authorship he afterwards avowed his utter ignorance, at the very time he was seeking to fix it on the shoulders of one whom he knew to have no hand therein; that he more than once repeated by word of mouth and by letter the false imputation, and then maintained that he had never said or written the things which he actually did write and say. Either a number of independent and partly unwilling witnesses have conspired to malign the Librarian of the India Office, or, to put it as mildly as possible, the Librarian is troubled with a very short memory.

VACCINATION IN INDIA.

IF the application of Dr. Jenner's great discovery made but slow progress in these islands we can hardly wonder at the hindrances offered in India to the spread of vaccination as a substitute for less certain safeguards against small-pox. It cost Jenner twenty years of patient struggle against every form of human opposition before he found a public ready to try his new treatment. Four years later, in 1802, Parliament acknowledged the nation's obligations to its new benefactor by a grant of ten thousand pounds. In that same year was the first attempt made to carry the fruits of his successful discovery into British India. After several failures to bring the vaccine matter round the Cape, it was finally landed in Bombay through successive transmissions by the way of Constantinople, Bagdad, and Bussorah. Thence the new blessing was gradually diffused throughout India. From Madras the vaccine was brought to Calcutta by successive inoculations on board ship. In 1803 more than four thousand persons were vaccinated in Bengal and the North-Western Provinces. Slowly but steadily the number of yearly vaccinations increased to 18,000 in 1806. Several natives of rank underwent the strange ordeal, and the old Emperor of Delhi himself "was induced to set the good example to his own household."*

Then came a pause in the progress of the new rival to inoculation. In spite of the ravages yearly caused by small-pox in most parts of India, the people were quite content to die or suffer cruelly under a system which had been practised among them for ages, rather than try the new-fangled process imported from a strange land. Even in England there is still a large amount of latent prejudice against vaccination, and everyone knows what an outcry was raised against Lady Mary Montague when she first sought to inoculate her countrymen according to Eastern methods. Accordingly, we are not surprised to learn that the average of persons vaccinated in Bengal and the North-West from 1827-1843 was not more than 38,295 a-year. Even now, says Dr. Goodeve, there is still "great distrust of or indifference to vaccination among the people generally." Educated natives may take kindly to the process, and energetic officers, like Mr. Cockburn at Midnapore in 1853-54, and the superintendent of vaccine in Calcutta, may win over a large number of converts to the official faith in vaccine. But the mass of the people still refuse to come forward spontaneously for the right kind of protection from disease, and until they do so the mortality from small-pox will not be sensibly diminished.

This statement refers specially to Bengal, where inoculation still reigns supreme. Even there however the number of successful vaccinations in 1866 was 164,529, or nearly 33,000 more than the year preceding. One can hardly wonder at the popular clinging to the exploded usage, if, as Dr. Goodeve admits, the returns of sickness sometimes seemed to tell against the more modern theory. The percentage of deaths however clearly tends the other way. In the North-Western Provinces the prejudice against vaccination is confined mainly to the Benares and Ajmere districts. The people of the former, says Dr. Pearson in his report for the last official year, "are wedded so closely to their own institution of inoculation, that it will take generations for vaccination to entirely supplant it." The inoculators will not give up their calling for the humble wages of a vaccinator, and most of them are too illiterate for the work of the latter. Still even in Benares the new process makes its way, however slowly. Ajmere also is improving. In the Jhansie circle parents are allowing their daughters to be vaccinated, but wait to see the results before their sons are committed to the same process. In Cawnpore there is no unwillingness to make the trial. A good many native gentlemen and nobles in the North-West, including of course the Rajah of Vizianagram, and excluding the Rajah of Benares who cleaves to the old faith, have been zealous in furthering the wishes of Government. Between them and the municipalities the cost of some sixty vaccinators is even now defrayed, and the number of these will soon be equal to the number maintained by Government. The Agra and Meerut circle shows a large increase of successful cases, and Kemaon and Gurhwal keep up their full average. From the last-named circle nearly all India draws its supply of lymph; in view of which fact a Bill forbidding all inoculation in Kemaon and Gurhwal was laid before the Indian Government last year.

Altogether, the successful cases in the North-West have reached the respectable figure of 198,317, or 36,000 over the year before. But the Punjab shows a yet higher total, the number of cases successfully treated having reached close upon 213,000 in 1866, the last year of which we have any information. In the Punjab the original dislike to vaccination, never very strong, seems to have been generally overcome. Apathy and repugnance may still be found, but the people on the whole accept their position. At one place in Jullunder crowds of natives brought their children to be examined by the superintendent. Petitions were presented from certain villages praying for a visit from the vaccinators, whom they accused of having passed them by. Two or three native doctors have been induced to vaccinate on their own account, and in Amritsar their success has been great, people readily bringing their children before them. Out of 1,651 cases thus treated in one year, 93.15 per cent. proved quite successful. One salient example sometimes works a vast deal of good. The Sirmoor Rajah had his son vaccinated, whereupon the whole tribe followed suit.

In the Central Provinces the number of yearly vaccinations has mounted from 4,767 in 1865 to 34,100 in 1867, and this within the narrow limits hitherto assigned for the process. A good many landholders have aided the operators in their efforts. European supervision seems still indispensable to ensure honest work from the native vaccinators. The popular prejudice against vaccination must have nearly died out in the Bombay presidency, for there we find 372,394 cases treated in one year, of which about two-fifths were infants under a year old, while of the whole number 71.72 per cent. were Hindoos, and 21.76 Mussulmans. About 8 per cent. of all the cases proved failures.

Madras also stands well in the vaccination returns; her large total of 270,749 showing an increase of 76,240 over the previous year. While Bombay gives the highest mean percentage of successful cases, 92.89, Madras with a percentage of 89.58 comes not far off. In the North Arcot Circle indeed, which shows the highest number of vaccinations, the proportion of successes reached 97.41 per cent. It was very nearly as high in the Madura and Madras Circles. The Tanjore, Salem, and Kistna Circles all rise above 90 per cent. Of the whole number 239,873 were Hindoos, and 28,179 were failures. Several municipalities and landholders are mentioned as having specially forwarded the efforts of the Government officers. Dr. Shortt himself spared no pains in preaching the gospel of vaccination at all times and places, and his subordinates were little behind him in their zeal. And the general result was satisfactory. Here and there however native prejudice would not be softened. Dr. Shortt condoles with one of his assistants, Mr. Ward, on the general failure of his efforts in the Cuddapah Circle. Nine talooks did he wander over, entering village after village, and leaving them all as he found them. His approach was the signal for a general stampede, now of the women and children, now of everyone who could get away. The foolish people, in addition to a blind belief in the necessity of small-pox and a wild mistrust of all preventive measures, had a notion that a tax would be levied on all who bore the vaccinator's mark. In other cases mere apathy and sluggishness kept down the total of vaccinations. Of religious prejudices few traces could be found. If the truth were known, it is the vested interests of the inoculators that breed most of the opposition to the rival process. Brahmins and Barbers are but men, and while they can safely do so, they will continue to prey on the credulity of their countrymen, stirring them up by false or extravagant reports to withstand or flee from the messengers of the new dispensation. One short way to counteract their evil influence seems to suggest itself to almost every official who writes upon the subject. Make vaccination compulsory, and all the existing hindrances to its success will speedily vanish. So long as it remains optional, it will never drive inoculation out of the field. All the labours of the most zealous staff will fail to overcome the force of old prejudices, jealousies, and traditions. A compulsory measure has been working well in Calcutta for the last four years. Why not extend its purport to other parts of the country? This is a view of the question which certainly deserves careful consideration. If it can be shown that the resistance to vaccination springs from no religious sentiment, and that without a compulsory Bill inoculation will hold its ground for ages to come, by all means let India wait no longer for a compulsory Bill.

A LOCAL OR A ROYAL ARMY FOR INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Neither the Army and Navy Gazette nor the Indian Mail take a broad and comprehensive view of Indian army organisation, as exhibited in the papers you lay before the public. To cry down the so-called Royal Army for the purpose of exalting the fame of the late East India Company's Army is only re-opening those sad feelings of jealousy and bad blood which used to exist between them, to the manifest injury of the public service; but you like fairplay no doubt.

The late East India Company's Europeans had great merit;

some of them were originally regiments of the line of the Royal Army (certainly the Bombay Fusiliers were), and the esprit de corps, as such, remained in them to the last. The Artillery and Fusilier regiments were most excellent, and rendered the most important services to the State. The class of men who enlisted for the Company's Service were very superior to those who enlisted for the ordinary regiments of the line, because their prospects in India were so very superior; and vast numbers of a superior class went to India to be away from the observations of their friends. The Artillery and the Fusiliers got the pick of these recruits. The European army of the company was very limited in numbers, and they had the advantage (which was most important) of seeing highly drilled and disciplined regiments arriving continually from England, with all the latest improvements. A local army now must be very extensive, and would not have such advantages; they would be made up of the dregs of the home population, and would have their establishments kept up by recruits only, or in the main, and would therefore become unquestionably deteriorated as a local force. You are mistaken in stating that the whole of the company's European regiments were in high order.

As to the misdeeds of the Royal troops at Ferozeshuhur and Chillianwallah, it is a pity now to refer to such transactions. No one can possibly justify such conduct in soldiers. The regiment at Chillianwallah, to which you allude, was one of the finest regiments in the service. The panic that prevailed was not an exhibition of bad discipline, but one of those sad and unaccountable affairs over which there can be no control, and there cannot be such a thing as a regiment of cowards. Besides, it is certainly not fair to cry down a whole army and its services in India for ages, by isolated transactions.

But now we come to the material consideration, which is the advisability, or otherwise, of having a local European army in India. If the Government of England, which is supreme, desires to commit suicide, it can take no more certain means than the locking-up in India, or in any of her colonies, her best officers and soldiers. India is, or ought to be, the great school for officers and soldiers of the Empire in times of peace. Where else can we make officers and soldiers? We may drill men in England and in our minor colonies, but we cannot make soldiers of them; we have the finest field in the world in India.

It must be manifest to any one who understands the subject, that if we had a home army without the advantages of foreign service, and an Indian army which could nowhere else be employed, we should have no army at all in case of European or American wars. We must not divide the interests of India and England.

We should scarcely have sufficient discretion not to risk our Empire of India, or any other part of her Majesty's dominions, by withdrawing incautiously troops from one place to support another. That need not be dreaded; a man might as well caution his right arm to take care of his left. There is a feeling of this sort abroad, and it is manifestly absurd; but still it is a reason given by some for advocating a local army in India.

—Yours, &c.,

MILES.

THE NEW VICEROY.

The Friend of India observes that, so far as the replies of a new Governor-General to addresses from public bodies may differ from those speeches to political constituents which are meant for the ear alone, Lord Mayo's statements during the past week are worthy of study. First of all we note with pleasure their imperial tone. While deluged with suggestions regarding purely local improvements, while committed [by the present stage of the country's progress to Lord Cranborne's policy of peace and public works, Lord Mayo speaks thus:—"It will be my duty firmly to maintain, in every part of the country, the complete supremacy of the Queen." Again—"I humbly pray that Providence may guide our councils, so that all our acts may serve to strengthen in India the power of our beloved Queen." We are reminded of Lord Canning's declaration when he landed at Bombay—"I undertake that the honour of Great Britain in her Eastern Empire shall be preserved without a stain." Declarations like these are the foundation of all peace and progress in India, and we cannot expect that in the future, any more than hitherto, occasions will not arise to put the temper of him who makes them to the test. Lord Mayo speaks, too, of the deep sense of responsibility under which he has undertaken the government of a country, the magnitude of which has already so startled him although he has as yet seen only its outskirts. In replying to the very enlightened suggestions made to him by the several deputations, Lord Mayo committed himself to some pledges the fulfilment of which will be exacted of him. We have no longer any fear that canals and railways will not be extended. His lordship's character and peculiar experience in Dublin convince us that every class of the community and all non-official interests will receive fair play at his hands. But his promise "to extend education" has a more pregnant meaning than he, perhaps, intended, at a time when the Bengal Government is expected to delay no longer in obeying the orders of the Government of India on that subject issued so long ago as April last. And especial importance will be attached at the present time to this remark—"To all the difficult questions connected with the tenure and improvement of land, and the burdens affecting its transfer, my constant and earnest attention will be given. It will be my duty to support any measures that will encourage the investment of capital in developing the resources of the soil, that will guarantee to the owner the complete security of his property, and ensure at the same time to the labourer just remuneration for his toil, and alleviate as far as possible the hardships that are incident to his condition." There is not a part of India, except Bombay, where questions of this nature are not pressing. From the Punjab to Assam, in the North-Western Provinces and Bengal, and in the coffee districts of Southern India, land and labour are at present the subjects of serious disputes, and the object of legislation more or less crude. At one of the earliest meetings of the Legislative Council at which Lord Mayo will be called to preside, it will be necessary for the new Governor-General to show what spirit he is of in the settlement of these delicate questions. However profound his knowledge of Irish tenures and tenant-right may be, he little knows the labyrinth on which he is now called not only to enter himself but to be a guide to others.

A GOLD CURRENCY.

The Madras Times thinks that the great objection to the introduction of a gold coinage is that, as gold is falling in price faster than silver, the gold coinage must necessarily become depreciated in value as compared with the silver coinage, which is the standard of account. But those who advance this argument seem to have lost sight of the compensating influence which the introduction of a gold coinage would carry with it. Silver holds its price in the market greatly on account of the large demand for the Indian Mint, and it is clear that to the extent to which a gold coinage supersedes the silver one will that demand be diminished and the value depreciated. This influence would to some extent tend to preserve the relative value of gold and silver coins, though we admit that the small degree in which gold is likely to supersede silver in such a country as this deprives the consideration of the force it would have in a country likely to absorb a larger proportion of gold currency. In a country in which a few rupees are to the bulk of individuals a very large sum, gold coins can never be very largely used. If we are to regard the statement we have already referred to as authentic, it would appear that Sir Charles Trevelyan's proposal to make the English sovereign current as the equivalent of ten rupees has been definitively abandoned. It is difficult indeed to see how any financier could make such a proposal. At the time it was made, as now, the sovereign was worth considerably more than ten rupees, and to expect that English merchants would send out sovereigns at a loss is absurd, while to expect that Government should supply sovereigns at a loss seems equally so. It would simply amount to selling gold under prime cost. The exact value of the sovereign as so much gold purchased by so much silver is, we believe, ten rupees and six annas. When the exchange rises above or falls below that standard, the fact simply shows that gold is plentiful or scarce as compared with the demand. So long as this disparity exists, it is useless to talk of making the sovereign circulate as the equivalent of ten rupees. There are two ways by which ten rupees might be forced up to the value of one sovereign—that is, either by increasing the actual value of the rupee, or by giving it a fictitious value by restricting the amount of coinage. The latter is the plan by which twenty English shillings are supposed to make a pound, and no doubt it would be possible to make the present rupee so scarce as to bear a fictitious value as compared with gold coins. But all outrages on the laws of fair barter are to be deprecated, as bringing in their train evils that may not for the moment be seen, but which are pretty sure to make themselves felt. The relation between silver and gold coin, especially where the silver coin is the standard of account, should be that of perfect equality in point of intrinsic value, leaving no margin of profit to the dealer; and we shall therefore be glad to hear that our five, ten, and fifteen rupee pieces are to be worth exactly those sums respectively.

THE OUDH RENT ACT.

The Englishman holds that the compromise effected by the Oudh Rent Act has been as just to both sides as it is in the nature of a compromise to be. It would be vain to expect all the talookdars to be perfectly satisfied, but they have expressed their concurrence both by their official representative in the Council and by the recognised mouthpieces elected by themselves. It would be unwise to predict the ultimate effects of the Act, for it came into operation only in July, 1868; most of its provisions, however, had been in force for some time previously, so that in point of fact we have now more than a year's experience to judge from, and during this period it has undeniably worked well. We are not aware whether any official opinion has yet been expressed, but we know that this is the view taken by the men on the spot best able to judge, and it is currently reported in Oudh that both the Chief Commissioner and Financial Commissioner agree on the point. The under-proprietors to whom we have thus done tardy justice constitute the backbone of the province, and amount according to Sir Charles Wingfield to twenty per cent. of the whole population. It would be too much to expect that Asiatics should understand the scruples that have cost us so much trouble in procuring a recognition of their rights, but the least intelligent of them will feel the result of our efforts. We trust that they will gradually grow stronger and stronger upon the basis now afforded. They owe all that they have to the British Legislature, and are bound by every tie of self-interest, honour, and gratitude to loyalty to the British Crown. They have hitherto been accustomed to enforce their rights by taking the law in their own hands, and cases of forcible trespass and breaches of the peace will doubtless continue common for many years. This has always been the case when a province has newly passed over to us from native rule; and we should not forget that, in the peaceful Lower Valley club-law was a recognised form of agrestis justitia twenty years since, and that half a century ago Leyden, poet and scholar and friend of Sir Walter Scott, spent the few months during which he was Magistrate of Nuddea "bush fighting in the jungles." Act X. of 1859, with all its faults, has put an end to this state of things, and Sir John Lawrence's Rent-law will probably effect the same reform in Oudh. Of course there must, in the first place, be a vast mass of litigation, for a whole population has to learn, by bringing their individual cases to issue, what rights the new law confers. The Oudh peasantry will be none the less valuable as subjects if they can be got to make an habitual resort to our Courts.

PENSIONS.—The Government of India have decided that the pensions granted on abolition of office (before the full period qualifying for a good service pension had been completed) cannot be drawn in addition to the salary of an office to which the pensioner might be subsequently appointed.

THE RAID OF THE LOSHAIS INTO CACHAR.—The following telegram has been received by the Secretary to the Government of Bengal:—"CACHAR, Jan. 28.—I at first thought that the attacks on Nowarbund and Monairkhal were made by one party from Sukpillall's villages. My best scout, who has been a long way on the tracks of the Nowarbund party, says that they were Sukpillall's people, and returned the way they came, and all my Kookies say that Monairkhal was attacked by another party from Nonpillall's villages. The Kheddah scouts have not yet returned. Kanahie Sing and the Muniporees did not appear in the attack on Monairkhal, but certainly were near at the time. Some Hindoostanees, thought to be remnants of the old 34th Regiment, but more probably runaway coolies, were with both parties. The Sylhet outrages were committed by Sukpillall; the attacks on villages in Munipore last October were by Nonpillall. Kemple has heard that Nonpillall, the most powerful Loshai chief, is mixed up in the present matter. I do not think so. His villages are near the Burmah frontier, and he refused to join in the attack on Munipore."

SIR JOHN LAWRENCE.—The Calcutta correspondent of the Pioneer gives one or two gossip items regarding the departure of Sir John Lawrence from Calcutta, which may interest our readers. Many of them know well "the other Dick":—"The very last I saw of Sir John, he was sitting cross-legged on a table upon the deck of the Sir William Peel as she paddled out into the stream, utterly oblivious of 'the dignities' of course. Upon one side of him was Mr. Strachey, upon the other his brother 'Dick'; and perched upon the paddle-box was—longo intervallo—the other 'Dick'—Dick Kennedy, looking absolutely sentimental. I think we shall see him [Dick Kennedy] again within a year, and it might be as an A.D.C. once more. A true-hearted genial fellow such as he may leave his friends much longer and return to find 'their name is legion' still. Letters have been received from the Sandheads. They all tell us that Sir John was greatly moved by the warmth and cordiality with which he was greeted ere departure, and that even in so short a time he had rallied considerably. The cares of office had told, no doubt, and although happily he is said by his physician to be entirely free from organic disease, I believe that another year as Viceroy would have added one more victim to the list of great men who have succumbed beneath its toils. Once indeed I put it to him whether there was any prospect of his remaining in India another year. 'In the first place,' he answered, in his usual blunt manner, 'they haven't asked me, and should they, I certainly would not, unless a serious war broke out, or some calamity overtook the country, to make my presence desirable. I have my family at home, and the responsibility a Viceroy has to bear is far too heavy to make a man lengthen the term from choice.' Best as it is. Contrary to the generally accepted belief, Sir John Lawrence leaves India almost a poor man, and this I state upon authority undoubted, munificent private charities being among the causes that have sapped a splendid income."

THE LATE SIR HERBERT EDWARDES.

The Calcutta Englishman has an excellent memoir of Sir H. Edwardes, from which we extract the following particulars "not generally known" in this country:—

Nearly thirty years have passed by since Herbert Edwardes was posted to the 1st European Light Infantry, as the present 101st Fusiliers was then termed. He speedily mastered his drill and all the details of regimental duty, and having mastered these, he began to sigh for fresh occupations. This was for a time afforded by the study of the language; but the language conquered, he had then to explore fresh fields of action; reading did not altogether satisfy the cravings of his vigorous and active intellect. There was, for his regiment, no prospect of war, and staff employment was far more difficult to obtain than in the present day. At last the idea seized upon him that he would write. In those days there was only a monthly overland communication with England, and that communication had but just superseded the wary times of ship letters. The happy thought struck Edwardes that he might do a public service by describing in a series of letters to England, published in one of the newspapers, the events of the preceding month. This happy thought was executed in the happiest manner. In letters addressed by Brahmince Bull to his loving cousin, John Bull, Edwardes poured forth a masterly account of all the events of the period, giving prominence to the action of Government, and not sparing, what he believed to be, its errors. The letters speedily attracted notice and commendation from all sides. Their talent, their absolute freedom from scurrility, the solidity and strength of the argument on all matters touched upon, were universally admitted, and their value acknowledged by none more freely than men in high positions. There are some now in India who may recollect the masterly criticism of the Maharajpore campaign given by Brahmince Bull. In the letters containing that criticism the tactics of the Commander-in-Chief were not spared, but so little did it rankle in the heart of Sir Hugh Gough, that when, some twenty months later, he found Herbert Edwardes' regiment under his command in front of the Sikh position on the Sutlej, he offered him a position on his personal staff. From that moment the rise of Herbert Edwardes was rapid. His talents had been noted by others than Sir Hugh Gough, and when, after the occupation of Lahore in 1846, it was determined to leave an English resident, aided by a few politicals, in that city, the keen-sighted Henry Lawrence selected for one of those politicals the clever writer who had already made his own way to the position of aide-de-camp.

From the period that Herbert Edwardes was appointed to the staff the letters of Brahmince Bull ceased, and, we believe, from that time he did not write anything to which he did not attach his name. He threw himself with all the ardour of his nature into his new duties, and speedily convinced his employers that it was quite possible for a man of letters to be also a man of action. He had entered into political employ in 1846. Less than two years afterwards the opportunity which is generally offered to all men once in their lifetime came to Herbert Edwardes. He clutched eagerly at it, and it made him. We allude naturally to the uprising of the Sikh nation in 1848.

THE RAINFALL OF INDIA.

The fall of rain over the Continent of Hindostan is so extremely eccentric that it is doubtful if it is more varied in any other quarter of the globe. From the total absence or meagre showers of Scinde to the tremendous downpour of many feet in other localities, there is a marked difference in almost every district. In Kurrachee and other parts of Scinde and Beloochistan years may pass without a drop, or at the most a few light showers, while in parts of Bengal it is a common occurrence to see a heavy fall estimated by feet rather than inches, and where, in less than a week, just double the average rainfall of Bombay has visited certain spots. To an inhabitant of Guzerat, where the fall seldom exceeds thirty inches in the year, that amount to pour down in twenty-four hours, and to continue at the same rate for five days in succession would appear almost incredible; yet it is a well-known occurrence at Sylhet, in Eastern Bengal, and where statistics are duly noted and carefully preserved year by year. This extraordinary place seems destined to monopolise a great portion of the heavy clouds that rise from the Bay of Bengal, and float over from the Deccan, and by its altitude (about 2,000 feet) it checks the heaviest masses, and by stopping their further progress, compels them to discharge their contents over the limited area exposed. The only way to explain the cause of the annual deluge in this district, and which has been known to exceed 500 inches, is the following, which will be better understood by a reference to a map of India. The prevailing winds (S.W.) bring over the large bodies of vapour which arise from the Bay, and the greater part of the southern portions of the continent; these come rolling up, gathering as they advance, and forced over towards Burmah, which however they do not reach, being turned off and sent on due north by the range of mountains (the Blue Mountains and others) which separate Burmah from Arracan. Sweeping on, and passing over the low-lying ranges of Chittagong and Independent Tipperah, they proceed undisturbed till they are suddenly brought to a standstill by the Cherrapoonjee and the Jynteah Hills, of which Sylhet forms the chief place of note. As the masses are too heavy to rise, they become condensed where they remain, and the rain descends literally in torrents. Fortunately for the people there it is a hilly district, and an hour after a fall of a few inches there is scarcely a trace of it. The inhabitants take advantage of the sudden rise in the hill streams to load and send off their boats, with various commodities, so as to gain the assistance of the locomotive power of the water, which they are obliged to avail themselves of while it lasts, as it is soon expended, and the excitement that takes place on the approach of floods is universal. As a proof that Sylhet takes more rain than its share, it is remarked that the country north of the Cherrapoonjee range gets but a very scanty allowance, averaging 60 inches. The lighter and consequently higher clouds escaping the range are speeded on to water the portions of India to the north and east.

The fall in Western India, again, is somewhat similar. Where the clouds travel up along the Western Ghats the difference in the fall in the Canara and Concan districts and the country to the east of the ghats is perceptible; for instance, at Vingorla the fall averages 100 inches, and at Sholapore it is only about 20; or Rutnagherry is also about 100 inches, while the fall at Poona barely averages more than 15, while at Mahabaleshwar and other points where the clouds are checked the fall exceeds 300 inches. But as there is nothing to wholly cause a decided stoppage in the passage of the clouds up along the west coast, similar to the right angle range of Cherrapoonjee, the amount of rain during the year at the outside can only be estimated as half or three-fourths that of Sylhet. It is a well-known fact that hills attract clouds quite as much as trees, if not more. In the case noted above the ranges do not interfere so much in the course of their journey as to direct it afterwards, but it is amusing sometimes to watch the direction a rain-cloud will take in a hilly country, as after passing steadily along a range which would ultimately bring it to plain lands, on arriving at the extremity of the hill it will turn back and resume its course among the mountains, most probably influenced by currents of air, but equally attracted by the trees and hills.

It is very remarkable that although the Ganges and Berhampooter are hourly discharging millions of tons of water into the Bay of Bengal for five months during the year there is scarcely the slightest perceptible difference in the sea level. We read of high tides in Calcutta during the rains, but these are caused not by an extra influx of tidal water but by the discharge from inland being checked. In Calcutta during the spring flood tides in the rainy months the flood tide makes as usual, but there still continues the discharge from up-country, which must be allowed exit. The consequence is that being of equal force with the flood tide, it strives to overcome it, and as there are two sources pouring into the Hooghly, viz., the flood tide, and the inland discharge, it is natural that a rise must ensue, and the result is, that frequently during a very high inundation many parts of the suburbs of Calcutta have much more water in them than is desirable. But this is entirely a local feature, and is not noticed along the coast line, where the tidal rise and fall keeps pretty regular from one year's end to the other, excepting, of course, the difference that always exists between spring and neap tides. On the western coast in like manner there are the Indus, the Nerbudda, and the Taptee. These immense rivers, pouring out the tremendous volume of water they do, apparently do not influence the ordinary sea level in the least. When one considers the aspect of the continent inland during the rainy season, where for miles on either side of every one of the five large rivers mentioned above the country is like a sea, and that this water is running down towards the ocean at the rate of from six to eight miles an hour, the admirable arrangement whereby there is such a uniform distribution of water cannot fail to be evident to the most careless observer. It is not only the low lying lands near the sea-coast that are flooded. The country bordering these rivers, 800 to 1,000 miles from their mouth, and from 1,000 to 1,200 feet above the level of the sea, is as much flooded as districts that are much nearer the ocean. During the months of July and August the current in these vast rivers is very powerful. The stream of the Berhampooter is full of drift timber and large trees that have fallen in from banks where the forest lines the sides. This drift makes the navigation extremely precarious, and the steamers which do not proceed at night frequently drag their anchors, owing to an accumulation of floating logs, &c. As the steam vessels tow barges which are secured alongside, there is space enough between the two to catch the drift-wood, which is kept from floating past by the paddle-wheels. One instance is on record where such an accumulation of this drift-wood settled between a steamer and cargo boat, during a rush which came down, in a few hours, that a considerable time elapsed before it could be cleared; the drift was many feet thick, and its area so extensive that it soon took charge of the vessels, which were forced down the stream many miles before the mass of timber was got rid of. The steamer's anchors were perfectly useless; she had two down, but they dragged as if they had been mere kedges; as the river dries up these trees and logs ground here and there, and remain more or less in and out of the water, and form a constant dread to navigators, more especially on the Mississippi, where they are locally known as snags and sawyers. The first point down stream, and are not very dangerous; but the "sawyers" show an ugly stump directed up the course of the river, and are extremely awkward to vessels coming down at twenty miles an hour. Snags may merely knock a hole in the bottom of a vessel, but "sawyers," as the name implies, are very liable to rip up a steamer for a distance of many feet, and as they are often five or six feet under water it is not always an easy matter to detect them.—Times of India.

STATION TALK.

CALCUTTA.—Lord Mayo must have had a hard time of it, for besides the deputations and dinners I have already told you of, and the thousand and one cares that must crowd in upon a new Viceroy, he contrives to visit one or other of our public institutions every day, and to attend many of the public entertainments into the bargain. His Excellency has visited Chitpore, and some of the "slums," too, but very much nearer than that he might have seen enough to convert the slightest dreaming towards summering in Simla into inflexible resolve. Only just cross Alipore-bridge, and see by the very roadside stagnant green ponds, the depository of unutterable filth and the cradle of a thousand pestilencies; and such abound in the suburbs. How Calcutta remains as healthy as it does is a marvel. Only that magnificent maidan between the river-side and Chowringhee, swept by the life-giving breezes from the sea, stands between the ditchers and doom. Poor devils, their cold weather may be called over! A foreigner once said of a London summer, "In fine weather looking up a chimney, in foul weather looking down it." And of the mornings here, you may say—in winter choked with fog, in summer steamed in a vapour bath, the prey of the mosquitoes perennially. According to all theory, the ditchers ought to die very much sooner than they do; but some men live in spite of knowledge. Lord Mayo, it was at first thought, might leave Calcutta early in the spring, and see something of the North-West and Punjab on his way to the Hills, but that seems unlikely now, and it is probable that the move will not be made till the beginning of April. The presumption is that, wherever the Viceroy went, a durbar would have to be held, and as the visit of the Queen's son to India next winter will no doubt be considered a necessary occasion for the display of no little pomp and grandeur, there will be a gain in every direction if public ceremonies are delayed as much as possible till then. No one envies Colonel Blanc his office of "bear leader" to our royal scapegrace; and should he succeed in getting the young gentleman out of the country at the end of his tour with a very different reputation to the one he left behind him in Australia, he will do something for our credit with the natives and earn the gratitude of Englishmen. Gallantry among the fair and discriminating inebriety have been stamped as princely vices; but personal avarice and a disregard of small obligations are mostly ascribed to men of a very different stamp. Alas! it is quite true when an Australian speaks of Prince Alfred, it is with contempt; there is yet time for a change perhaps. There are signs abroad that, in every outward circumstance of Imperial power, the viceregal dignity is to be thoroughly upheld once more. Lord Mayo goes to the opera in state on Tuesday next, and will visit the theatre, also in state, probably next week. There is a generally accepted rumour that this change in the aspect of affairs comes of the expressed wish of Queen, Victoria herself, to whom the oft-repeated comments upon a lack of display in the surroundings of her vice-royalty here, in recent times, were probably not unknown. Apart from that, however, such no doubt would have been the natural bent of Lord and Lady Mayo, who as regards these things, are "to the manner born;" and hardly could the starting of a new régime have devolved upon a man more aided by natural gifts of manner and temperament. Our Viceroy has hitherto, of course, had but very little opportunity of displaying the more solid requirements of his office. Yet even Calcutta is pleased with him, and never did ruler garner up a larger store of popularity in so short a time. Sir John, with all his real goodness, was, on the whole, "a hard man;" but when men retire from an interview with Lord Mayo, they are permeated with the benignity of his mien, and feel pleased in the belief that a measure of it must be due to themselves. "Elderly ladies" may look up, for they have been dedicated to the care of the aides-de-camp by a special ukase. These functionaries' duties in the social sphere, as laid down by the latest ruling, will hardly prove a sinecure. A rigid scrutiny of the Government-house lists may, it is said, be expected to follow.—Pioneer Correspondent.

HYDERABAD, Jan. 29.—On Wednesday evening last the Residency House and grounds were beautifully illuminated on the occasion of our most popular resident, Mr. Saunders, entertaining a distinguished circle of guests at a banquet to meet his late Military Secretary, General Stephen Charles Briggs, who on Monday last resigned the seals of office to his successor, Major Hastings Fraser. The Nawab Mookhtear ool Moolk, Sir Salar Jung Bahadur, K.C.S.I., and others of the native aristocracy, were present, and aided by their picturesque costumes to enliven the scene. On the arrival of his Excellency, many of the ladies, strangers to the new and varied fashions of Hyderabad, met Sir Salar Jung on the great balcony of the Residency, when they were greeted by the native gentlemen of all ranks, who one and all bent courteously to the bevy of beauties present, saluting them individually as they passed. The Minister himself, dressed in a plain velvet coat, and wearing the insignia of his exalted title, passed into the beautifully lit apartments of Government-house. A general order had been issued on the part of the Resident, subjoining an official despatch from the Government of India, complimenting General Briggs, and expressing entire and unqualified approbation at the manner in which the late Military Secretary had always executed the arduous and important duties pertaining to the many situations he has filled during a long period of service at Hyderabad. This marked encomium on the eminent ability of the General, the Resident proceeded to say, had been shared by his predecessor in office; and the whole of the officers of the Hyderabad cantonment subscribe to this estimate of General Briggs. It is very gratifying to the community in which General Briggs has so long resided, to find that superior authority has thus recognised the zeal and meritorious services of an excellent public servant, whose correct judgment throughout many delicate and important transactions, requiring an extensive acquaintance with the political department of this Residency, is fully acknowledged. This combined exercise of attainments enabled General Briggs to offer advice on many points regarding the views and habits of the Nizam's Durbar, which has more than once proved of great benefit to our interest at this Court.

UMRITSUR, Jan. 27.—The long-looked and most anxiously-hoped-for rain has come at last. Clouds had been hanging about some days, the wind had been shifting from various directions, and the temperature had been rising for some days past. Still we had been so frequently deceived, or rather disappointed, that we placed but little faith in those symptoms. I am, therefore, all the more delighted to have to inform you that it began really to rain with a will, comparatively at least for the season, about ten last night, continued off and on nearly the whole night, and almost continuously since the morning. I should say that close upon two inches have fallen up to this present time, while there is every prospect of more coming down. We have indeed reason to be truly thankful for the relief thus afforded in our great need. The effect will be most beneficial to the country. Grass will now be abundant, the cattle threatened with starvation will be amply supplied, and I entertain very little doubt that the prices of grain will recede, as the promise of an abundant harvest from the lands that have been sown is strengthened by the present so far favourable state of affairs. If there were other matters of more or less interest to dwell on, I should postpone their consideration, the fall of rain being deserving of a Gazette all to itself.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

EMBEZZLEMENT.—Mr. Shouldham, head clerk of the District Court, Delhi, has been arrested on a charge of embezzling Rs. 2,000.

MR. H. LEE SMITH, chief engineer of the Lahore and Peshawur Railway, arrived at Allahabad on the 1st February by train from Jubbulpore.

MYSORE.—The Government has sanctioned the payment, from the Mysore State revenues, of Rs. 1,55,526 yearly in stipends, to the members of the late Maharajah's family and other dependants.

CROPS IN OUDH.—The last report on the state of the crops in Oudh, received by the Government of India from the Chief Commissioner, states that an average outturn may be anticipated.

SIMLA BANK.—The Simla Bank has declared its usual dividend, at the rate of 12 per cent per annum, for the half-year ending 31st Dec., 1868.

LORD MAYO'S STUD.—A Calcutta correspondent of the Jubbulpore Chronicle asserts that Lord Mayo has brought out with him about twenty-five blood-horses, some of them belonging to the Turf.

CHARGE OF EMBEZZLEMENT.—Mr. Von Hafen, late Assistant Agent of the Punjab Railway, under Colonel Elphinstone, has, says the Lahore paper, been arrested on a charge of embezzlement.

UNCOVENANTED SERVICE.—The grant of privilege leave to uncovenanted officers will in future, says the Pioneer, be regulated according to the Furlough Rules of 1868 for the Covenanted Civil Service.

MR. COOPER AGAIN.—We learn from the China papers that Mr. T. T. Cooper, who attempted to reach India via Thibet, has proceeded to Calcutta, whence he intends trying to cross to China. His friends have presented him with a well-deserved testimonial.

OFFICIAL.—Captain Stansfeld, Private Secretary to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, is, according to the Pioneer, to act in the Military Department of the Government of India for Colonel Bacon, who is going to England on furlough.

FALSE POINT.—In connection with the scheme for giving effect to the suggestions of the Orissa Famine Commission for the development of False Point as a port, arrangements have been made with the British India Steam Navigation Company (Limited), experimentally for four months, for a regular monthly steam communication between Calcutta and False Point, the first trip commencing from the 26th inst.—Englishman.

MINTS OF CALCUTTA AND BOMBAY.—The following shows the value of the silver coined and examined in the mints of Calcutta and Bombay, in December, 1868:—Calcutta, Rs. 3,46,258; and Bombay, Rs. 5,03,361.

APPOINTMENT.—Mr. Paul Whalley, C.S., Assistant Secretary to the Government of the North-Western Provinces, is, it is said, to be appointed an under secretary to the Government of India, in the Home Department.

GOOD SERVICE PENSION.—On the recommendation of the Government of India, her Majesty's Government has conferred a good service pension on Colonel W. G. Woods, Madras Staff Corps, who was attached to the Adjutant-General's Department at Madras for many years.

ACCIDENT TO MR. R. EGERTON.—We regret to hear of an accident to Mr. Robert Egerton, the Financial Commissioner. As this gentleman was going to mount his horse, he fell, and dislocated his leg. We fear that the injury he has received is sufficiently severe to confine him to his room for a few weeks.

LORD MAYO'S FIRST LEVEE.—Earl Mayo's first levee as Viceroy and Governor-General, held on Wednesday, the 27th Jan., is said to have been the most numerously attended that has been seen for some years. The gentlemen present occupied nearly an hour and a-half in filing past his Excellency.

MILITARY.—General Rumour—one of the most troublesome of all the Generals we know—has given the military command at Jhelum to Colonel Sept. Becher, whose distinguished services during and since the rebellion must be in the memory of most of our readers! May we add the hacknied phrase, "a better selection could not have been made?"—Mofussilite.

LORD MAYO AT THE SALT LAKES.—On Wednesday morning, Jan. 27, his Excellency Earl Mayo paid a visit to the municipal reclamations at the Salt Lakes. His Excellency was attended during his visit by Mr. Stuart Hogg, Chairman of the municipality, and Mr. W. Clarke, Chief Engineer. His lordship also inspected the main sewer, the outfall works, &c., and manifested the greatest interest in the great works which are being carried out by the town.—Englishman.

SUSPENSION OF OCTROI DUTIES.—In accordance with orders issued by the Government of India, the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces has directed the suspension until further orders of the levy of octroi duties on grain in Moradabad, Chundowsee, Dhuowra, Bijour, Nugeena, Nujeebabad, Dhampore, Chandpore, Saharunpore, and Deobund. The Lieutenant-Governor has also intimated that he will be prepared at any time to receive applications from any other municipalities in which the price of grain may rise so high as to render its exemption from duty expedient.

PROPERTY OF MARRIED WOMEN.—The High Court of Calcutta have appointed the following gentlemen to be commissioners in England to take the acknowledgments, under Act XXXI. of 1854, or any other law now in force, or which may hereafter be in force in India, of married women in respect of property in India:—Mr. Joseph Spencer Judge, 44, Parliament-street, Westminster; Mr. John Nesbitt Malleson, Austinfriars, London; Mr. Alfred Atkinson Pollock, Lincoln's-inn-Fields, London; Mr. Edward Frederick Burton, of the firm of Chilton, Burton, Yeates, and Hart, of Chancery-lane, London; Mr. Charles Wilkin, 10, Tokenhouse-yard, London.

TIMELY RAINFALL.—A letter from Boolundshuhur, dated the 29th, mentions that heavy rain has fallen there for the last two days day and night, so that the roads and country are completely soaked. The above is good news, as it proves that the recent rain has been general. The welcome showers we were blest with on Wednesday night have completed the good commenced by the gentle rain of Sunday and Monday. The country is already looking fresh and green, and the trees are washed so clean that they seem to have put forth their leaves afresh, instead of being about to drop the old ones. The change is quite delightful, and most beneficial.—Mofussilite, Jan. 30.

FIELD TELEGRAPHY.—During the course of last month the Government of India in Council took up and sanctioned, on the strong recommendation of the Director-general of Telegraphs in India, a project of that functionary's for the promotion and maintenance in each Presidency of complete military field telegraph establishments. All that is to be done at present, however, is to be of an experimental character, and in this spirit it has been determined that a complete company of Sappers in the Bengal Presidency shall be employed each cold weather on the extension of any line of telegraph which may be in progress, as the Director-General may desire. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, without whose very decided approbation we may feel assured a measure of the above kind would not have been sanctioned, is also, with the concurrence of the Government of India, about to take steps, in communication with the Director-General, for the gradual instruction of European officers and soldiers in telegraphy. The rank and file of the army, at any rate, have no ground for complaining that Sir William Mansfield is not disposed to give the capable and well-conducted soldier a chance of rising in the world. And the Military Member of Council, and the Military Department, are every whit as well inclined as the Commander-in-Chief to move in the same direction.—Indian Daily News.

SIR D. MACLEOD'S LEVEE.—There was a levée held at the Lawrence-hall, Lahore, on the 26th January, for all European officials, followed by a durbar for the native gentry at the Montgomery-hall. Next in prominence to his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, who seemed in more robust health than when he left on his trip to Calcutta, were General Rainier and his Serene Highness Prince Frederick of Schleswig-Holstein-Augustenburg. This nobleman, whose amiability has made him many friends in that province, has just returned from a scientific tour in Kashmir and along the frontier, en route, says Indian Public Opinion, to Bombay, for which he was to leave in a few days.

THE DELHI BANK v. GENERAL INNES AND OTHERS.—In the case of the Delhi Bank v. General P. Innes, Sir Donald Macleod and Major Innes, the undisputed portions of the claim have, we learn from the Delhi Gazette, been decreed, and the rest of the claim dismissed. The main issue related to the laches of the bank in respect of a sum of about one lakh of rupees, as to which sum Major Innes claimed to be discharged. Sir Donald Macleod with characteristic chivalry thought that as he, as Lieutenant-Governor, might perhaps have prevented the misappropriation of the money, it would be ungenerous for him to raise the plea on his own behalf, and accordingly Mr. Jardine, defendant's counsel, pleaded it on behalf of Major Innes only. The Court held that Major Innes is as much discharged as if he had paid the sum in question to the plaintiffs.

TRADES' DINNER AT CALCUTTA.—The Trades' Dinner at Calcutta on Wednesday, the 27th January, was, in the opinion of the Indian Daily News, in every respect a success. The arrangements were excellent, the speeches up to the mark, and the guests numerous. Among the latter were Sir William Mansfield, Sir Richard Temple, Mr. Justice Norman, Mr. Strachey, Mr. Justice Hobhouse, Dr. Fayer, Mr. Peterson, and others. The toast list was very long, and it was nearly one before all was over. The Commander-in-Chief replied for the Army, Sir Richard Temple for the Councils, Mr. Strachey for the Civil Service, Dr. Fayer for the Medical Service, Mr. Rome for the commercial interests, Mr. Justice Hobhouse for the guests, Mr. Justice Norman and Mr. Peterson for the Bench and Bar, and Mr. Parker for the Press.

CIVIL SERVICE MEETING.—The meeting of the members of the Civil Service Annuity and Pension Fund was held yesterday afternoon. The scheme of the managers was put to the vote and negatived by a large majority:—Nocs, 208; Ayes, 112; majority against the scheme, 96. The meeting then, we are glad to see, adopted the suggestion thrown out in our article on Thursday last. On the motion of the Hon. Ashley Eden, the following gentlemen were nominated a committee to go into the whole subject:—Messrs. W. S. Seton-Karr, E. C. Bayley, C. B. Hobhouse, E. F. Harrison, A. M. Monteath, G. H. M. Batten, F. B. Peacock, H. Bell, A. Smith, C. E. R. Girdlestone, E. J. Barton, W. M. Souttar, H. S. Beadon, and T. C. Plowden. The instructions given the committee amounted practically to a recommendation to reconsider the whole question.—Englishman, Jan. 30.

CIVIL SERVICE PENSION FUNDS.—The Calcutta newspapers have been furnished with a paper giving in detail the scheme of Mr. E. C. Bayley with regard to the Civil Service Pension Funds. Mr. Bayley's scheme is:—1. Fixed pension of £500 to all after 25 years' service, and fixed sick pension of £100 after five, of £200 after 10, of £300 after 15, and £400 after 20 years' service. 2. An additional graduated pension of 1/180 of the average of five years' salary of each year of service up to a maximum of £500 in all cases whether of full service or retirement on sick pension. 3. Retention of the fund and an annuity of £400, but with cessation of payment after full value is paid up and with repayment of subscriptions of deceased subscribers to heirs, and with annuities to subscribers retiring on invalid pensions. No lapses except of subscriptions of dismissed subscribers.

THE FRONTIER TRIBES.—“We were taken to task,” writes the Delhi Gazette, “albeit in a very feeble manner, for publishing the circumstance of another raid into British territory, after the conclusion of the glorious, though bloodless campaign in Hazara (Lord Napier has made such expeditions somewhat popular), yet the fact remains a fact notwithstanding. We now learn two other facts, apparently originating from good authority—one, that Sir John Lawrence, whatever opinion he may have expressed in public, has privately expressed himself to the effect that he is much disgusted with the abrupt, unsatisfactory and fruitless conclusion to the advance from Hazara; the other, that the Hussunzais and other Zais will not even now allow line to be prepared in our own territory in Agrore for the erection of the obnoxious Thanah. They have politely informed the civil authorities that they will attack any people employed in the preparation of limekilns there. Yet we have been told in very inflated phrases that the frontier tribes have been cowed.”

CASHMERE.—His Highness the Maharajah of Cashmere has addressed the following letter to his vakeel in attendance on the Punjab Government, respecting the export of grain from Cashmere:—“Your petition informing me, at the request of the Secretary to the Government of the Punjab, that it had been brought to the notice of his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, that the corn-dealers in Cashmere had been prohibited from exporting grain to the British territories, has reached me. I find that it is true that some of my officials at Punch did begin to prevent corn-dealers from exporting grain, but as soon as the matter became known to Diwan Kirpa Ram, he brought it to notice, urging that the practice was at once impolitic and unjust; that to prevent the exportation of grain from localities where it is abundant to localities where it is scarce would not only be an act of selfishness, but would expose the corn-dealers of our own country to loss, who would thus be deprived of a legitimate source of gain. I therefore at once issued orders to my officials prohibiting them from interference in the course of trade. Accordingly, the trade is now free, and the people are exporting grain to the British territory. A second order has now been issued to the effect that the people are at liberty to export grain whithersoever they please. You should communicate the purport of this purwanah to the Secretary to the Punjab Government.”

DEATH OF CAPT. TISDALL.—The death is announced at Secunderabad, on Jan. 23, from fever and dysentery, of Capt. C. A. Tisdall, 18th Hussars.

A GOLD CURRENCY.—We are glad to learn that some steps are being taken towards the introduction of a gold currency in India. Orders have been issued to the mint-masters to indent on England for dies of the value of rupees five, ten, and fifteen gold pieces.

TRAVANCORE.—According to a Madras paper, it was definitely settled that Mr. Newill, the Resident at Travancore, was to vacate his appointment at the beginning of February, and embark from Cochin for Bombay on his return to England.

TROOPS FOR ENGLAND.—The ship Renown has been taken up for the conveyance of troops to England, and will leave about the 15th February. Captain Surplice and Lieut. Erskine, both of the 2nd Battalion 24th Foot, have been detailed for duty with these troops.

HYDERABAD SUBSIDIARY FORCE.—Major Thomas, R.A., Commissary of Ordnance of the Hyderabad Subsidiary Force, intends, says the Madras Athenæum, going home next month on two years' leave, under the regulations of 1868. He will be succeeded, it is said, by Major Dangerfield, R.A., at present Commissary of Ordnance at Nagpore.

THE SANITARY COMMISSIONER.—Dr. Ranking recently visited Kamptee on duty, and according to the local journal has condemned the whole of the barracks for European troops at that station—those in process of construction as well as those already built—and has suggested that new ones should be erected on the rising ground on the site of the present racecourse.

ATTEMPTED MURDER ON THE HIGH SEAS.—As the Cambalu was getting under way on the afternoon of Wednesday last, a sailor (who had been brought on board in charge of two peons from the prison) went behind the chief officer and pushed him overboard, and immediately jumped overboard himself and tried to swim ashore. The Captain threw a line and succeeded in saving his officer, who was unable to swim. He was a long time before he came to his senses. A boat was lowered in chase of the would-be murderer; he was caught and taken on board and put in irons; the ship then proceeded to Rangoon.—Madras Athenæum, Jan. 29.

EUROPEAN PERVERTS TO MAHOMEDANISM.—We have heard with much regret that four Europeans have associated themselves with one of the Mahomedan sects in Madras, and have taken up their abode in one of the principal Mosques with the avowed intention of apostatising from the Christian faith. Their heads have been shaven, and they have assumed the long garb worn by neophytes under instruction, preparatory to submitting to the painful rite necessary to constitute them followers of the Prophet. Their example, it is said, will soon be followed by some others, and all will then be sent on a pilgrimage to Mecca, after being paraded with much pomp and ceremony about the streets of Madras.

A BURLESQUE INTERRUPTED.—The members of the Madras Dramatic Society, who met at the College-hall on Thursday evening as performers or spectators, had excitement provided for them upon which they had not reckoned. The time had arrived in the performance of the burlesque when Vilkins and his Dinah, and the suitor "so gallant and gay," should all die to the accompaniment of ghostly music, and when they were still in the agonies, the blue light powder exploded and set fire to one of the wings. The dying people quickly recovered their activity, and by the timely application of buckets of water the fire was extinguished before much damage had been done. This accomplished, the characters resumed their places according to the stage directions, and died comfortably.

MEER AKBAR ALEE KHAN BAHADOOR.—We lately had occasion to congratulate Meer Akbar Alee on the tribute paid to his many distinguished qualities by the Nizam, his own sovereign, in raising him to the rank of Khan Bahadoor, and expressed surprise that the British authorities had taken no notice of his services in Abyssinia, beyond making flattering mention of them in despatches. We remarked that thousands in the Nizam's capital, to whom Meer Akbar Alee Khan Bahadoor's services in Abyssinia were, through report, familiar, were watching with curiosity to see what recognition these would call forth from a Government whose proneness to reward is estimated not very highly. The present forms a good opportunity of convincing the natives that it is otherwise in reality; and we are glad to know that some suitable reward is in store for Meer Akbar Alee. Lord Mayo took the matter into consideration the very day after he reached Calcutta, and although it is not yet decided what Meer Akbar Alee's reward shall be, it will not be long delayed.—Times of India.

EARTHQUAKES IN THE SALEM DISTRICT.—The acting Sub-Collector of Salem reports that a slight shock of an earthquake was felt at Royacottah on the 7th Jan., and that it was followed by a severe one at about 7 A.M. on the 8th. The shock of the 7th was felt at Iakasandram, on the road to Palcode. There was also a shock at Kistnagherry on the 6th. He noticed nothing at Oosoor, where the weather was bright and fine. The shock of the 7th appears to have passed from north-east to south-east, and to have followed the chain of hills which form the ghauts from the plateau. The shock of the 8th is stated to have been very severe. Many of the Cutcherry officials, amongst them his Sheristadar, were in the town awaiting his arrival. They and other natives say that there was a loud rumbling noise, like driving a laden cart close to the houses, a distinct tremour of the earth, and that the tiles on the houses rattled, and the pillars shook. The noise is said to have come from the north. The weather was calm. This shock is said to have come from the south-west, but there is nothing to show that it did so.

PROJECTS FOR A RAILWAY THROUGH RAJPOOTANA.

The following communication from the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, dated Jan. 23, 1869, will be read with interest:—

To Colonel M. K. Kennedy, R.E., Secretary to Government, Public Works Department, Bombay.

Sir,—It was brought to the notice of this Chamber that the proposed route of the projected line of railway through Rajpootana, intended to connect Bombay via Guzerat and Rajpootana with Delhi and Northern India, had been opposed by the Governor-general's Agent for the Rajpootana States, in a despatch addressed to the Government of India in the Public Works Department as being inferior in importance, on commercial and other grounds, to a route which he himself suggested in preference.

The question thus raised being one of very great importance to the commercial interests of this part of India, the Committee of Management of the Chamber deemed it expedient to have an expression of opinion on the subject from the Rajpootana merchants and bankers resident in Bombay, and able to speak on the points raised by Col. Keatinge, from their personal knowledge of the country.

Accordingly a few of the leading merchants and shroffs were invited to confer on the subject at a meeting called for this purpose, and held at the Chamber's offices on Sept. 24 last.

Though not more than eight or ten persons were specially invited, when the object of the meeting became known in the bazaar it excited so much interest that a large number of the native merchants and shroffs from Rajpootana and other parts of Northern and Central India came to the meeting at the Chamber's offices at the hour appointed; and I have now the honour to forward herewith, for the information of Government, copy of the minute of the conference which took place on that occasion.

When the conference with the native merchants was held, the committee of the Chamber knew only of Col. Keatinge's despatch, dated Feb. 27, 1868, from report; lately, however, a printed copy of it, together with other papers on the same subject, were supplied to the Chamber, and these have been under the consideration of the committee.

In the 5th paragraph of the despatch referred to, it is stated that "the Agent Governor-general has now had an opportunity of conversation with all the officers in Rajpootana who have much knowledge, and it is the almost universal opinion that the decision [of the Government of India Committee which sat in 1864] arrived at is wrong, and should be amended."

The decision of the Committee in question, as quoted in Col. Keatinge's despatch, is to the effect that a line of railway "from Deesa through Marwar would pass through an extremely poor country, and is not recommended."

All the evidence the Chamber has been able to collect on the subject supports this opinion, and goes to establish the soundness of the decision arrived at by the Committee of 1864.

In paragraph 11 of Colonel Keatinge's despatch it is stated—"This line [from Deesa through Marwar] would have one great advantage—a most considerable trade exists along it, and traffic would come to the rail at every point to which it opened."

But no evidence is given by Colonel Keatinge of this considerable trade, and the opinion he has expressed is not supported by that of native merchants intimately acquainted with the country.

The minute of the conference, which I have now the honour to lay before Government, shows very clearly that there is no trade now existing of any consequence, except the trade of Pali with Guzerat and Bombay.

The old transit trade to Northern India, of which Pali was formerly the centre, after decaying for years, appears now to be gone beyond the possibility of recall.

The country between Pali and Ajmere is arid, sterile, and little better than a desert: it is, moreover, very thinly populated, and in these circumstances it is not very easy to see how "traffic would come to the rail (if there were one) at every point to which it opened."

The proposed line from Wassud in Guzerat, via Neemuch, with the necessary branches to Ajmere, &c., will be the means of opening up a country with numerous populous towns and villages, teeming with products seeking for markets.

According to the opinions of the native merchants, it may also be made to serve the trade of Pali, the only place on the route recommended by Colonel Keatinge that could yield any traffic to speak of in support of a line of railway through Marwar, via Deesa.

I am, therefore, respectfully to request that H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor in Council will do the Chamber the favour to forward a copy of this letter, with the accompanying minute, to the Government of India, and the Committee respectfully trust he will urge on that Government and the Secretary of State for India in Council the importance of giving early sanction to the proposed line via Wassud and Neemuch, as that best calculated to meet alike the requirements of the State and the commercial wants of the great trading interests of this side of India.

I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient servant,
JAMES TAYLOR, Secretary.

STATION TALK.

KURRACHEE, Jan. 26.—I regret to have to inform you that the representatives of the Sind Railway Company, alarmed at the stagnation in commercial affairs and the consequent falling off in the traffic receipts of the line, are vigorously applying the shears to their several departments, and reducing their working expenses as much as they possibly can. The services of three of the principal inspectors have, I understand, been already dispensed with, and many of the subordinate servants have been informed that after the lapse of a month they must pack up their traps and depart. No one approves of the wisdom of this measure, and the general opinion is, that the agent is acting on a false principle of economy, and following a policy as injudicious as it is decidedly short-sighted, inasmuch as it cannot but operate detrimentally in the long run, and injure the interests of the shareholders. Everybody who has lived in Sind for any length of time is aware that the traffic on the waters of the Indus constantly fluctuates, and this is apparent moreover by the returns which are regularly published for the information of the public by the local press, the receipts ranging from Rs. 10,000 to Rs. 50,000 per week. We cannot therefore say at what moment there might be a change for the better. About three years ago a similar reduction was effected in the staff of drivers, fitters, inspectors, &c., and operations were confined to only two trains, one working from Kotree and the other from Kurrachee, when suddenly the traffic increased to such an extent that the railway officials were fairly at their wits' ends as to how to act, though afterwards they managed, by dint of extraordinary exertions, to convey the large quantities of merchandise that were offered for transit. Neither the Government Consulting Engineer nor the agent appears to have profited by the experience of the past. The course they are pursuing will only frustrate, not further, the object they have in view, and moreover impair the efficiency of the line. The staunchest friends of the company are of opinion that a slight reduction in the existing tariff, instead of in the establishments, is the best remedy for the present unfortunate state of affairs, and the sooner this is done the better it will be for all concerned; for native merchants are proverbially strict economists, and when they discover the railway rates are just as high as they were before, and the facilities for speedy transit materially lessened, they will not store their goods at Kotree or detain their boats there, but will avail themselves of the Khetty route, notwithstanding its disadvantages, and the result of this will be that the native craft will by degrees command the whole of the traffic of the Indus, to the detriment of the Sind Railway. While on this subject I may mention that the insouciance of the company's representatives in the matter of the erection of a proper "station" at Kurrachee is the theme of general remark. The one in use is, to use the mildest term, a disgrace to the place, being totally unsuited to either the requirements of traffic or the comfort of passengers. It is now no secret that the political and commercial importance of establishing unbroken communication between this port and Mooltan have, thanks to the representations of the Imperial and Bombay Governments, been recognised by the home authorities, and that ere long the connection of the Sind and Punjab lines by a railway of equal weight and gauge will be un fait accompli. It is therefore the belief of all interested in the prosperity of the company that the agent and his colleagues would only be acting with wisdom were they to take advantage of the present times, when there is little or nothing doing, and issue instructions for the immediate prosecution of all works of utility on the existing line, and the construction of that long-felt desideratum—a suitable "station" at the Kurrachee terminus—in anticipation of the receipt of orders for the commencement of operations for the Indus Valley Extension.

KURRACHEE, February.—In my communication of the 8th ult. I gave you a résumé of the highly favourable opinion passed by the local Chamber of Commerce on certain specimens of the Egyptian, Hingunghat, and the Sind indigenous cotton grown at the Mulleer, under the personal superintendence of that talented and most energetic servant of Government, Mr. A. W. Hughes, whilom Deputy Magistrate of Rutnagherry, and now Chief Cotton Inspector in Sind. In the early part of the present month this gentleman submitted for the Chamber's inspection three other samples, two of the "Bourbon" variety, and one of Hingunghat. One of the "Bourbon" samples was grown in Mr. Patton's little garden at Kurrachee, from seed which Mr. Hughes had brought with him five years ago. This the Chamber reported as being "very superior both in staple and colour, and well cleaned." The second "Bourbon" was produced in the experimental field at the Mulleer this season. This, in the opinion of the Chamber, was not quite so good as No. 1 either in colour or staple, but they nevertheless deemed it better than any description of cotton usually exported from India, being of exceptionally good quality. They priced it at 12d. per lb. in Liverpool, fair Dhollera being at 9d., and remarked that if the "Sind" were at Rs. 23 per maund, this "Bourbon" would be worth quite Rs. 33 per maund. The "Hingunghat," which was grown in another experimental field in the neighbourhood of Hyderabad, they did not consider equal to good Hingunghat, but pronounced the staple and colour good, though it was leafy and not well cleaned. They valued it at Rs. 26 per maund, good "Sind" being at Rs. 23. Those who have had considerable experience in cotton cultivation declare that from what they have seen of the "Bourbon" they think that it is the kind that will eventually, with due care and attention, supersede the indigenous Sind, if not entirely, still to a great extent. It is sturdy, stands heat and cold well, and if the season be only favourable, which was not the case during the past year, it will produce largely. If, as it is confidently predicted they will, the experiments with it turn out successful, to Mr. Hughes will be due the credit of having first introduced this kind of cotton into the province.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

A RUMOUR.—It is rumoured that in consequence of the late accident, the G. I. P. Railway contemplate discontinuing running night trains.

DR. ASHER, Secretary to the Sanitary Commissioners in this Presidency, intends, it is said, proceeding to England shortly on medical certificate.

OFFICIAL.—It is understood that Major Harper, at present Superintendent of Police at Sattara, will act as Superintendent of Police at Poona, during the absence of Major J. H. Henderson, on medical certificate to Europe.

MAJOR-GENERAL GORDON, commanding the Poona Division, proceeded to Sholapore by rail on the 1st of February on inspection duty, and was accompanied by the Assistant Adjutant General and the Assistant Quartermaster General of the Division.

OPIMUM IN BERAR.—Opium grown in Berar will, in future, be allowed to be exported to Bombay. It will bear the same duty as Malwa opium, and a further duty of Rs. 100 per chest on leaving the province. The Englishman thinks it will probably be able to do this, as it bears an excellent reputation in the ordinary market. The permission now given will take effect from the date on which the Bombay Government may notify that its preparations to take the duty are complete.

MALWA OPIMUM TRADE.—The Bengal Government, at the instance of the Board of Revenue, has, according to the Englishman, moved the Government of India to request the Bombay Government to furnish information as to the causes of the apparent falling off in the Malwa opium trade. From April to September, 1867, the number of passes granted for Indore opium covered 17,689 chests, and for Ahmedabad 1,687 chests, or a total of 19,376 chests. In 1868 the passes granted during the same period covered only 15,331 chests of Indore opium and 74 chests of Ahmedabad, or a total of 15,405. There would thus be an apparent falling off of about 3,971 chests.

MALLIGAUM.—We hear from Malligaum that in consequence of the anticipated drought for the next four months, Government have sanctioned four of Norton's American pumps being sunk in the bed of the river, running within four hundred yards of the cantonment, and which is already at this early period quite dry. The company of Golundauze stationed at Malligaum are to have new lines built for them, and the sites were lately inspected and approved of by the major-general commanding the division.

ABOLITION OF APPOINTMENTS.—Government, it is said, have decided upon the abolition of the appointment of Superintendent of the Central Jail at Yerrowda (Poona), at present filled by Mr. J. C. Fernandez, on a salary of Rs. 400; and also that of the Sub-assistant Surgeon attached to the Jail, who draws Rs. 250 monthly. From March next a medical officer will hold the conjoint appointments and have to reside at Yerrowda; and it is believed that Dr. Beatty will be nominated to the post. There are, we learn, upwards of 700 prisoners in the Yerrowda Jail.

TOO MUCH BY HALF.—The Government of Bombay recently asked the Government of India to contribute Rs. 100,000 towards the construction of a new Native General Hospital, which it was estimated would cost Rs. 238,341, and would accommodate 72 patients. The Government of India, however, have returned the proposition for further consideration, with the suggestion that so large a sum as Rs. 238,341 ought to provide accommodation for a larger number of patients. The average cost per patient according to the design will be Rs. 3,310, a sum, it is said, far in excess of the cost of hospitals for native troops in the North-Western Provinces and Central India. In the opinion of the Viceroy a sum of Rs. 2,000 per patient ought to suffice.

THE WOMEN OF THE FUTURE.—On Friday evening, at the Alexandra Native Girls' School, Hornby-row, Mrs. and the Misses Mitchell received a number of ladies and gentlemen, native as well as European, interested in female education. The pupils (not a few of whom we suppose are wedded wives) were present, and evidently enjoyed the opportunity of seeing so many new friends. Afterwards they were allowed to go down to the schoolroom, where they were indulged with a lively game at "blindman's buff," which, though it may be a novelty in an Indian girls' school, was heartily appreciated by Mrs. Mitchell's happy family. The school is, we believe, in a progressive condition, and has prospered since being placed under Mrs. Mitchell's care.—Times of India, Feb. 6.

GRANT MEDICAL COLLEGE.—Mr. Cowasjee Jehangier Readymoney has given another instance of his liberality and the interest he takes in all educational and philanthropic movements. He has given a Government promissory note for five thousand rupees, bearing interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum, the interest of which he desires should be applied to founding junior scholarships in the Grant Medical College. Dr. Hunter has suggested that two such scholarships of ten rupees a month should be founded, in accordance with the donor's wish. The Bombay Government has thanked Mr. Cowasjee for his "most liberal gift, which will enable the College to meet a want which has long been felt."

THE INDO-EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH.—As already intimated, there is now being constructed a land-line of telegraph as an alternative to the cable between Gwadar and Cape Jask, which it is hoped will tend to the permanent security of the Indo-European communications. But this work is beset with impediments raised by Persian officials, or at least by local magnates so styling themselves. Hence it has become necessary to define the exact limits of the sovereign jurisdiction of the Shah on that part of the Mekran coast lying between Jask and Bunder Abbas. This task, which will be anything but an easy one, is likely to be entrusted to Colonel J. F. Goldsmid, whose very intimate acquaintance of late years with Persia and its outlying districts mark him out as specially qualified for such an inquiry. The peculiar fitness of the gentleman nominated as coadjutor of the Colonel may not be apparent to everyone, when we mention that Mr. Gerald Fitzgerald, hitherto Private Secretary to his Excellency, is spoken of as likely to take part in this inquiry under the style of Special Political Assistant.

ARRIVAL OF THE BISHOP OF BOMBAY.—The Right Rev. Dr. Douglas, the newly consecrated bishop of this diocese, arrived in Bombay by the mail of Jan. 30, and on landing proceeded to Government-house, Parell, as the guest of his Excellency the Governor. The Right Rev. Prelate was accompanied by Mrs. and Miss Douglas. He attended divine service at the cathedral on the following morning, when he was installed in his high office by the Venerable Archdeacon Leigh-Lye and the Revs. F. J. Spring and C. T. Wilson (senior chaplains). Amongst the other clergy in attendance were the Revs. Ward Maule, W. B. Keer, F. S. Sharpin, and W. Clark, and the Rev. Mr. French, of the Church Missionary Society. The installation was certified in the usual way, and the record was signed by H.E. Sir Seymour Fitzgerald, the clergy, the trustees of the cathedral, and by several members of the congregation. After the service a sermon was preached by the new diocesan, whose text was John vii. verses 37, 38, and 39:—"In the last day, that great day of the feast," &c. The Holy Communion was celebrated, the Bishop being the celebrant, assisted by the Venerable the Archdeacon, and the Revs. F. J. Spring and C. T. Wilson. Dr. Douglas also preached in the cathedral in the evening.

MILITARY.—It has been determined by the home authorities to bring up the 59th Regiment to the Bombay Presidency from Ceylon, in place of the 39th from England. The 59th will be brought up in the troopship Euphrates, and will proceed at once to Poona to occupy the Wanowrie lines, lately vacated by the 96th Regiment, and it is probable that the 86th, which has suffered so much from fever at the Mauritius, will replace the 59th at Colombo and Kandy in Ceylon. The Euphrates will start for Ceylon on or about the 8th April, after she has completed the last transport trip of the season from Suez. The 59th would therefore arrive at Bombay about the 26th April. The detachment of forty-four men for the 18th Hussars, which arrived in Bombay on board the Malabar on the 18th December, and has since then been stationed at the general depot, Poona, in consequence of the appearance of cholera on the road between Sholapore and Hyderabad, is now under orders to leave Poona on the 9th, and will proceed by return bullock transit from the former station to Secunderabad. The party is under the command of Captain John Groves, assisted by Cornet Harry W. Parker.—Bombay Gazette.

H.M.S. "DAPHNE."—H.M.S. Daphne, Captain Sullivan, arrived in Bombay harbour at seven o'clock on the evening of January 31, in tow of H.M.S. Dryad, Captain Colomb. The Daphne has been slave-cruising in the Mozambique Channel and on the East Coast of Africa since June last, during which time, by the activity of her commander and officers, she has captured eighteen dhows. She had the misfortune while chasing slave cruisers to get ashore twice, which will necessitate her going into dock; and she also ran short of coals and provisions. She reached Tellicherry on the 22nd of January, and from thence Captain Sullivan telegraphed to Sir Leopold Heath, K.C.B., the Commodore, stating the position in which he was, upon which the Dryad was despatched to render whatever assistance the Daphne might require. The Dryad fell in with her on Friday about twenty miles south of Goa, furnished her with provisions, of which her crew were much in need, having been on short allowance for some time, took her in tow, and brought her to Bombay. When off Seychelles small-pox broke out among the slaves on board; but happily the crew have been generally healthy. One poor fellow got entangled in the machinery and had his leg so crushed that it was found necessary to amputate it, and he died shortly after the operation. Among other curiosities the Daphne brought up a fine ostrich from Zanzibar.

ARRIVAL OF H.M.'S 62ND REGIMENT.—H.M.'s Indian troopship Euphrates arrived in Bombay Harbour from Suez on the 2nd Feb., bringing the 62nd Foot. The following officers belonging to the regiment arrived per Euphrates:—Col. H. L. Ingall, C.B.; Majors C. M. S. L. Gwynne, B. T. Gilpin, and S. G. Carter (Brevet-major); Captains J. L. Kelly, L. G. Dundas, S. Waring, W. A. Corbett, G. S. Fraser, J. M. Theobald, R. N. Gream, and A. L. Reade; Lieutenants T. J. Fitzsimon, K. R. B. Wodehouse, R. Rogers, T. F. Todd, J. Bennett, T. D. Dunn, R. A. Poole, W. A. D. Sheeton, and H. Jones; Ensigns V. Knox, A. Goding, W. B. Williams, H. M. Carter, C. W. Singleton, R. H. Forrest, F. D. Battye, and J. F. Carthew; Paymaster J. W. Minchin; Adjutant T. H. Forsyth; Quartermaster J. Gamble; Surgeon T. S. Hollingsworth; Assistant Surgeons J. Wallace and R. J. Scott, M.B. The following officers, belonging to other corps, also arrived on the 2nd Feb.:—Lieutenant-colonels Arbuthnot, R.H.A. and Shekelton, R.A.; Veterinary Surgeon Plomley, R.H.A.; Captains Davidson, R.A.; Bonner, R.A.; and Wright, 96th Regiment; Lieutenants Turnbull, R.A.; Machell, R.A.; Christie, R.E.; Lindsell, R.E.; Moore, R.E.; Hodder, 2-10th Regiment; Ross, 2-25th Regiment; Owen, 88th Regiment; Campbell, 109th Regiment; Hoyes, 109th Regiment; Major Herbert, 1-7th Regiment; Ensigns Burgess, 109th Regiment; and Burnes, Staff. One man and four children died during the voyage. The troops on board numbered in all 1,300.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

ACTING ALLOWANCES.

Jan. 19.—No. 481.—From G. H. M. Batten, Esq., Under Secretary to the Government of India, Financial Department, to the Accountant-General, Madras.

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 2,021, dated the 8th ult., and in reply to state that the rule that a covenanted civil servant, officiating in more than one appointment, is entitled to acting allowance, calculated on the aggregate of the salaries of the appointments in which he officiates, provided the salary of the highest paid of those appointments be not exceeded, is still in force.

Jan. 21.—No. 489.—Read the undermentioned papers:—

Resolution No. 3,053, passed in this department on Oct. 14, 1868, ruling that the acting allowances of military officers in civil employ on consolidated salaries are not to be taken into account as a part of the average salaries on which their furlough allowances are to be calculated under the new Furlough Rules.

Office memorandum from the military department, No. 748, dated the 17th ult., and enclosures, containing a remonstrance against the above-mentioned resolution.

Resolution.—On reconsideration, the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to cancel the resolution No. 3,053, of Oct. 14, 1868, and to declare that, in the case of military officers in civil employ on consolidated salaries, the acting allowances which have been drawn by such officers shall not be held to be extra or special allowances, but shall be taken into account as a part of the salary on the average of which their furlough allowances are calculated under Rule V. of the new Military Leave Rules.

FREE PASSAGES TO CHAPLAINS.

Jan. 19.—No. 414.—Read the undermentioned papers:—

Resolution No. 804, passed in this department on Feb. 26, 1866, ruling that chaplains, like military officers in civil employ, will be allowed a free passage, "when, being employed at a station beyond sea, they may be obliged to return to their Presidency in progress to a hill station on leave on medical certificate, and also when they join their station on return from that leave."

Resolution No. 2,199, passed in this department on Sept. 4, 1868, rescinding the order granting the concession described above to military officers in civil employ, on the ground that it has been rendered unnecessary by the new rules for the grant of leave of absence to military officers.

Letter from the Officiating Accountant General, Bombay, No. 2,626a, dated the 18th ult., inquiring, with reference to the last-mentioned resolution and to the new rules for chaplains, whether the resolution of 26th February, 1866, is any longer in force.

Resolution.—The resolution No. 904, of Feb. 26, 1866, is cancelled.

FURLOUGH ON ALLOWANCES.

No. 447.—Read the undermentioned correspondence:—

Endorsement from the foreign department, No. 2,078, dated the 5th ult., referring, for an expression of opinion, an application from Lieut. E. Gibson, a boundary settlement officer in Central India, who has not completed eight years' actual service in India, for permission to take furlough on medical certificate on the allowances on which he would be entitled to take it without a medical certificate after the completion of eight years' service.

Endorsement to the military department, No. 3,864, dated the 30th ult., on the above.

Office memorandum from the military department, No. 68, dated the 4th inst., stating that, under the Leave Rules of Nov. 10, 1868, a military officer may, on his producing a medical certificate, take his first furlough before the completion of eight years' actual service in India without forfeiting his appointment or his claim to the allowances prescribed in Rule V. Rule XIV. does not apply to such cases.

ALLOWANCES OF UNCOVENANTED SERVANTS.

No. 492.—From G. H. M. Batten, Esq., Under Secretary to the Government of India, Financial Department, to the Accountant General, N.W. Provinces.

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of Mr. Deputy Accountant General J. Eede's letter, No. 6,855, dated December, 1868, and in reply to state that the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to rule that Rs. 200 per mensem shall be the minimum acting allowance of an uncovenanted servant who has no substantive appointment, but who is appointed to officiate as an extra assistant commissioner.

FREE CONVEYANCE TO OFFICERS ON TRANSFER.

No. 83.—The Right Hon. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to decide that, when officers of her Majesty's British army are transferred on promotion from one battalion of a regiment in India to another battalion out of India, and are, in consequence, reduced to the British rate of pay, they are entitled to a free conveyance from their station to the port of embarkation when proceeding to join the battalion they stand posted to.

The same rule will be applicable to officers of royal artillery, similarly transferred on promotion from one brigade to another, if reduced to British pay.

Officers transferred by exchange, or at their own request, are not entitled to such conveyance at the public expense.

EMPLOYMENT OF OFFICERS RETURNING TO DUTY.

Fort William, Jan. 18.—No. 403.—The following letter, addressed to the Accountant General, N.W. Provinces, is published for general information:—

In reply to Mr. Eede's letter, No. 6,956, dated Dec. 8 last, I am desired to inform you that the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to rule that, when an officer, after reporting his return to duty, is kept out of employment through no fault of his own, the period elapsing from the date of his reporting his return from leave, including subsidiary leave, if any be taken, to that of his re-employment, shall be reckoned as service qualifying for privilege leave.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE TO CHAPLAINS.

No. 406.—The following despatch from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India is published by order of the Gov. gen. of India in Council, in continuation of the notification of this department, No. 1,491, dated July 31 last:—

India-office, London, Nov. 17, 1868.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

Sir,—The despatch of your Excellency in Council in the financial department, dated July 31, No. 190 of 1868, transmitting some revised rules regulating the leave of absence of chaplains, has been considered by me in Council.

In reply, I have only to convey to your Excellency in Council my approval and sanction of the revised rules.—I have, &c.,

(Signed)

STAFFORD H. NORTHCOLE.

PRIVILEGE LEAVE TO UNCOVENANTED CIVIL SERVANTS.

Jan. 22.—No. 495.—Read—An endorsement from the Dep. acct. gen., Punjab, No. 154, dated Dec. 17 last, submitting for approval or for correction, if necessary, the interpretation put by the Acct. gen. on certain points connected with the rules for the grant of priv. leave to uncovenanted civil servants.

Resolution.—The Gov. gen. in Council observes that, under orders passed in this department on various dates, the priv. leave of uncovenanted officers, whether taken in whole or divided, has been regulated generally by the rules applicable to covenanted civil servants, and that as these orders were all passed previous to July 1 last, the covenanted leave rules to which they referred were those which were in force up to that date. By the new covenanted leave rules, however, which came into operation on the date above mentioned, some alteration has been made in the details regarding the accumulation and division of privilege leave, and as these alterations have not been formally extended to the uncovenanted service, and some difficulty is thereby experienced in now regulating the grant of privilege leave to uncovenanted servants, the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to rule that the privilege leave of uncovenanted servants shall henceforth be regulated according to the new covenanted civil rules, dated June 16 last.

SEPARATE COMMAND, PESHAWUR DIVISION.

No. 72.—In consequence of the changes which are gradually being made in the disposition of the troops in the Peshawur Valley and Cis-Indus at Sydnun Bowlee, &c., the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. in Council has been pleased to decide that, from March 1 next, the troops in the Peshawur district shall form a separate district command under the brigadier-general at Peshawur, and that, instead of the Peshawur division, a new one shall be formed to be called the Jhelum division, and to comprise the following stations, its headquarters being at Rawul Pindee:—Attock, Sydnun Bowlee, Rawul Pindee, Murree, Jhelum, Sealkote. A new station about to be formed in the Sind Saugor Doab.

REPORT ON THE FAMINE.

REVENUE DEPARTMENT, No. 198A.

From R. Simson, Esq., Secretary to the Government of the N.W.P., to E. C. Bayley, Esq., Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department.

Dated Camp Cawnpore, Jan. 30, 1869.

SIR,—I am directed by his Honour the Lieut. Governor to communicate, for the information of H.E. the Governor General in Council, the satisfactory intelligence that a very sufficient fall of rain has been vouchsafed to the most distressed portions of these provinces during the present week.

2. The prospects of the harvest had been growing more and more dismal. One night's frost about the close of the year nipped the greater part of the urhur (a pulse which forms a staple of food) throughout the provinces, turning flourishing fields into a mass of discoloured stubble; and other crops also suffered. Clouds had begun to hang about without shedding rain, and incipient symptoms of blight were in consequence discovering themselves. The clouds have now happily discharged their precious freight, and have cleared off, leaving behind them fructifying dews and morning mists.

3. Complete returns respecting the rains have not yet been received; but the Lieut. Governor does not delay to communicate the gratifying intelligence to the Governor General in Council, reserving details for the present.

4. Among other favoured districts are the following, on which drought has pressed heavily:—Bijnour, Shearunpore, Mozuffernugger, Muthra, Lullatpore, and Ajmere; and further reports will no doubt extend the area. The collectors are generally engaged in making circuits in the interior of their districts, and consequently their reports are sometimes delayed. But it may be stated generally that the western or worst districts have greatly benefited; while the Benares and Allahabad divisions, to which the fall has not apparently extended, were in least need of the boon.

5. In Rohilcund it is reported that the rain, besides great benefit to the spring harvest wherever the crops have survived, will provide the requisite saturation of the soil for the next sugar-cane crop; a most essential object for which special aid had been asked, with the view of at once providing labour for the poor, and securing a chief staple of the province. But the natural rain will of course be much more efficacious than any irrigation from wells.

6. The rain will also prove a material relief to the canals, which had become unable to meet the urgent call for water on every hand. The Jumna unfortunately is falling, and the supply in the Eastern Jumna Canal is consequently low. The Ganges Canal is full; but with the excessive pressure on it to supply a full watering to the thirsty fields throughout the length of its course, it was impossible to answer fully every call. The late rain will greatly ease the pressure.

7. Prices have already fallen in consequence of the rain; in some districts an immediate fall of one seer per rupee was occasioned. The crops are everywhere brightened and refreshed; and altogether the prospect is more cheering.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient servant,

R. SIMSON,

Secretary to the Government of the N.W.P.

LADY CANNING'S TOMB.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "TIMES."

Sir,—The admirers of the late Lord and Lady Canning will hear with regret that the beautiful monument erected to the memory of Lady Canning in this place is already much injured by exposure to the heat and rains of Bengal. A temporary shed has already been erected over it, but it has clearly become necessary that the tomb should be roofed over with a suitable dome as a permanent shelter.

The estimate for such a work is £900, and it will be enough to state this necessity in order to induce the English friends of Lord Canning to make the required donations.

An appeal has been made to the heir of Lord Canning's title and fortune to restore and complete this tomb, but the appeal has not met with any adequate response, so that this work of piety must devolve on the nation, which Lord Canning represented so worthily in the East.—Your obedient servant,
PILGRIM.

Barrackpore, near Calcutta, Jan. 18.

The Marquis of Clanricarde forwards to a contemporary for insertion the following letter, which he addressed to the Editor of the Times:—"Sir,—In reference to the letter signed 'Pilgrim,' upon the repairs and protection required for Lady Canning's tomb, which appeared in the Times of Tuesday, and in the temporary absence from England of Lord Burke, I beg your permission to inform your readers that the appeal to the nation made by 'Pilgrim' is quite unauthorised by Lord Canning's relatives, and is wholly unnecessary.—I am, Sir, &c., (signed) CLANRICARDE.—Feb. 25, 1869."

Miscellaneous.

ROYAL COMMISSIONERS ON MILITARY EDUCATION.—Friday night's Gazette contains the appointment of Lord Dufferin and Major-general F. H. Eardley-Wilmot, R.A., to be two of the Royal Commissioners on Military Education, in the room of Earl De Grey and Ripon and General Lefroy. Mr. Stuart Parker is also appointed a member of the commission.

A PARSEE DEACON.—Among the deacons ordained by the Bishop of Oxford on Sunday was Shapurji Edulji—a Parsee, it may be presumed. In India there are a good many native clergymen, but Mr. Edulji has not been set apart for the evangelisation of his fellow-countrymen. He takes his place among the clergy of England, and is at this moment curate of Burford and Fulbrook, not many miles from Oxford itself.—Record.

GENERAL BALFOUR.—In justice to General Balfour we must state our entire concurrence with him in his objections to a sum of £45,000 for heavy guns for land defences being inserted in the estimates. He has very properly advocated the insertion of the smaller sum of £15,000, which, now that all the condemned naval breech-loaders are available for land defences, will amply cover all the required expenditure for providing gun-carriages for the excess of guns beyond those for which carriages are already in the Government stores. We will not say that this was the sole reason for his resignation, but so far as this reason operated, we consider General Balfour was right.—Broad Arrow.

"KACHEKALAYANA RUNGAPPO KALAKA TOLA OODIAR v. KACHIVIJAYA RUNGAPPO KALAKA TOLA OODIAR."—This appeal to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council was from Madras. It was an ex parte application on the subject of maintenance by one member of a family to another member. It has been before two courts, and the High Court has not set forth the reasons on which the case had been decided. Lord Justice Selwyn gave judgment on Feb. 24, and after expressing the regret of their lordships that the High Court had not set forth their reasons for the decision they had given, which should have been done, the committee, on a consideration of all the facts, did not see any sufficient ground alleged for granting the application, and the appeal would be dismissed.

LIEUT.-COLONEL S. J. BLANC.—The new military secretary to Lord Mayo, Governor-general of India, Lieut.-colonel Blanc, served with the Scots Fusilier Guards throughout the Eastern Campaign of 1854-55, including the battles of Balaklava and Inkerman (wounded), siege and fall of Sebastopol, and sortie of the 26th October (medal and clasps, Sardinian and Turkish medals, and 5th class of the Medjidie); served as Brigade-major to General Nicholson at the defeat of the Sealkote mutineers at Goodaspore on the 12th and 16th July, 1857; action at Nujfughur; siege and assault of Delhi. Three times mentioned in despatches and in general orders by the Governor-general. Brevets of Major and Lieut.-colonel, medal and clasp. Major the Hon. E. R. Bourke, 6th Inniskilling Dragoons, is officiating as military secretary during Lieut.-col. Blanc's absence on leave.

"RADBAJEBUN MOOSTOFY v. TARAMOREE DOSEE."—This case was decided by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council on Feb. 23. There were two appeals, and there had been litigation for years between two brothers, which was now taken up by the widow of one of the parties. A question was raised as to the alleged payment for the family worship of deities under the Hindoo law. It was stated on one side that money had been expended for the worship of idols, and on the other side it was denied, and that payment had been made by the claimant because his brother had not kept up the ceremonies of the "debsheba." There had been an appeal to the High Court, and now an appeal from that Court, and the object was to obtain an order from her Majesty in Council to remit the case for a new trial, in order that the defendant in the action might be cross-examined on the part of the plaintiff. There had been a compromise between the brothers, and one undertook to keep up the worship of the deities, which it was alleged he had not done. Sir J. Colville gave judgment, and reviewed the whole proceedings. Their lordships dismissed the appeal.

SHEARMAN v. THE EAST INDIA RAILWAY COMPANY.—This was an application to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council on Feb. 22, for leave to appeal from the Presidency of Bengal. The question raised related to 100 tons of coals, and had been before two courts. The second court had decided against the plaintiff, and as the amount was under the prescribed sum for appeals, it was necessary to obtain special leave from their lordships. Mr. Cave was heard in support of the application, and mentioned that the plaintiff felt dissatisfied with the decision. Mr. Cave contended that there had been a question of law involved as to a sale by sample, and another sample was given, on which the bulk was broken. Sir L. Peel said, to allow an appeal for such a sum special reasons must be shown not only on the merits only, but on a question of law. Mr. Cave proceeded to contend that there were questions of law of a general character which rendered it necessary that leave should be given to appeal. Their lordships were of opinion that it was not a case in which leave to appeal should be given, and the application would be refused.

"RE FINANCIAL CORPORATION"—SASSOON'S CASE.—This was an application by the official liquidator to the Master of the Rolls, on Feb. 23, that the list of contributories of this company might be amended by striking out the name of Louis Henry Fieling, in respect of 1,250 £10 shares, and inserting therein the names of the executors of the late Mr. Sassoon David Sassoon, of Leadenhall-street. In March 1865 Mr. Sassoon transferred the shares in question to Fieling, who accepted them, and they were in due course registered in his name. The consideration for the transfer was 5s. At the time Fieling, who was a clerk employed by Mr. Sebag, of Throgmorton-street, Mr. Sassoon's broker, was about eighteen years of age. He had had, however, considerable dealings both in buying and in selling shares of the company, and was regarded as a responsible person by the directors, who were not aware of his infancy. The order to wind up the company was made in May 1866, and Fieling was settled on the list of contributories in December 1867, while still under age. He came of age on the 5th of January, 1868, but up to the present time had made no serious attempt to get rid of his liability. Mr. Sassoon having died in 1867, the present summons was taken out by the official liquidator, with a view to substitute Sassoon's executors for Fieling in the payment of calls, which threaten to be considerable, Fieling being a person of no means. His lordship said the case was clearly within the principle of the cases which had been cited, and that Sassoon's executors must be placed on the list in the place of Fieling. The costs of all parties to come out of the estate.

THE NEW MILITARY BREECH-LOADER.—The special committee on military breech-loaders has now rendered its report, and, as far as the committee is concerned, the future arm of the British soldier may be said to have been determined. It is no secret that the committee's choice has fallen on a rifle which has the Henry barrel and the Martini breech action, adapted to fire the Boxer cartridge. The efficiency and safety of this cartridge have now been established by some years of trial, and its acceptance followed almost necessarily from the considerable experience which has been obtained of its high military value. So the new cartridge case, except in size, will not differ materially from the Boxer cartridge now in the hands of the troops. The bullet used is a solid hardened lead bullet, designed by Mr. Henry, and having one cannellure round it for securing the bullet to the cartridge. Of the suitability of the arm as a whole for military service we can speak only in general terms until we have had an opportunity of seeing the committee's report (which, no doubt, will be shortly presented to Parliament), and of thus observing exactly what tests the gun has satisfied. But it is known to be considerably more accurate than the present arm, especially at the longer ranges, and some very fine shooting has been made with it up to 1,200 yards. The trajectory is much flatter than that of the Snider, and the penetration much greater. It is also a very much quicker gun, and twenty rounds have been fired with it in forty-eight seconds. Rust, damp, dirt, grit, and the like, do not place the gun hors de combat, nor does it appear to be liable to injury from long-continued firing or rough usage. It is stated to be even cheaper to produce than the present Snider Enfield. The bursting of a cartridge is not attended with inconvenience to the firer, nor, we believe, with injury to the gun; and, indeed, we understand, as we have before stated, that the result of the various trials has been to dispose, one by one, of the theoretical objections which, from time to time, have been urged against the system.—Pall Mall Gazette.

THE MONCRIEFF INVENTION.—The Moncrieff contrivance for mounting heavy artillery has been definitively accepted by the Government. Hitherto, as our readers are aware, a 6½-ton gun is the heaviest which has been mounted on this system; but, if it is to be really useful, it will have to be employed with much heavier ordnance, and steps are to be taken at once to apply it to a 12-ton gun, as a step towards its further development. It is quite possible that something more than a mere reproduction on a larger scale will be found necessary when a gun of double the weight has to be dealt with. But the feasibility of applying the system to larger guns is scarcely doubtful; and so marked has been the success of the experiments which have taken place with the invention, so decided is likely to be the saving to the public which its adoption will effect, and so certain is it that the invention in its many possible applications or modifications will prove to be one of very great public utility, that the Government have determined to apply it wherever it may seem practicable or desirable to do so. Captain Moncrieff has been treated with a prompt liberality. He is to receive, first, a sum of money sufficient to cover the cost of his models and his preliminary expenses. Secondly, he is to receive payment for the time that he has devoted exclusively to the public service (about two years, we believe) at a rate of about £1,000 per annum, which rate of pay is to continue so long as Captain Moncrieff is engaged in rendering assistance, in making and completing designs for the application of his system, and in superintending the construction of his carriages. Thirdly, he is to receive £15,000 as a reward for the invention, and for the use which may be made of it in her Majesty's service, either afloat or ashore, in any modification or combination. Captain Moncrieff, on his part, is required to undertake to communicate fully and unreservedly all improvements which he may deem practicable; in fact, to give the benefit of his knowledge of this particular subject to the country. Of the sum of £15,000, £10,000 is to be paid at once, the remaining £5,000 when the inventor ceases to draw his salary of £1,000 a-year.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, Tuesday, Feb. 23.—THE INDIAN BUDGET.—Mr. J. B. SMITH asked the Under Secretary of State for India whether it was his intention to follow the example of his predecessors in bringing forward the Indian budget in the last week of the session of Parliament, or whether he desired to alter the period of making up the Indian accounts to such a date as would enable him to lay them upon the table of the House at the opening of the session of Parliament, so that the budget might be brought forward, and Indian questions discussed previously to the pressure of other business.—Mr. GRANT DUFF said, in reply to the first part of the question, no one could be more anxious than he was that the Indian financial statement should be made to the House at a time when it would suit the convenience of all those members who took an interest in Indian affairs to be present in their places, and to aid the Government by their information and advice. With regard to the second part of the question, the state of the case was this. In the year 1866, in consequence of a notice given in this House by his hon. friend (Mr. Smith), this whole subject was most carefully gone into by the Government of India, acting under the directions of the then Secretary of State, and the Government of India came to the conclusion that the views of those persons who regretted that the financial statement was made so late in the session would be best met by altering the old Indian financial year, which used to end on the 30th of April, and making it end on the 31st of March, the same as the English financial year. That change was approved of by the Home Government, and had since been carried into effect, so that there was now nothing to prevent the Indian financial statement from being made in this House a month earlier than formerly used to be the case. The change in the financial year of course caused a great amount of inconvenience in India, and it would not be reasonable for them to listen to any suggestions for further change until the present system had been tried, and it had been seen whether it did or did not work well.

INDIAN RETURNS.—Colonel SYKES asked for an explanation of the discrepancies between the Parliamentary return, No. 440, respecting the prospective annual number of officers of the different ranks in the Indian armies, and returns drawn up by officers in India; for instance, the Parliamentary return stated there would be 480 lieutenants in 1873, while the returns drawn up by the officers in India gave only thirteen lieutenants, namely, eleven at Bengal, two at Madras, and nil at Bombay.—Mr. G. DUFF said the explanation was easily given. The returns to which attention was called took no notice of the deaths that must inevitably occur amongst the officers to which they referred between the years 1867 and 1873. On the other hand, the Parliamentary returns took notice of these deaths. The first returns taking no notice of the deaths, of course, took no notice of the new appointments by which these death vacancies would be filled, and in this way the very startling difference of result was arrived at.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, Thursday, Feb. 25.—SCHOLARSHIPS FOR NATIVES OF INDIA.—Sir S. NORTHCOTE asked the Under Secretary of State for India what arrangements had been made with reference to the scholarships recently established by the Government of India for natives of that country desirous of prosecuting their studies in England; and whether there were any papers on the subject which he could lay upon the table.—Mr. G. DUFF said the subject to which the question referred was a deeply interesting one, and was still under consideration, and as soon as the papers were complete he should be happy to lay them on the table. The first of the competitive scholarships offered by the Government of India had been gained by a young native of Assam, and they had just been informed by the Government of Bengal that he might be expected to arrive in England in a few days.

THE NAWAB OF TONK.—Mr. STACPOOLE asked the Under Secretary of State for India if he had any objection to lay upon the table all the papers connected with the deposition of the Nawab of Tonk; copy of the said Nawab's application for permission to leave Benares, his present place of exile, for the purpose of visiting England, together with the grounds upon which the late Governor-general refused such application; and whether he had any objection to lay upon the table the letter of Professor Syed Abdoollah, dated 19th of January last, offering remarks on the subject of native Indian servants and others brought from India to England, and who are frequently thereafter found destitute in the streets of London; and also to explain under what circumstances the resolution of the Bombay Government, dated the 11th of February 1846, and which required that any one bringing Asiatic or African servants to Europe should deposit certain sums of money in the Government treasury as a guarantee for the safe return of the said servants, was repealed.—Mr. G. DUFF replied that there was no objection to produce the papers, but some of them had not been received from India. With regard to the latter part of the question, he believed that the Oriental vagrants which were to be seen in our streets were not generally servants brought over from India, but were adventurers who came here of their own accord.

THE SEAT OF GOVERNMENT IN INDIA.—Mr. DILKE asked the Under Secretary of State for India whether it was true that the Governor-General of India was to reside at Simla during the greater portion of the present year; and whether, if this was the case, it was the intention of her Majesty's Government to remove the nominal seat of the Government of India from Calcutta to some more healthy spot.—Mr. G. DUFF said he had received no information whatever as to whether the Governor-General of India intended to reside at Simla the greater part, if indeed any part, of this year. The question of the change of the nominal capital of India from Calcutta to some other place was of course a very important and interesting one; but it was right that he should distinctly state that that question had not passed out of the stage of irresponsible discussion and examination, and that it was not in any form or shape at present under the consideration of the Government.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

Diseases of the most formidable and chronic character have been cured by Holloway's remedies, after the usual internal and external treatment has signally failed. Ulcerations, which have proved themselves incurable by any other known means, have healed kindly under the purifying and regenerating influence of this excellent Ointment. Sprains, stiff-joints, contracted muscles, and glandular swellings can be most safely and effectively treated by Holloway's Ointment and Pills, which can do no harm under any circumstances. Neither of these medicaments have anything deleterious in their composition; both are essentially purifying and strengthening in their nature. While the Ointment reduces sores to that healthy condition preparatory to healing, the Pills improve the digestion and expel impurities.

SARSAPARILLA.

WILKINSON'S (late Bridge's)
ESSENCE or FLUID EXTRACT OF RED
JAMAICA SARSAPARILLA, prescribed by the Faculty for purifying the blood, debility, liver complaints, and freeing the system from the effects of mercury. Exclusively used in India and the Colonies as a prevention to tropical diseases.

upon."—Sir Astley Cooper.

"We are in every respect satisfied with it."—Lancet.

"We recommend your Sarsaparilla as the best."—
Medical Review.

Sold in quarter, half, and pint bottles.

CAUTION.—Many spurious, worthless, and injurious preparations are offered to the public. See that both bottle and label have the name and address.

QUINTESSANCE OF JAMAICA GINGER AND CAMOMILE.

WILKINSON'S PREPARATION OF GINGER and
CAMOMILE has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine. It is a most efficient stomachic tonic, and the best remedy for flatulency and disorders arising from impaired digestion.

It is not affected by climate.
No European in India or tropical countries should be without it.

AROMATIC TINCTURE OF QUINOIDINE.

For the Prevention of Fever, Ague, and effects of Malaria. An unfailing remedy. It may be mentioned that those who, during the campaign in the Crimea, daily took a small quantity, passed entirely unharmed through the raging fire of fever and dysentery that thinned the ranks around them.

Sold in half and quarter-pint bottles.

Prepared by THOMAS WILKINSON (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

DINNEFORD'S FLUID MAGNESIA.—

The Medical Profession for thirty years have approved of this pure Solution of Magnesia as the best remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion; and as the best mild aperient for delicate constitutions, for Ladies, Children, and Infants; and for REGULAR Use in Warm Climates.

Corner of Spring-gardens.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body."

It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1868.

TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent
Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guaranteed
not to turn black, or make the Teeth look unsightly.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell.
Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. Webb's residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free
by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great
Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.;
postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Postoffice, Piccadilly.
NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,
&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c.
It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

JOHN WHITE, MANUFACTURER, 228, PICCADILLY,
LONDON.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.—

UPWARDS OF FIFTY YEARS' experience has

in the cure of ASTHMA, WINTER COUGH, HOARSE-NESS, SHORTNESS OF BREATH, and other PUL-
MONARY MALADIES.

RECENT TESTIMONIAL.

August 23, 1868.
Dear Sir,—Having tried your Cough Lozenges in India,
I have much pleasure in testifying to their beneficial effects in cases of incipient consumption, asthma, and bronchial affections; so good a medicine ought to be known to be appreciated. I have prescribed it largely with the best results. W. B. G., Apothecary H.M. Indian Medical Service.

To Mr. Thomas Keating.
Sold in boxes, tins, and bottles, of various sizes.

KEATING'S CHILDREN'S WORM
TABLET.—A PURELY VEGETABLE SWEETMEAT, both in appearance and taste, furnishing a most agreeable method of administering a well-known remedy for INTESTINAL or THREAD WORMS.

It is a perfectly safe and mild preparation, and is especially adapted for Children.

KEATING'S PERSIAN INSECT DE-STROYING POWDER.—This Powder is QUITE HARM-LESS TO ANIMALS, but unrivalled in destroying Fleas, Bugs, Flukes, Flies, Cockroaches, Beetles, Grubs, Mosquitoes, Moths in Furs, and every other species of insect in all stages of metamorphosis.

Sold in packets, tins, and bottles, of various sizes.

CAUTION.—The Trade Mark is the Dome and Cross of
St. Paul's, which is engraved on every article.

Price 6s., by post, 6s. 6d.,

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, February 13; Agra and Calcutta, February 9; Madras, February 8.

We have nothing later to tell of the Loshai raiders. Colonel Nuttall on the 26th January reached Budderpore, one march from Cachar, and turned off thence with his 170 men next morning in a southerly direction towards Jalnachuna, some four marches off. From that place he was to start afresh after concerting a plan of operations with the officers at Cachar. Two companies of the 44th N.I. were still at the latter place. According to the Times of India, another party of Kookies have attacked a police-post on the Chittagong Frontier, overpowering the guard of ten men and plundering the adjacent villages. Mr. Rattray went off at once with his police to the scene of outrage, and Major Graham, the new Commissioner of the Hill Tracts, was about to follow him with another detachment. On the Cachar side all was quiet, and the coolies had got over their alarm. The Munnipore Rajah was getting together a thousand of his own men to make reprisals on the invaders of his territory.

ACCORDING to the Indian papers, it was still matter for conflicting surmises whether the Viceroy and Shere Ali were really to meet at Peshawar. The same doubt was disseminated in this country by the telegram we quoted last week. A later one from Calcutta, of March 4, seems to set all doubt at rest on the main point of Shere Ali's own movements. We learn from it that he had already reached Peshawar on his way to Lahore, where Sir D. Macleod was to hold a durbar. The camp was "being formed at Umballa." It is not clear whose camp is meant, nor yet that the Viceroy himself will meet the Ameer. One thing however is certain; the story of Shere Ali's defeated rivals having "occupied two cities in Turkistan" must be a wild perversion of facts; else how could Shere Ali venture to come even as far as Peshawar? We have not yet heard indeed that those rivals have finally accepted the terms on which alone their prayer for shelter on British soil could be granted. But nothing indicated their rejection of those terms.

THE long-rumoured arrangement between the new Ameer of Kabul and the Indian Government has become an acknowledged fact. Shere Ali has already received six lakhs of rupees and four thousand stand of arms. The other six lakhs he is to receive in April. "No treaty"—says the Friend of India—"has been made with him, nor is it guaranteed that this sum shall be paid annually as a subsidy. All that the Ameer is asked to do in return is to consider the British Government as his real friend." So far well. The Ameer understands, we suppose, that he will get his twelve lakhs a-year during good behaviour, on condition of his overlooking our past neglect of him, and refraining from too close an intimacy with Russia. There is no question here, we take it, of reversing the late Viceroy's policy. Now that Shere Ali has defeated his enemies, we renew with him the understanding that once dwelt between us and Dost Mohamed.

LORD MAYO continues to improve the good impression he made at first. He has a turn for seeing everything with his own eyes and getting his information at first hand. His visit to the Medical College Hospital seems to have been quite as searching as his stroll through the Calcutta slums, or the questions he asks of the officials under his orders. He has given promise of working hard himself, and many unmistakable signs of keeping others up to their work. Among those with whom he is taking counsel is Colonel Keatinge, who was on his way down to Calcutta, where the two will have much to talk about touching the famine in Rajpootana, the late troubles in Jodhpore, and other matters on which Colonel Keatinge is specially well-informed. Lord Mayo will probably take Lahore on his way to Simla, now that Shere Ali is free to come so far.

THE Indian Daily News gives flat contradiction to the Friend of India's statement that the Shah of Persia had applied for the loan of Indian officers to drill and otherwise improve his army. The idea of some such arrangement was mooted indeed at home, but soon dropped, we are told, on account of the dangers involved in sending out British officers to a country where their lives and liberties would never be safe. In the event of aught untoward befalling them, England would be dragged into a war. We for our part cannot see the force of this reasoning, and very much doubt the likelihood of the alleged danger. For many years English officers did serve unharmed in the Persian army, and might surely do so again at need. Such an arrangement, if agreeable to the Shah, would serve a good political purpose in view of Russia's late advance. Indeed, the Pall Mall Gazette seems to assure us that the plan is actually about to be tried.

It seems that in India there is a tendency to make prison-labour go further than it ought. Prisoners sentenced to hard labour are frequently employed in lighter because more remunerative work, and thus the notion of punishment gets thrown into the background. Different rules too prevail in different provinces. In British Burmah a prisoner can earn a remission of four months in each other, in Madras about two, and in the Central Provinces only one month. In Bombay no remission is ever granted, nor any as a rule in Bengal. The remission is opened also to different classes of prisoners in different places. The Indian Government has been corresponding with the local ones on these and other points concerning prison labour; its own opinion being that no remission should exceed a twelfth of the sentence, and that criminals of the worst class should never be let off any part of their term.

SIR JOHN LAWRENCE has left Alexandria on board the Cara-loc for Brindisi, and would thence proceed to England by overland route.

WE learn by telegram that the Bombay Post-office has been burnt down.

OUR guess concerning the telegram which announced the surprise of the Kohat garrison by a body of Bazoties, with a loss on our side of 300 men, was close upon the mark. It turns out that a small police-post in the Kohat Valley was surprised by a few Bazotie raiders, who killed one policeman, and carried off three others, on the 13th of February. On hearing of the outrage, Sir D. Macleod at once ordered Colonel Keyes, of the 1st Punjab Infantry, to follow after the marauders. A later telegram briefly mentions the destruction of a village by Colonel Keyes' force, with the loss of two sepoy killed and thirty-one wounded. What the object of the raid was we have yet to learn; as well as the nature of the opposition which our troops had to overcome at such a cost. Even thirty-three men killed or wounded on such an occasion makes one anxious for further tidings of a matter still involved in mystery. Why was the police-post assailed at all, and how came Colonel Keyes to lose so many men in the process of making reprisals?

THE results of Dr. Hunter's inquiry into the state of health of the Gaikwar's imprisoned brother leave the true question at issue pretty much where it was. The Doctor's report informs us that the Royal prisoner, Malhar Rao—who has not after all been yet released—is a naturally delicate person, of spare habits, slight frame, and excitable temperament, with a squint in both eyes and the sight of one impaired. He has also suffered from piles for the last fifteen years, had just recovered from some complaint in his ear, and had lately been ill with jaundice and fever. But for the first complaint he is now, thinks the Doctor, well enough; in fact, his Highness assured him that, "with the exception of being thinner, his health was as good now as it had been for years past." The Royal prisoner is lodged in a set of rooms approached by a single gateway and overlooked by houses on all sides. The rooms are all "small and low-pitched," but clean and airy; the dining-room, about ten feet by twelve, is divided from the kitchen by "a bamboo wall;" and the floors are of clay and cow-dung. This seems hardly a lodging for a prince, although he was allowed to choose his own cook, and deer and peacocks are "kept in the Court-yard for his Highness's amusement." Malhar Rao is "kept in exceedingly strict surveillance," which is somehow found to be compatible with "unrestricted indulgence in out-door exercise within certain limits." Unlike Bonaparte at St. Helena, the captive heir-apparent to the Baroda musnud has no complaint to make touching personal discomforts. All he complains of is the fact of his being "unjustly detained as a prisoner, and the strict surveillance he was subjected to by his Highness the Gaikwar. Except on the subject of his imprisonment, his Highness's mind seemed tranquil and at times even cheerful." On the whole then, Dr. Hunter concludes that "the treatment of his Highness Malhar Rao, though exceedingly strict, is neither harsh nor cruel." It is not harsh treatment then to keep your brother prisoner for five years "under exceedingly strict surveillance," apart from all his family and friends, in lodgings miserably small and cheerless, because you suspect him guilty of an unproved crime? The prisoner seems pretty well and tranquil, except when he complains of unjust imprisonment. Therefore his treatment is nothing out of the way; and the Bombay Government, following Dr. Hunter's lead, exonerates the Gaikwar from all blame on the score of needless severity. Seeing that for five years he has kept the heir to his throne a prisoner on mere suspicion, we hope the Gaikwar will appreciate the polite forbearance of his feudal lords, who only object to killing your enemy, as the Nawab of Tonk did, by violent and summary means.

THE selections from the Government Records of the North-West Provinces contain, among other things, some interesting particulars concerning the native press of those provinces. Of twenty-four serials now published thirteen are weekly, five fortnightly, and the remainder monthly. Meerut leads off with six weekly and one fortnightly serial. Agra owns two monthlies only, while Allahabad boasts two weekly and two fortnightly prints. Cawnpore enjoys two weeklies, Benares only one, Moradabad a weekly and a fortnightly, Bareilly a fortnightly and a monthly. Several other places have one serial apiece. It is strange that Benares, the great centre of Hindoo learning, should be no better off than Aligurh or Shahjehanpore, and that the Benares Akhbar, with its circulation of twenty-five copies, stands lowest of all in respect of numbers. The Jounpore weekly circulates sixty-six, and the Moradabad fortnightly seventy-six copies only. The Furruckabad print and the Cawnpore Gazette dispose of one hundred copies each. Elsewhere the numbers rise to four, five, and six hundred. The Najm-ul-Akhbar of Meerut, the highest on the list, shows a circulation of 741 copies, 612 of which however are taken in by the Government. Of the 529 copies of the fortnightly Biddya Darsh, also published at Meerut, Government subscribes for 483. An Agra monthly, the Abhayat-i-Hind, furnishes Government with 470 copies out of 623, and only twenty of the remainder are bought by native subscribers. On the other hand, the Dharm Prakash, another Agra monthly, circulates its 500 copies among natives alone. All the Allahabad serials depend mainly on Government patronage. Of these twenty-four papers, seventeen are in Urdu, four in Hindi, two in Urdu and Hindi, and one in English and Urdu. Most of them are said to be improving in their selection and treatment of subjects. The old puerilities are giving place to articles sensibly and shrewdly written on many of the stirring questions of the day. Social reforms, education, agriculture, religious movements, the duties and the shortcomings of public officers, all sorts of political and not a few scientific questions, are continually discussed with more or less ability and fairness. One magazine has twenty-seven articles in a single number, most of them displaying a fair amount of thought and information on a wide range of topics. Very few of these papers seem to indulge in personal criticism. On the whole, Mr. Kempson reports very favourably of the native press.

MALE ORPHAN ASYLUM.—We observe that Mr. Eyre B. Powell, C.S.I., the Director of Public Instruction in the Madras Presidency, is about to proceed to Ootacamund, by desire of Government, to arrange for the removal, at an early date, of the Military Male Orphan Asylum from Madras to the Lawrence Asylum at the former station.

THE INDIA OFFICE LIBRARY.

A FORTNIGHT ago we published a letter from a correspondent who signed himself "A Persian and Arabic Scholar;" we purpose now devoting a few lines to the consideration of the subject brought forward in this communication. The object which "A Persian and Arabic Scholar" had in view in forwarding it to us was obviously to bring to notice the shortcomings apparent in the management of the India Library a valuable collection of books relating to the East, which many of our readers will perhaps require to be informed reposes upon some shelves in the attic story of the new India-office. And the onus of his complaint appears to be that this emporium of Asiatic literature and learning remains comparatively unknown and unutilised, because access to it is not only denied to the public generally, but because, in consequence of the want of a proper catalogue and of decent accommodation for readers and students, it is virtually prohibited to those who have received permission to ransack its treasures; and more especially to those who, acquainted with the languages and dialects of the East, are alone able to avail themselves of the many valuable manuscript documents in Oriental tongues which now doubtless remain undiscovered awaiting the examination of some competent explorer.

The charge thus brought forward is certainly a heavy one; would that we could intimate that it was altogether groundless. No one, however, who has seen the extensive and unique assemblage of volumes alluded to—the sight of which, we may add, is well calculated to bring forcibly home to the observer a conviction of the grandeur and immensity of our Indian Empire—can have failed to remark the air of solitary desolation which prevails in the apartment in which the books are stored—their sole enemy time—each tome peacefully reposing in its place, unthumbed and unworn. No rows of pale-faced students, as in the reading-room of the British Museum, daily toil amongst their pages. The echo of the visitor's own footsteps is the only sound he hears, and (save on exceptional occasions) the faces of the few attendants attached to the library are the only ones he sees. All is still and conducive to study, and upon the shelves around lies all the learning of the East. What more enchanting prospect to the enthusiastic Philomath, who has haply strayed (by permission) within this literary Paradise? We can imagine none. But if the delighted visitor to this Downing-street Garden of Eden, fascinated by the appearance of some rare work he sees before him, ventures to pluck of the tree of knowledge, and to handle his prize, for the purpose of glancing at its contents, he is sharply reproved by a genius loci, and informed that no one is allowed to displace even momentarily a volume, and that a reference to the catalogue is necessary before the inspection of a work is possible. And the catalogue! what are his feelings of dismay as he glances over that feeble and ill-digested compilation, which surely cannot contain the whole contents of the Library! Even if it does, they are so jumbled up together that it is wearisome and difficult in the extreme, and sometimes impossible, to exhume the work or MSS. required from out the mass of concrete matter in which it lies embedded.

It has been proposed to remove the library bodily to the British Museum, but we have not touched upon the subject for the purpose of advocating any such measure. We hold that the proper place for the India Library is in or near the India Office; and that if there is not sufficient accommodation for it, sufficient should be provided. The collection is a national one, and too valuable to be stowed away in out-of-the-way corners. Only if it is so retained in its present position, we think the Secretary of State for India should—in the name and in the cause of science, progress, and enlightened ideas—no longer keep these stores of learning practically under lock and key, but initiate the reforms at which we have hinted, and thus render easier and more popular the acquisition of Oriental literature. More especially should we hope for this from the present holder of this high office, whose own intellectual acquirements are patent to the world.

THE SUPPLEMENTARY BILL FOR ABYSSINIA.

It seems that we have not heard the last of the expenses involved in the Abyssinian campaign. A large number of confiding people fancied that the payment of a bill for five millions last year was tantamount to a discharge in full of all claims. The more sceptical however shook their heads, remembering that the charges alone for sea-transport from Bombay to Annesley Bay amounted for several months to four hundred thousand pounds a-month, and that estimates of costs incurred at different places thousands of miles apart, on behalf of an enterprise conducted avowedly without regard to expense, were by no means unlikely to need more than one revision. To such persons it was no surprise to learn that a large supplementary bill remains yet to liquidate. The five millions have grown to more than eight and a-half, and it is not quite certain that even this large sum expresses the actual outlay to a hundred thousand pounds. All we know is that the Indian Government has sent in a bill for more than seven millions, and that only in "rough accounts" forwarded by Mr. Turner, the gentleman deputed to look after the Indian expenditure. From these we learn that the sea-transport cost as much as £4,232,000, a startling total for a campaign of six months. For land-transport the charge is £1,345,000; more than half a million is set down to coals; £1,400,000 goes to baggage animals and forage; and the balance represents staff, batta, and "miscellaneous" expenses.

War is in these days a costlier luxury than ever, and there can be no worse economy than the starving of a campaign if it has to be undertaken. Circumstances over which the late Government had no control led us into Abyssinia, and "all's well that ends well" was the feeling that consoled most of us for the threepence a pound drawn from our pockets in redemption of the national honour. But the announcement of a fresh sum required for the same object was enough to account for the sharp discussion it provoked last Thursday in the House of Commons. It does at first sight seem strange that no official warning of what was to come should have been given out before the end of last July. To judge however from the explanations offered, we may fairly acquit the late Ministry of having knowingly withheld the information which they had not then received. Sir S. Northcote frankly admits that they forgot "to take into consideration the length of time which elapsed before the troops could be returned to India." That was certainly a grave oversight, but of anything like wilful suppression of facts no evidence was adduced; and critical Mr. White himself freely acquitted the late Ministry of aught worse than ignorance of what they should have known sooner. On the latter score indeed we fear they cannot be held quite guiltless. Sir Stafford pleads that the transport charges far exceeded what they had a right to reckon upon; but this plea, if tenable as regards the official estimates furnished from India, sounds rather hollow in view of the statements and calculations repeatedly thrown out by the Indian press. Did not the Bombay papers continually warn us of the tremendous cost at which the transport service to Abyssinia was being carried on; and were not our ears invaded by frequent outcries against the waste of public money involved in this or that branch of the outlay sanctioned by the Bombay Government? It was right, no doubt, to leave Sir S. Fitzgerald unfettered in his arrangements, but ought not a watchful eye to have been fixed on their financial results, and would it not have been as well to keep one ear open to the revelations of Indian journalists, even if "those mischievous newspapers" do sometimes make mistakes?

And how comes it that the Indian Government were so backward in awakening the home authorities out of their financial slumbers? It was not till the 10th of August, says Mr. Ward Hunt, that the Ministry were first led officially to suspect an error in their previous reckoning. Later telegrams from Mr. Turner set down the Indian charges at little more than five millions. Even as late as the 8th December the outlay in India was estimated at only £5,750,000. And yet both Mr. Turner and Sir S. Fitzgerald come in for ample praise on account of their "energy and ability." Is no one, then, responsible for the repeated misreckonings, and the delay in forwarding a trustworthy estimate of "the appalling sum" which, in the words of Mr. Ward Hunt, "had come upon himself and his colleagues as a great surprise?"

LORD GOUGH.

OUR obituary for the past week records the death of perhaps the oldest and certainly the most renowned of contemporary British captains. On Tuesday, the 2nd of March, Lord Gough breathed his last at St. Helen's, near Dublin, in his ninetieth year. The last nineteen years of his life were passed in the quiet of his Irish home, and to the young men of to-day his name will suggest no vivid recollection of the deeds that filled all men's mouths in days long past. But this time twenty years ago all England was eagerly awaiting the issue of that great struggle between Sikh and Sepoy which seemed to pause for breath after the dear-bought victory of Chilianwallah. On that issue depended at once the maintenance of our Indian Empire and the public estimation of a general whose last fight had been marked by disasters almost equal to a defeat. Happily for Lord Gough, the crowning victory of Goojrat rescued his fair fame from undeserved eclipse, and brought him large amends for the hasty censure implied in the sudden despatch of Sir Charles Napier from England to restore the fortunes imperilled by the recent shedding of so much precious blood to so little purpose.

A man of war from his earliest youth, Lord Gough first tasted "the delight of battle" at the capture of the Cape of Good Hope from the Dutch. The young Irishman next bore his part in the fighting at Surinam, Santa Lucia, and Porto Rico. Then came the long-contested warfare in the Peninsula, where Major Gough won fresh laurels against Soult before Oporto, received his first wound on the bloody field of Talavera, and helped his brave Irish boys of the 87th to win a French eagle at Barossa. Reinspired by his timely war-cry of Fag-a-bealach, the same boys swept the French before them at Vittoria and carried off Marshal Jourdain's own bâton. At the Nivelle, where Colonel Gough was again wounded, at the sieges of Cadiz and Tarifa, he gave fresh proof of that fiery courage which many years afterwards led him into the hottest of the fight at Chilianwallah. Then came a long rest for the veteran of the Peninsular war, a rest which, once more broken by the Chinese war of 1841-2, was not again to be his portion till after the final conquest of the Punjab. Rewarded with a baronetcy for his brilliant leading of a few thousand troops into the heart of China, Sir Hugh Gough was soon at his old work in the brief but decisive Gwalior campaign. Having drawn the teeth of Mahratta antagonism in 1843, Sir Hugh had ere long to grapple with a far more formidable foe on the North-West Frontier. The names of Moodkee, Ferozshuhur, and Sobraon at once recall the memories of a struggle which had again to be renewed in 1848, before the power of that fierce array which Runjeet Singh had first drilled into ominous efficiency was finally broken. The Punjab campaign became a necessary sequel to the battles on the Sutlej, and if Chilianwallah recalled the uncertain issues of Ferozshuhur, we may say that Sobraon was outdone in completeness by Goojrat.

It cannot well be said that Lord Gough was too highly rewarded for the victories which brought about the annexation of the Punjab. During those two campaigns against the Khalsa our hold of India hung by a thread. To Lord Gough, as head of the conquering army, we owed our deliverance from deadly peril. If he was not a very great commander, he had the merit at least of being a most successful one. His soldiers had thorough trust in the fortunate star of a chief who was sure to pull triumphantly through the direst-seeming straits. "If Gough puts his foot in it he always gets it out again," a Bengal artilleryman was overheard saying. Officers and men had a warm liking for the fine old gentleman who never spared the kind word of praise or encouragement at the right moment;* and their zeal for a commander who never knew defeat, who flinched from no danger, nor worried his men with needless exercises, more than made up for the defects in his hot-blooded strategy. For the slaughter and the blundering in the Chilianwalla jungles he was certainly not to blame, if the storm of cheers that rolled down the line of Gilbert's division when the Chief passed along just after the battle may be taken in connection with other evidence bearing on the point. We know that the steadiest and best-handled brigades suffered least, that one infantry brigade which got cruelly mangled had been hurried through the jungle with unloaded muskets and no light guns in support, that an unforeseen mistake sent the British cavalry on the right flying in wild disorder to the rear, and that Sir C. Campbell's advice to withdraw our troops from the field after the battle overcame Lord Gough's better judgment. For this last of course he himself was to blame; but his march towards Chilianwalla was shrewdly planned, if the badness of his scouting department somewhat marred the issue. If he wanted caution and due forethought, the fruits of his successful daring were generally visible enough, and Goojrat at any rate was an instance of a splendid victory unalloyed by glaring miscarriages or rash waste of life.

One quality of a good general the high-mettled Irishman never lacked. If he had commanded in the place of Lord Raglan, the victory of the Alma would have been followed up by a prompt pursuit, and the taking of Sebastopol antedated probably by a year. The blow dealt at Goojrat was followed up the very next morning by Gilbert's hot chase of the routed Sikhs to Rawal-Pindi, and of the Afghans to the mouth of the Khyber. It was the same after Sobraon; in three days our troops were close upon Lahore, and the enemy had no choice but prompt surrender. Had Lord Gough's advice regarding supplies and the siege-train been followed earlier, Sobraon, if fought at all, would have trod close on the heels of Ferozshuhur. On the whole, whatever were his faults of strategy, Englishmen may well be proud of the fiery old warrior and courteous gentleman who has just passed away in the fulness of years and honours.

* "You're a proud man, Colonel Steele," was his pithily expressive greeting to the colonel of the 2nd Fusiliers, when he reviewed the regiment after Goojrat.

SUPPLY OF BEDDING TO THE TROOPS.—His Excellency the Governor-general in Council is pleased to cancel that portion of the G.O. by the Governor-general, dated March 8, 1851, which permits commanding officers to make their own arrangements for the supply of bedding to the European soldier. Bedding will hereafter be issued in all cases to European troops by the Commissariat Department.

WHICH ARE WE TO BELIEVE?

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The Secretary of State has ruled that no sick leave taken up to the 1st July, 1868, is to form part of the eight years allowed in Rule XVI. of the new furlough regulations, whereas in Paragraph II. of the Calcutta Government order, No. 74, dated January 27, it states that leave to England on m.c., under the Regulations of 1854, is to form part of it. Talk of double government after that, the present is far more so in every way than in the days of the Court of Directors.—Yours truly, PUZZLED.

[The India Office is the final authority, of course.—ED. A.I.M.]

INDIAN MILITARY FUNDS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The military funds of the three Presidencies having been taken over by Government, it is only fair that the widows' pensions should be raised to the scale payable prior to the 1st of January, 1856.

With regard to the Bengal Military Fund, when the pensions were reduced and officers' subscriptions raised, it was distinctly stated that such should only last during the temporary embarrassed state of its finances. Owing to the amalgamation, and the consequent cessation of new members joining, it is quite impossible for the fund to recover itself. This being the action of Government, and no fault of the subscribers, common justice demands that officers' widows should no longer suffer.—Yours truly,

AN OFFICER.

THE RETIREMENT SCHEME.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Can you inform a subscriber to your paper whether the retirement scheme, under contemplation at the India Office, embraces lieutenant-colonels only, or does it make provision for the retirement of majors also, which appeared in a former scheme which I saw bruited some time ago? For my own part I do not see why the scheme should not embrace majors equally as lieutenant-colonels, for both being field officers they are equally de trop, majors being as little wanted as lieutenant-colonels, and, as we may say, vice versa. In 1861, when three hundred officers were pensioned off, the scheme was brought as low down as to embrace senior captains; under that scheme an additional pension of £200 a-year was given to lieutenant-colonels, £150 to majors, and £120 to captains; and I do not see why that scheme might not be adopted on the present occasion. The whole question is one of economy, and must be viewed in that light only; there can be no reason for pensioning off unemployed lieutenant-colonels, which does not equally apply to the pensioning off unemployed majors. The expediency of the measure in an economical point of view is so apparent at a glance, that it is inconceivable why some such plan is not at once adopted. A major in the Staff Corps is probably entitled to a captain's pension only, which he cannot retire upon if a married man; for what can an officer do in England after he has spent the prime of his life and energies in building up the British Empire in the East? Can he enter the lists in any walk of life with men whose whole lives have been spent in their native country? I might add that such a measure would only be but fair, since we have been deprived of our bonuses, for the present so-called compensation scheme is to many nil, for were I, for instance, to retire, I could not get a penny from it, simply and solely because I could not prove it. But the fairness of the measure is quite irrelevant, and the pounds, shillings, and pence view of the case is the only proper one to be taken; therefore, why pay near £800 a-year, when, by giving £191, plus £150 equal to £341, more than £400 a-year would be saved on each major? If it is urged that an officer is more likely to die in India, this economical contingency is fully met by this off-set that, when one officer would, humanly speaking, prolong his life by a residence in England, another would go on for years in India getting his promotion to lieutenant-colonel, and eventually to his colonel's off-reckonings. The matter, therefore, remains as before stated—£341 versus £768. And now excuse my talking shop so far as to ask—Why pay more?—Yours, &c.,

A SUBSCRIBER.

[The whole matter is still under consideration at the India Office.—ED. A. I. M.]

Notices of Books.

On Labour: Its Wrongful Claims and Rightful Dues, its Actual Present and Possible Future. By William Thomas Thornton. Macmillan and Co. 1869.

It is not often that we go beyond our usual domain of Indian topics to enter the province of political economy; but the subject of this book is applicable to all countries, to every clime; and the author moreover is in charge of a department of Indian administration at the India Office which perhaps has more to do with the employment of labour than any other—viz., that of Public Works. This is not the first book that Mr. Wm. T. Thornton has written upon economic questions. "Over Population" and "A Plea for Peasant Proprietors" were from his pen. However opinions may vary with regard to his views and theories, there can be but one opinion as to his earnestness and benevolence. Any man deserves well of his fellows who devotes his leisure hours, as Mr. Thornton has done, to an anxious and laborious effort to ameliorate the condition of the working man, to establish a good understanding between capital and labour, and to solve, in short, the great problem of labour's claims and dues. The book is essentially a clever book. It is also an entertaining and instructive book. Although it treats of what may be commonly called a dry subject, it is pleasant reading. There are new ideas in it, fearless asseverations, and remarkable facts. As a specimen of the first, we may allude to his arguments that price is regulated by competition alone, not by supply and demand, according to the heretofore accepted law of political economy. As an example of the second, while justifying and supporting unionism when conducted under legitimate rules and regulations, he shows that it may tend to harm when in the hands of unscrupulous men. Amongst the third is a history of the extraordinary success, and consequently of the immense benefits, which have attended well managed co-operative societies.

To those who are students in the science of political economy this work will be a useful aid, and to the general reader it will furnish matter for instruction and reflection.

Ikhwanu-s-Safa; or Brothers of Purity. Translated from the Hindustani by John Platts, Director of Public Instruction in the Central Provinces, India. London: Allen and Co. 1869.

This is a translation from a translation. The original work under the above name was a collection of about fifty Arabic treatises written ages ago by a select number of friends working together in concert. Of these treatises one only—that now before us—has been translated into Urdu, under the title common to all. That translation, imperfect as it is, has for several years served as a test book for the examination of civil and military candidates; and now Mr. Platts offers an English rendering of the Urdu in the interests of students in general. The old objections to cribs being out of vogue, we may commend this volume to readers of the Eastern as well as of their own tongue. Both alike may profit from a work which has the special advantage of having been carried through the press by the ripe scholarship of Mr. E. B. Eastwick, and is worth reading for its own sake as a curious specimen of that sort of natural philosophy which Paley and the Bridgewater Treatises made popular in England. The "argument from design" is freely handled in this Mussulman discussion on the relative excellences of men and brutes; the former of course, after a careful enumeration of all the arguments which the writers could think of as favouring the brutes, being made to win first honours. In a running accompaniment of notes the English translator explains the obscurities or rectifies the errors of the Urdu translation.

THE BENGAL CIVIL FUND.

The Pioneer remarks that the French noble of the old regime who so longed for a new sensation as to welcome even the revolution and the guillotine, may well, in his forgotten grave, feel a pang of envy at the happier lot of our friends of the Bengal Civil Service. Not only have they tasted a new sensation, but that sensation is a pleasant one—the Civil Fund is solvent! Year after year, in all shapes and on all authorities, now by an old gentleman with a craze, now by the secretary, now by the managers, now by an actuary, they have been told it is bankrupt, to be saved only by a doubling of the present heavy subscriptions, or some such heroic surgery; and now almost without warning they see in the Gazette a notice calling a formal meeting, whereat the managers will propose to increase benefits and diminish taxation! The history of the fund is very simple. It was instituted as a charitable fund, to help only the families of impoverished members; and as, while the pagoda tree still flourished such cases were expected to be rare, the help promised was great, while the charge for it was small. Year by year the yield of fruit became smaller, and thus the number of needy families would have increased, even if the very statutes of the Fund had not encouraged extravagance by practically confiscating savings; and as the Court were not only patrons but also bankers and obliging agents, things went from bad to worse with little check till 1850, when an imperfect estimate of liabilities showed a deficit of seven lakhs, which year by year, with a growing constituency and narrowing incomes, would rapidly augment. Thoroughly frightened, yet thoroughly dissatisfied with the plan of finding orphans for their dead fathers' economy, the civilians of the day cleared away this anomalous injustice; and, to make their Fund solvent, even with this extra burden, imposed on themselves and their successors a rate of subscription higher by about 150 per cent. than the old. And now after twenty years of anxiety—years in which the entreaties of some far yet heavier taxation were met by the assertions of others that they could pay no more—the waiters have won, though their opponents were right; for the recovered solvency of the Fund is due rather to the happy end of a long contest with Government than to the large contributions of its members.

THE PROPOSED CESSION OF GIBRALTAR.

The Friend of India holds that, unlike Lord Palmerston's cession of the Ionian Islands, which does not invite imitation, the abandonment of Gibraltar is a matter of Asiatic importance. In the sense that the bulk of the commerce between Asia and Europe now passes through the Mediterranean, while a still larger traffic will be attracted on the opening of the Suez Canal; that our postal route lies through its waters; that the maintenance of our supremacy in India may depend upon its being open for the passage of British troops, the Mediterranean is to us less a European sea than an outlying Asiatic lake. Whatever doubts England may entertain of the abstract equity of her occupation, however she may count the cost, and whatever regards, no doubt sincere, she may entertain for the susceptibilities of a sister nation, to us Gibraltar is the keystone of our eastern position; its possession, the assurance that we shall be able to maintain communication with our fatherland; and its loss, the subversion of that confidence in the speedy aid of England which can alone sustain us in critical times. Between her consideration for Spain and her duty to an important body of her own subjects, who, although isolated from the mass of their countrymen and exposed to the disadvantages of a tropical climate, seldom ask for sympathy in their arduous task, but never forget the claim their country has upon them. Great Britain can exercise no choice. To confer a gratuitous benefit upon Spain, she must inflict a serious injustice upon her Eastern empire, and weaken the confidence of her sons abroad. Surely the reputation for magnanimity which she would thus purchase in the European courts, supposing her Quixotry were to escape sneers, or not to be followed by such ingratitude as she has ever suffered at the hands of Spain, would be dearly bought at such a price. The cession of Gibraltar would more probably be accepted in Europe as a confession of political weakness, of the decay of Great Britain as a military power, of the growing indifference of England to her Indian Empire. With regard to the position of Gibraltar, Admiral Grey appears to us to underestimate its value. We believe good military authorities, though admitting that the port is exposed to danger from the Spanish coast, consider that the range from the fortifications embraces so wide a sweep as to practically protect the shipping from any such contingency. However friendly our relations with Spain may be in the present generation, we have no guarantee that they will always continue so; and a time might come when posterity would condemn the shortsighted policy which sacrificed a position from which, as a basis, the whole Iberian peninsula can be annoyed. And what is Ceuta? What right has Spain to Ceuta superior to ours to Gibraltar? Ceuta is pronounced by those who know it "unhealthy and wretchedly off for water." Ceuta could never be held against Spain, or Spain aided by another Power. Spain can show no such title deeds in the case of Ceuta, moreover, as the whole history of our connection with the Peninsula and the conquest of the Rock has given us to Gibraltar. Gibraltar, it seems to us, must stand or fall with the questions of Malta, Egypt, Perim, and Aden. If it is to be ceded we may have to withdraw our garrison from Malta, to strengthen our fleet on the Mediterranean station, to relax our hold of Egypt and the Red Sea, and to divert the Indian troopships to the tedious Cape route. In short, from an Anglo-Indian point of view, the dangers attending the cession are too manifold and serious to allow a doubt to be entertained on the question.

THE LATE VICEROY.

The Najm-ul Akhbar thinks that gratitude and thanks are due to those who know and perform their duty. It will be always remembered that the Viceroy was well acquainted with our language, manners, and customs. In every respect he performed and discharged his duty towards all; and this is the reason why such a friendly intercourse existed between him and the native chiefs, the good results of which are seen to this day, inasmuch as that the people have had mercy shown them, and the Viceroy is interesting himself much in the measures of relief for those afflicted with famine, and in remitting taxes. Secondly, our Governor-General has looked much toward educational measures, and has opened an easy way to this by sending, at the public expense, every year, native students to England, who, after acquiring knowledge, may obtain good appointments, rank, and distinction. This is such an excellent arrangement that the natives of India will by degrees become wise counsellors in the management of their own country. We ought therefore to be most grateful to such a kind and merciful Governor, and all join in sending a farewell address; for, besides this, observe how he managed those who were creating disturbances at Sitana, &c., and how by his wise measures the flame of rebellion was quenched; yes, all, and not only a few benefited by his acts, and it was an established rule that the lowest Government servant should meet the reward of good work.

INDEPENDENT PRINCES.

The Som Prakash points out a means of checking the confusion and disorder in the States of the independent princes of India. This is summed up in the following:—The officials appointed by the above chiefs are useless and stupid people; these should be discharged and others appointed by Government. Should it be asked where efficient men are to be found, we answer, the three Universities of the three Presidencies will supply them. The soldiery maintained by these Rajahs are more for an ornamental than a useful purpose; they should therefore be disbanded, and "the money thus spent directed to the use of establishing schools and bringing about other improvements," both for the social and the moral good of the people. Unless some such steps be determined on and put into execution by Government, nothing will improve the condition of Central India.

THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.

The Madras Times draws attention to the harsh conditions imposed on Medical officers, as compared with Military. Major So-and-So is invalided from his regiment, say in India, goes home, appears before a Medical Board and is recommended leave of absence, which is sanctioned, and renewed from time to time through the same channels, until very possibly two years and even more are passed on full pay, in his endeavours to regain his health. Surgeon So-and-So has broken down from climate, hard work, possibly including the anxieties of an epidemic; and although, mind you, being a doctor, he should be iron, and have brass and triple steel for muscles and nerves, and not break down at all,—still he does; and is also sent to England. Well, a Medical Board grant him also six months leave, but here, however compassionate and willing, they are obliged to stop; the Secretary of State for War deals with him summarily, and if he is unable from ill-health to undertake his duties at the expiration of that time, six short months in contra-distinction to the twenty-four which Major So-and-So has had—places him at once on half-pay and fills up his vacancy in the next Gazette. Many is the medical officer so served yearly; many is the remonstrance made by the "powers that be" of the department. The injustice of this has been pointed out; but no! the War Office so wills it, lest the list of the doctors should contain one superfluous or useless item. It is to be hoped that reduction fever, if it does take place in the medical department in England and its colonies, will not be extended to this country. We believe that in this very Presidency we are right in saying that the establishment of medical officers is at its minimum, and that its exigencies are great. Every doctor is more than fully occupied, and those privileges which in common with combatant officers they are allowed, and which would be willingly accorded them, are forced to be reluctantly withheld from the paucity of their numbers. It is not so very long ago that the cry went out from the army "give us doctors or we die." We know how long and frequently the cry was raised, nay, how the Army and Navy Gazette itself repeated it before it was responded to by the medical profession with the alacrity that now exists. Competition, the school at Netly, fair remuneration, and an honourable position, have brought good men and true into the service. Let us take care how we set to work to cast them out from a department which requires every member it has now got for the health and well-being of the British soldier.

Bengal.

STATION TALK.

CALCUTTA, Feb. 8.—Lord Mayo has fairly, and, as it were, by storm, won not merely the sweet voices but the hearty “hip, hip, hip, hurrahs” of the accomplished citizens of the “capital of India.” My Lord is already, and by a long way, the most popular Governor India ever had; and, what is better, bids fair to continue so. The earldom, it is undeniable, had something to do with this, especially as far as the natives are concerned; but there is no gain-saying that everything about the sporting Hibernian Count of Mayo is admirably calculated to make him a favourite with all classes. His appearance, deportment, quasi-royal style, patronage of the Opera and of the Turf, but, above all, his beaming yet polished kindliness of manner—the manner of a man who knows he can afford to unbend; who, as his countrymen say, “is not in doubt of himself”—have, along with the gracefully generous way in which he has acted towards the personal staff of his predecessor, operated powerfully in his favour. His Lordship, however, it is even now evident, aims at better things than the achievement of mere popularity. He promises to be as hard a worker, and as conscientious an exactor of work from all whom the State pays for working as was ever the illustrious Old Lion, whose firm, thoughtful brow is, as I write, being gratefully fanned by the renovating breezes of ocean midway between Comorin and Suez. In the departments it has already been discovered that the officer who skulks, or attempts to skulk, his work “will have just as uncomfortable times of it under Mayo as if John Lawrence himself had remained.” And people have begun to talk of him. His lordship is never tired of seeing matters for himself, and with his own eyes, whether that to be examined be the native slums of our city, a botched public edifice, or a line of railway that nobody appears to know how to get to pay. This proclivity to see and judge for himself explains the misunderstanding, or misreported, enunciation of his lordship, before leaving England, that he would not trust to written reports and minutes. The plan is to personally confer with the official best informed on, or most immediately connected with the question engaging Viceregal attention. Thus Sir William Meredith was summoned from the neighbourhood of Beloochistan to meet his Lordship at Bombay and tell him all about Sind, its frontier, and the regions beyond. Thus the Governor of the Andamans has been warned that if he would not lose a chance of personally conferring with the Viceroy, he must be in Calcutta at the latest before the 16th proximo. Thus his Lordship, before visiting Simla, will, in all probability, have made a little March and April tour, have been to Peshawur, met Shere Ali there, and been enlightened by the Commissioner of that Asiatic Connemara, and by Sir Donald Macleod, as to the exact whereabouts of the Wahabees across the frontier—for concerning those Oriental Fenians his Lordship has been making suspiciously close inquiries; and the information to hand on the subject my Lord must have found very copious. There is not an individual of as considerable social grade as that of bazaar shopkeeper, who, within British India, has been mixed up with the Wahabee conspiracy, everything connected with whom Government has not for some time back had at its fingers' ends. The only question now is—are these small traitors worth pulverising?—Pioneer Correspondent.

MEERUT, Feb. 5.—When I wrote to you last, which was on the 26th ult., I said that the day was bright and sunny; so it was, and no one could have speculated upon rain falling soon. There was not a cloud in the heavens; old Sol in all his splendour was running his course undisturbed. Near nightfall, however, came a sudden change, the clouds thickened together, the wind rose, and, before one could look about him, as pleasant a shower as could be wished for came pouring down. It continued raining, off and on, all that night and for forty-eight hours after, when the clouds cleared away to return a couple of days after and favour us occasionally with a few more heavy drops up to the night of the 31st ult. Since then and up to last night we have had clear and certainly very cold weather, with high winds, and exceedingly sharp and piercing. To-day we have prospects of rain again. The sun is not visible at all, and the clouds are shifting about. But with all the rain we have had and are still likely to have, there appears to be no permanent change for good in the market; prices of food-grain fluctuate so rapidly that it is impossible to write with any accuracy as to what quantity can be had now for a rupee. The bunnys have their own way still, and prices therefore vary alternately. The Commissioner of the Division and his subordinates, supported by the influential native gentlemen of the city and station, have twice or thrice met to discuss upon measures for the relief of the poor, and I was told by a very respectable native gentleman that they have resolved upon employing some 40,000 labourers for three months to excavate a canal from Sirdhanna towards Moradabad. If true, the undertaking will give ample employment to thousands of this district who are actually starving. The affair also between the gomastah and his master, the Mahajun, which I wrote about in my last, is statu quo; the one humble and coaxingly persuasive in his endeavours to get the rogue to disgorge, the other defiant, sullen and independent as to consequences. I said at the beginning of this letter that it was cloudy and more rain was in view. I am happy to say it is now raining, and pretty steadily, too; just the sort of showers the cultivators like. The walks I have taken through the fields round about and in Meerut convince me that the agriculturists have no right to complain as they do. The fields are nice and green and healthy, and are rapidly flourishing into full growth. Every field bespeaks a good harvest, and the rains now falling are favourable for the growth of several kinds of pulse and grain.

HILLS NORTH OF DEYRAH, Feb. 5.—Since the late heavy fall of rain the weather has been intensely cold. The ground yesterday, in fact the entire place, was white from the effects of the severe frost. Bright sunshine all day, with a cloudless sky, as if a fine spell of weather had set in. This morning the day broke, disclosing the whole sky covered with dense leaden-coloured clouds. Since 6 A.M. it has been snowing steadily, with every appearance of a heavy fall. I have never known the first fall of snow to commence so late in the season, and it is just possible that the present month may be a very stormy one. No news of course. I am told arrangements have been made to start a new Carriage Dak Company from Rajpore at reduced rates. For this the public are indebted to that indefatigable party, Mr. C. Self; he is truly deserving of every patronage. The value of property at present in the hills is frequently discussed; some folks think it is deteriorating. Never was there such a mistake. As a proof of this I may state that a few shops situated in the Landour Bazaar have just been purchased by a native for 9,000 rupees. There seems also to be an impression that the removal of the Convalescent Depot and occupation of Chuckrowta-hill injure the trade and value of Landour bazaar and station. Quite the reverse, many parties, particularly ladies, are deterred from living at Landour simply owing to its being occupied as an European depot. Take my word for it, there is a bright future in store for these hills, particularly Mussoorie, and every coming season will prove it; the place will be more and more resorted to yearly. As a proof of the mildness of the weather previous to the change, I may mention that the rhododendron trees growing in a sunny exposure are in full bloom, covered with a profusion of scarlet flowers. Flowers in bloom amidst a fall of snow is a singular phenomenon.

AGRA, Feb. 8th.—The weather being the most important subject in India at present, I need make no apology for beginning my letter by informing your readers that Agra has lately been blessed with several days of wet weather. The rain was not very heavy, and perhaps it is fortunate that it was not, but what has fallen has done an immense amount of good. Although too late to be of much, if any, benefit to the grain crops, it will give us what we want even more than we do grain, that is grass. Grain though scarce and dear was and is procurable, but cattle were badly off for grass, indeed there was none, only roots. This state of affairs will now be changed, and in the course of two or three weeks there should be an abundance of grass. The change in the weather has too, I am glad to hear, acted in a most beneficial manner on the health of the district. That terrible scourge, small-pox has, I am told, almost disappeared, and with the exception of coughs and colds, there are no complaints of extraordinary sickness. We should consider ourselves fortunate that small-pox, has not been more prevalent amongst the European population. As it is I heard of very few cases amongst the latter class, and those who were attacked were mostly children, who had the disease in its mildest form, and got over it in a few days. With the exception of one or two fatal cases among the troops, I believe no Europeans died from the disease. I heard a rumour on Saturday evening last to the effect that H.M.'s 77th Regiment, who will relieve the 41st (The Welsh) Regiment now here, were detained near Umballa in consequence of small-pox breaking out in the corps, and that they had received orders to halt until the disease had abated, and the 41st had been ordered to hold fast at Agra until relieved by the 77th. This morning I hear, however, that four companies of the 41st leave this en route for Subathoo on the 11th. This last rumour makes me hope that the former one is without foundation, and only originated owing to the general prevalence of small-pox and the likelihood of the disaster occurring.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

LADY MANSFIELD.—A Calcutta paper says that Lady Mansfield will probably leave the Presidency about the 15th inst. for Umballa.

THE WEATHER AT AGRA.—We have been blessed with more rain at an opportune moment, and of a description that gives every hope of a comparatively abundant harvest. We need no more now to produce an average yield. The prospects of the people have brightened, and we consider that prices are now at their highest, and they had never reached actual famine rates except at a few places. The bright sunshine following upon abundant moisture now prevailing is exactly what was needed. It is not possible to estimate the extent of the calamity that has been averted, but enough to know that the lives of thousands and the misery of millions were involved.—Delhi Gazette.—Feb. 9.

A CONTRADICTION.—The Pioneer asserts that the announcement in which a North-West contemporary (the Delhi Gazette) persists, that fresh disturbances had broken out in Hazara, has not a shadow of foundation.

DR. OLDHAM.—The Englishman says it is likely Dr. Oldham, Geological Surveyor to the Government of India, will proceed to the Eastern districts of Bengal to report on the character and extent of the changes occasioned by the recent earthquake.

KHYBER PASS.—The Adam Khayl, the Khuki Khayl, and the Katmar Khayl, tribes of the Khyber Pass, are reported to be fighting now amongst themselves. The killed on both sides number between four and seven every day.

HYDERABAD PUBLIC WORKS.—The Government of India has sanctioned the proposal of the Resident of Hyderabad to allot 7½ lakhs of rupees for expenditure on the public works of the Hyderabad Assigned Districts during 1868-69.

DEATH OF COLONEL J. F. HALL.—We observe an announcement of the death, at Erinpoora, on the 28th January, of Colonel J. F. D'E. W. Hall, of the Bengal Infantry, Commandant of the Erinpoora Irregular Force.

OFFICIAL CHANGE.—The Delhi Gazette understands that Lieut.-colonel Bristow, Deputy Commissioner of Jhelum, is to be appointed to the charge of Kashmir during the summer of this year, and Surgeon H. Bellew, civil surgeon of Peshawur, is to proceed to Sree-nuggur in April, and assume medical charge for the coming season.

CHOLERA COMMISSION.—Assistant-surgeons Cunningham and Lewis, of the Indian and British medical services respectively, who were selected by the Senate of the Army Medical School at Netley to investigate the origin and propagation of cholera, have arrived in Calcutta.

THE EX-AMIR OF KABUL.—The ex-Amir Mahomed Azim Khan and Sirdar Abdool Rahman Khan are said to have ordered supplies for themselves and two hundred retainers, from Sundar Shah, a banker of Banu. They are likely, says our Lahore contemporary, to accept the terms on which the Government have offered them an asylum in our territories. It is believed that an allowance of Rs. 1,500 per mensem will be made to them on the condition that they no longer interfere in Cabul politics.

MILITARY.—Consequent on Colonel Walton's proceeding to Europe on furlough, Captain Macnamara will, says the Englishman, come down from Nynee Tal to take up the duties of Military store-keeper. He will be succeeded as Station Staff Officer of Nynee Tal by Lieutenant the Hon. C. Dutton, late extra aide-de-camp to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief. Lieutenant-colonel S. Becher has, we learn, been appointed to, and has assumed command of, the Jhelum garrison.

A CURIOUS TALE.—The Mofussilite narrates a curious story. At Kytul a bunneah, having consulted Mahadeo about the chances of rain falling, and being assured there was no fear, laid in grain to the utmost extent of his cash and credit. The day after the grain arrived rain fell for forty-eight hours, the price fell from 11 to 17 seers per rupee, and the speculative bunneah threw himself down a well and killed himself. The above is, our contemporary has been assured, a fact.

NUSSEERABAD.—The Artillery mess-house was burnt down on the morning of February 5. The fire originated in the chimney, and was first observed a little after nine o'clock. There was abundance of help speedily at hand, but the flames having once caught the chopper roof, the squirts of fire engines were all but useless. A high wind was blowing at the time, and danger was apprehended for some of the neighbouring bungalows; but happily no further damage occurred.

REMAINS OF GREEK ART.—It is said that some interesting remains of Greek art have been exhumed from the bed of the Indus, at a village called Rokri, in the Mianwali sub-division of the Banu district. Mr. R. Egerton brought the first instalment of these curiosities, in the shape of three beautifully sculptured heads, which are now in the Lahore Central Museum. Mr. Priestley, the Assistant Commissioner of the sub-division, has recently exhumed some further remains.

RELIEF WORKS IN JEYPORE.—The Maharajah of Jeypore has at present 17,179 persons employed on public works, amongst which are improvements and extensions of the roads within the Jeypore Raj. His Highness has also expended Rs. 20,000 on the purchase of grain for distribution to the poorer classes, and has abolished all sorts of taxation on grain within his territory, in perpetuity, to enable the Mahajuns to import freely without the interference of the Jeypore Durbar.

TRIAL FOR EMBEZZLEMENT.—Mr. Von Hafen, late assistant agent of the Punjab Railway, who is charged with embezzlement, was being tried on the 2nd of February in the Court of the Commissioner, Lahore; he elected to be tried without a jury. The Commissioner was assisted by three assessors, Colonel W. Smith, R.E., Mr. Higgins, and Mr. Fink, Deputy Accountant-General. We learn from the Delhi Gazette that Mr. Von Hafen has since been condemned, by the Commissioner of Lahore, to two years and a half's rigorous imprisonment.

CALCUTTA UNIVERSITY.—The Englishman states that the Senate of the Calcutta University has at length decided on abandoning the use of Abercrombie's two text-books on Mental and Moral Science. "When the news of this change reaches Scotland it may wring a tear from Dr. Duff; but we may forget the grief even of an eminent man in the thought that future generations of Indian students will be spared the profitless labour which the pages of Abercrombie have inflicted on their less fortunate predecessors."

DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE.—The Kuppoothulla authorities have solemnly pronounced a dissolution of the marriage between the Rajah and Miss Hodges, which was celebrated in 1859, in Jullundhur. Indian Public Opinion understands that at a conference between Mr. Cunningham on the part of the Rajah, and Mr. Jardine on the part of the lady, the preliminaries of an arrangement have been agreed to, by which a moderate provision has been made by the Rajah for his late wife and the two children of the marriage. Litigation has thus been avoided, to the credit of all parties concerned.

RELIEF WORKS IN RAJPOOTANA.—In order to afford employment to the suffering poor, the agent to the Governor-General in Rajpootana has commenced the construction of a road 15½ miles long, to connect the cantonment of Nusseerabad with the Agra and Ahmedabad road at a place called Munglewass. For this work Government has sanctioned the sum of rupees 58,769, which it is estimated to cost. The agent to the Governor-General has been requested to submit an application for such a lump sum as he thinks will be needed to carry on all relief works likely to be put in hand, specifying each work and the sum to be spent on it.

RELIEF WORKS IN THE N.W.P.—The Government of India has sanctioned a grant of Rs. 1,75,000 on account of relief works in the North-Western Provinces, to be set on foot by the Public Works Department, apart from the operations which will be carried out from ordinary Imperial and local funds. Government has also authorised the expenditure, by the Government of the North-Western Provinces, of Rs. 1,50,000 for the relief of the helpless, either in special grants or by supplementing private subscriptions. It is impossible, however, at present to estimate with even approximate accuracy the sum that may eventually be required on this account.

JEYPORE.—The Jeypore Chief has seized a happy opportunity of evincing his respect for and loyalty towards the British Government. A certain Seth, Tejram by name, had the title of Rao Sahib conferred upon him for his assistance and fidelity to us in 1857. He was then and has since been residing at Nagpore; Jeypore is his native city, and he lately visited it. Disappointed that the officials there would not recognise his title, he appealed to the Maharajah, who summoned him to his presence, received him in open durbar, and, after reading his credentials, issued an order requiring the recognition throughout his dominion of the title conferred by the paramount power on one of his subjects, himself setting the example by conferring a khillut on the Seth with all the usual ceremonies.

OFFICERS ON FURLOUGH.—From an official return it appears that while only 19 officers of the Bengal army (that is, Staff Corps, Cavalry, Infantry, and Medical Department) went on furlough on private affairs in the year 1866, 25 in 1867, and 12 in the first half of 1868, or a total of 56 in two and a-half years, no less than 105 have gone to England on this account in the seven months following the issue of the new furlough regulations—that is, between 1st July, 1868, and 1st February, 1869. Contrary to anticipations, the number of officers who have gone home on sick certificate has hardly diminished, the number who went on that account in 1866 being 146; in 1867, 114; and 64 in the first half of 1868; while 65 have gone in the seven months during which the new rules have been in operation.

A COMPLAINT FROM THE PUNJAB.—We, Indian Public Opinion, think that the officers of the Punjab Commission, whose hopes of promotion have been so long deferred that their hearts must indeed be sick, will be astonished to hear that the vacancy of a Commissionership in the Central Provinces, caused by Mr. Robert Egerton's elevation to the Financial Commissionership of the Punjab, has been filled up by the appointment of Mr. C. E. Bernard, a civilian of ten years' standing, of which some two years have been spent in England. Mr. Bernard was a contemporary at Haileybury of Messrs. Lyall, Saunders, Elsmie and Burney, now serving in the Punjab—none of whom have as yet attained the position of pucca Deputy Commissioner in this much favoured province. It would appear that Mr. Bernard, who served for a time as Assistant-Commissioner in the Punjab, owes his elevation to the fact of his being a nephew of Sir John Lawrence, who so lately boasted that he never made an appointment from personal motives.

LADY MAYO'S DRAWING-ROOM.—The event of the week (writes the Indian Examiner of 6th February) has been the Drawing-room. Nothing like it in splendour or completeness has been seen in Calcutta within the memory of the oldest inhabitant. The dresses of the ladies would require the pen of a Moore or a Præd to describe them, and the spirits of the gentlemen yielded to the enchantment of the beautiful scene that surrounded them, and they seemed to forget for the nonce the reserve and gaucherie which they used to make a point of bringing with them on some not distant occasions, to which, under the new regime, it would not be considerate to refer too exactly. The arrangements that were made conduced, in the highest degree, to place the visitors at their ease, and to conduct the ceremonies with due dignity and freedom from interruption. When the Countess left her seat and advanced among the company (none of the ladies, whatever may be their comparative estimates of one another's costume, will, I am sure, deny that she was the best dressed lady in the rooms) the coup d'œil was really splendid. The demeanour of the Earl and Countess was truly regal, and gave a tone to all that brilliant assembly. The courtesy and gentlemanly bearing of the new Aides-de-Camp were the subject of general remark, and it is even hoped that under the influence of such examples one of the old Aides-de-Camp, who affects the language of the cabstand and the Trades' Union, may be induced to dilute his vocabulary, and not make so much use of a certain blank adjective, which should certainly never be uttered within the range of cars polite, but which he is too much accustomed to press into his conversation on great occasions—the Viceregal visit to the Opera, to wit—or to folly. Perhaps now that he has got a monopoly of the word in question he will keep it in his head, or some other empty place.

THE INDIAN STAFF CORPS.—We have received the following memorandum from India with a tabular statement appended; the latter we reserve for another issue:—Two years ago a statement was circulated showing that the number of field officers in the three staff corps was far in excess of the requirements of the service. That this excess will become more disproportionate yearly is clearly shown by the annexed statement. Casualties are now rare, and retirements have almost ceased. In 1868 they were as follows in the three staff corps, viz., died 33, retired 15, resigned 3, cashiered 1, placed on half-pay 2, killed in action 1, total 55, or about 2½ per cent. It will be seen from the statement that in 1878 there will be 1,398 lieutenant-colonels (including brevet-colonels and major-generals), 733 majors and only 163 captains in the three staff corps, or deducting 3 per cent. for casualties the numbers will then be about 1,030 lieutenant-colonels, 540 majors, and 117 captains, and the survivors of these will all eventually succeed to colonels' pension and allowances, and unless some means are speedily devised for inducing lieutenant-colonels to retire the field officers in 1890 drawing colonel's pension and allowances will amount to about 750, costing Government, at £1,124 each, the enormous sum of £809,280 per annum. In addition to the above sum the colonel's pension and allowances of the local officers of cavalry and infantry will amount to at least £160,000 yearly. By the Royal Warrant of June 15, 1864, officers of the staff corps who attained the rank of lieutenant-colonel previously to Feb. 18, 1861, are placed on the general list of colonels of the British army, and under this warrant upwards of ninety staff corps brevet-colonels have been already transferred to this list. From the annexed statement it will be seen that the number of lieutenant-colonels in the three staff corps will amount to 1,398 in 1878, or deducting casualties at 3 per cent., the numbers in 1883, when all will be brevet-colonels, will amount to nearly 900. These will all be transferred to the British list of colonels, and the result will be that the British colonels will be swamped by the staff corps colonels, and promotion to the rank of major-general much retarded.—R. R.—Jubbulpore, Feb., 1869.

Madras.

THE SOUTHERN DIVISION.—We learn, on excellent authority, that on [General Duke's tour of command expiring, in April next, the Southern Division will cease to exist, in consequence of the paucity of troops now located in it. Trinchinopoly itself will, we presume, be formed into a Brigade command.—Madras Times.

MANUFACTURE OF SNIDER RIFLES IN INDIA.—We (Madras Atheneum) are informed that orders have been issued in England for the preparation at once of everything connected with the manufacture of ammunition for the breech-loading Snider Rifles. Plans of buildings are also expected from the Secretary of State for India, and Colonel R. Cadell, Commissary of Ordnance, Fort St. George, has been recommended by the Inspector General of Ordnance and Magazines to be the Superintendent of the combined factories at St. Thomas' Mount.

CIVIL ITEMS.—Mr. Ballard, Collector and Magistrate at Malabar, has been appointed Acting Resident at the Court of Travancore, in room of Mr. Newill, who goes to Europe on leave. Mr. Ballard has accepted the appointment, in which he will probably be confirmed should Mr. Newill not return to India. The Malabar Collectorship has not yet been filled up.

CONSULTING ARCHITECT AT MADRAS.—The Government of Madras having shown that the services of a professional architect are required in the Presidency, the Viceroy has, according to the Englishtman, recommended to the Secretary of State the creation of the appointment of Consulting Architect to Government, on a salary of Rs. 1,200 per mensem.

MADRAS BREAKWATER.—We observe that the Madras Harbour Committee have finally closed their proceedings by recommending Colonel Orr's proposal for the straight line of breakwater, 6,250 feet long—from Messrs. Parry's to the north side of the railway station at Royapoorum—and at a parallel distance of 1,200 yards from the shore, in 7½ to 8 fathoms water.

OFFICIAL CHANGES.—We (Madras Mail) hear that Colonel A. C. Pears, Postmaster-General at Madras, is to retire from the service in the beginning of next year under the Uncovenanted Service Annuity rules. It is also stated that Mr. Stuart, the postmaster at Bombay, is likely to be Mr. Pears' successor. By this arrangement the new-comer will receive an addition of 550 rupees to his present salary, which is 1,200 rupees.

SEWING MACHINES FOR THE MADRAS COMMISSARIAT DEPARTMENT.—The local Government have asked the Secretary of State for India to send out to this Presidency three sewing machines for the use of the Commissariat Department, for the purpose of sewing tents required for the army, of which large numbers are now being made up by contract. We learn that samples of cloth tacked from stitching and thread are to be forwarded with the requisition, to enable the manufacturers in England to adapt the machines to the work required of them.—Madras Mail.

SUGAR CROPS.—We are indebted to a correspondent for the following:—"In the southern pergunnahs of Bijnoor heavy rain has at last fallen, and which seems to have been pretty general all over the district; the prices of grain have fallen, and ploughing has already commenced, which will enable the sugar-cane for next season's crop to be planted. As the cane is so long in the ground, nearly a whole year, this rain has saved the country, the prosperity of which is dependent on the sugar crops, and which it was feared could not have been planted had this rain not fallen.—Athenæum.

SEASON REPORTS.—GANJAM, Jan. 25.—Rice retailed fifteen seers, raggy twenty-seven. Markets easy.—VIZAGAPATAM, Jan. 25.—Rainfall, none. Market supply good. Public health good. Pasture limited. Rice selling at three seventy-one; raggy, two cipher seven; cholera, two twenty per Madras garce.—COCANADA, Jan. 25.—No rain. Rice is being bought for Madras and the neighbouring districts. Markets well supplied. Average retail prices:—Rice, sixteen seers a rupee; raggy, thirty seers; cholera, thirty seers. No cholera. A little fever and ague, and cattle disease. Pasturage scarce. Distress from scarcity of water is increasing.

MAHOMEDAN CONVERTS.—It seems that the report of four Europeans having become perverts to Mahomedanism at Madras is true after all. The Mail states that the four—a baker, a railway fireman, and two seamen, have been entertained at an elegant repast, and considers it probable that, after an enforced abstinence of some duration, they did fair justice to the pillau and mutton set before them. After they have undergone the painful rite of circumcision, they are to be married to fair daughters of Islam, and silk clothes and white robes are being made for the marriage procession, which is to be conducted through various parts of the town.

THE "RENOWN."—The following passengers have booked to leave Madras in the ship Renown for London:—Lieut.-Col. H. H. and Mrs. O'Connell three children, and servant, Captain H. B. Hayward, Captain A. A. and Mrs. Davidson and family, Captain R. N. Surplice, Captain H. O. W. and Mrs. Smith, Rev. A. and Mrs. Dibb and family, Rev. E. and Mrs. Symons, Lieut. C. Erskine, Misses Cherry, Miss Clarke, and European servant, Major A. and Mrs. Harris and family, R. C. Dibb, Esq., W. J. Vansomeren, Esq., for four ladies and two children, Mr. Breithaupt's two children, and Mrs. Hick's child, Major and Mrs. Douglas and four children, and about ten invalids, two insanes, and seven convicts.—Madras Standard, Feb. 3rd.

CONVICTS SENTENCED TO TRANSPORTATION.—The following is a statement showing the number of convicts sentenced to transportation for life in the Madras Presidency during each year from 1860 to 1867, inclusive:—1863, 60; 1864, 140; 1865, 124; 1866, 106; 1867, 123. In addition to the above, the Government of India wished to be informed whether the amount of jail accommodation in Madras, either actually existing, or in course of construction, would be sufficient for the probable number of prisoners which would remain if deportation to Port Blair were restricted to the case of life convicts. In reply to the latter question, the Inspector General of Jails is of opinion that the existing jail accommodation, in addition to that either in course of construction or in contemplation, will not suffice for the number of prisoners if deportation should be limited to convicts sentenced to transportation for life. On the contrary, he thinks that if the existing order, which was republished in Madras in May, 1867, and since which all convicts sentenced for periods less than fourteen years have been detained in this country, should remain in force, it is probable that it will be found necessary to increase the accommodation in order to provide for these classes.

DECENTRALISED FINANCE.—The Governments of Madras and Bombay have, we hear, given a general assent to Sir Richard Temple's Financial scheme. We do not refer to the budget, of course; but to the proposal that Sir Richard is about to make for adjusting the financial relations of the provisional Governments to the Government of India. Under that scheme, the Government of India will demand a certain sum from each of the provincial Governments as its quota towards the imperial revenue, and will leave it (subject to approval) to settle its own budget, and expend the surplus revenue it may raise. There are those who think that this plan involves no practical change, that financial matters will go on just as they have been doing. It seems to us, however, that the scheme is the introduction of the thin end of a wedge that may lead to very important results. The plan, it will be observed, is partly of a centralising and partly of a decentralising character. It concentrates more directly in the hands of the Supreme Government all the imperial expenditure, and it gives to the provincial Governments greater discretion as to the levying of taxes and the expenditure of local revenues. We fancy that this must have a tendency at once to strengthen the central Government and to raise the characters of the provincial Governments.

OFFICIAL CHANGES.—By a late letter from Belgaum we learn that Major J. Thacker was about to leave for Poona to take over charge of the Office of Examiner Commissariat, Barrack, and Clothing Departments, from Major W. Gray, who is about to proceed to England for the recovery of his health. It was believed at Belgaum that Major J. S. D. Bolton, who has lately returned to India from medical certificate to Europe, and is now temporarily employed at Ahmedabad, would succeed Major Thacker in the Commissariat Department at Belgaum.—Bombay Gazette.

GAJETTES AT MAZAGON CASTLE.—The last week has flitted over Mazagon Castle in one continued round of feasting and rejoicing on account of the celebration of the marriage, which took place on February 7, of Messrs. Manockjee and Cowasjee, sons of Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, Bart. Each evening had its appointed number of guests from different sections of the community; and the hospitalities extended to all were more than might have been expected from the high position and wealth of the honoured host. The congregation of people at the marriage was, as regards numbers, something that has not been seen for some years past on similar occasions in Bombay.—Times of India.

LARKHANA.—The commissioner in Sind reached Larkhana on the 22nd January, in company with Mr. Moore and Major Lambert, and held a durbar on the 23rd in the compound of the Mooktyarcar's cutchery. He presented the foremost of the zemindars with loongees. Captain Dodd, the deputy-collector of that place, was not present at the durbar, having gone on circuit on the same day on which the commissioner arrived. Captain Gillespie, the late acting-collector of Shikarpoor, and Lieut. Simpson, the police superintendent, were present. The commissioner left Larkhana on the following Tuesday for Shikarpoor. There was a slight rainfall on the 23rd ultimo. Severity of cold was felt in the mornings and evenings. Grain and other provisions are described as not so cheap as last year.—Sindian, Feb. 3.

CHANGES IN THE DELTA OF THE INDUS.—An important correspondence has been placed at the disposal of the press in the "Editor's Box" of the Commissioner's office at Kurrachee. From this correspondence it appears that the River Indus is gradually changing its channel from the Delta to the sea, or, rather, diverting its outpour from one channel to the other. The principal mouths of the river are known by the names of the Hujamree or Oochta, which flows past Khetty; and the other by that of the Keddeewaree or Suttah. The latter has recently been gradually silting up; so much so, in fact, that in one portion there are only about three feet of water in it, so that the natives can wade across from one bank to the other; while the Hujamree mouth is gradually extending in breadth and depth, and may now actually be regarded as the main channel of the river.

THE NEW BARRACKS AT KAMPTEE.—We talked a week or two ago about barracks, and pointed out how careful Government ought to be in spending money for them. A flaming example has come quick upon our words, and is causing a good deal of talk in military circles. Dr. Rauking, our Sanitary Commissioner, has inspected the station at Kamptee, where some magnificent barracks are being erected. He has condemned them before a soldier has put his foot in them. That is the way the money goes. Eleven millions sterling is to be spent on barracks, and there is no certainty that any one of them will continue in use. How many lacs of rupees have been buried in the hills at Wellington? Who knows whether the grand barracks at Bangalore will not meet a similar fate? Lacs upon lacs have been, and are being, expended, and yet nobody knows how water is to be got.—Mail Budget, January 30.

MILITARY.—Lieutenant-Colonel R. M. Westropp, commandant of the Poona Horse, has arrived in Bombay on a month's leave, preparatory to his proceeding to Europe on furlough, having, on the 1st instant, handed over the command of the regiment at Seroor to Captain C. D'U. La Touche, second in command; but it is very probable that Colonel F. A. E. Lock, second in command of the 3rd Light Cavalry, will be eventually nominated to succeed Lieutenant-Colonel Westropp during his absence on furlough, he having strong claims for employment in command, in consequence of active and distinguished service in the Abyssinian campaign, and being an officer of 25 years' service.—We hear from Poona that Surgeon Thomas C. Brady, 1st battalion 8th (King's) Regiment, is about to be invalided to England, and that on return of Deputy-Inspector General H. C. Foss from duty to Aden—who is expected to arrive on the 13th inst. by the incoming troopship Malabar—Staff Surgeon G. Auchinleck, M.D., at present on general duty in Bombay, will be appointed to the medical charge of the regiment.

ARRIVAL OF THE ARCHBISHOP OF GOA.—His Grace the Archbishop of Goa arrived in Bombay on the afternoon of Feb. 7th, by the steamer Phlox, and landed at the Wellington Pier. From an early hour on the morning of the 8th a large number of the clergy and laymen, subject to his Grace's jurisdiction, began to assemble at the pier awaiting his arrival. At about 12 o'clock, the steamer having been signalled, a large gathering of the elite of the Portuguese community was soon afterwards formed at the pier at two o'clock. The Bandora, with a party on board, steamed out to meet the Phlox, and as both steamers came within a few yards of each other the party on board the Bandora burst forth into loud cheers. Shortly afterwards his Grace was conveyed on board the Bandora to the bunder, where on landing he was again greeted with vociferous "Vivas" as before. As he was going up to his carriage the crowd of Catholics at the bunder flocked round his Grace to kiss his ring and receive his blessing. From the bunder, the Archbishop went to his temporary residence at the Colaba Chapel, followed by the greater part of those who were at the pier.

LOSS OF THE SHIP "L'AGOUHANNA."—The coasting steamer Phlox, which arrived on the 7th of February from Goa, brought the captain and crew of the ship L'Agouhanna of Liverpool. This vessel was bound to Bombay with coal, and was burnt some thirty miles off Hurnee, on the 3rd instant. She was a fine vessel of over a thousand tons. The origin of the fire is not, we believe, positively known; it is supposed, however, to have been a case of spontaneous combustion. The fire was first discovered on the 2nd, when every effort was made to extinguish it. In spite of all that could be done, the flames took possession of the ship, and it was soon evident that nothing could save her. Efforts were then made to save the property of those on board, and these efforts, we are glad to know, were successful. About an hour after the crew took to the boats the masts went by the beam, and the vessel was apparently a mass of fire. The boats made for Hurnee, and such was the glare emitted from the blazing vessel that it could be distinctly seen by them after they reached the land. Captain Kennedy, we may add, is not the captain of that name who was in command of the ill-fated Wauchope when that vessel was burnt in Bombay harbour.

RETIREMENT OF ENSIGN SHORE.—Honorary Ensign and Deputy-Commissary of Ordnance T. Shore, at present in charge of the Ordnance Department at Kurrachee, intends retiring from the service during the course of this month, and will proceed to England by the next Indian troop ship. The following order, in reference to Ensign Shore's departure, has been issued by Major-General Sir G. Malcolm, K.C.B., Commanding Sind Division of the Army:—"Kurrachee, Feb. 3, 1869. On the departure of Ensign T. Shore, R.A., from this Division, with a view of ultimately returning to England, the Major-General records the sense he entertains of his good services, always performed to the satisfaction of his superiors. Ensign Shore entered the Royal Marines in the year 1827; discharged from that corps owing to ill health, he joined the British Legion during the civil war in Spain, under Sir de Lacy Evans, and served in that campaign during 1835-36-37. In 1838 he enlisted as a gunner in the Hon. East India Company's service, and was engaged at the capture and storming of Aden on the 19th January, 1839; promoted to sergeant in 1838, and sub-conductor in 1841, he has passed the various grades up to his present rank and position. The Major-General congratulates Ensign Shore at the prospect of his early retirement, on a substantial pension, which his well conducted and often responsible duties for upwards of thirty years entitled him to." Ensign Shore served also at the siege and capture of Mooltan in January, 1849, and for this service received a medal.

THE CIVIL COURTS OF THE BOMBAY PRESIDENCY.—A Bill "To Consolidate and Amend the Law Relating to the District and Subordinate Civil Courts in the Presidency of Bombay" has been introduced in the Supreme Legislative Council. The statement of objects and reasons, which is as follows, bears the signature of the Hon. Mr. M. J. Shaw Stewart, and is dated the 11th Jan.:—"The object of this Bill is to consolidate the present obscure and scattered law relating to civil courts in Bombay, and to make certain amendments therein. One of these amendments refers to the duty of appointing subordinate judges, and on this point there is a difference of opinion between the Government of Bombay and the High Court. The Government points out that this duty naturally pertains to the executive and sees no reason for transferring it to the High Court. The High Court (differing in this from the Court of 1864, whose opinion coincided with that stated above) recommends that "all commissions of appointment should be issued to the subordinate judges by Government on the nomination of the High Court." The Bill follows in this and some other minor points the opinion of the Government of Bombay, but the Council has before it the views of the High Court, and if the Bill is referred to a select committee these views will receive the fullest consideration. The reason for bringing this Bill before the Council of the Governor General is that, as the jurisdiction of the Bombay High Court over existing courts will be affected by its provisions, it cannot be passed by the Council of the Governor of Bombay."

THE STATE OF SIROHI.—We are informed that considerable excitement prevails on Mount Aboo respecting the doings of an outlawed Thakoor of the small state of Sirohi, in which Mount Aboo is situated. The outlaw in question, it may be remembered, some months back plundered the village of Mudar, on the high road between the military cantonments of Deesa and Erinpoorah, and was for a lengthened period afterwards sought for by detachments from both these stations. At one time reports were rife that the Thakoor had been seen comfortably located in his own village; at another it was as confidently asserted that he had fled the country and taken refuge in either the remote territory of Bikaner, or the scarcely less distant districts of Guzerat. Neither the political nor military officers concerned appeared to have the least reliable intelligence of the outlaw's whereabouts. Suddenly, a few weeks back, an outpost of the Erinpoorah legion was attacked by the "enemy;" the fight ending in one man being killed and several others wounded. At length, not being able to seize the real delinquent, the civil authorities of the district appear to have captured a half-brother of the rebel's. And this has further excited the ire of the adherents to the Thakoor's cause, as evidenced by mysterious reports that reprisals are to be made on the luckless Europeans resident at Aboo. It is also stated that the same was notified by placards posted in conspicuous places on the road to the station. Naturally no one much cares for such manifestoes, and the few Europeans on Aboo are quite competent to deal with any number of men the Thakoors of Sirohi could bring to the front. But, on the other hand, mischief might be caused by a foolhardy attempt of desperate men, and we can only hope the district officials may have evinced greater aptitude for the protection of the public at Aboo than they appear to have been showing in the surrounding country.—Times of India.

N.I., surprised a party of rebels north of the Nerbudda, and captured twenty-three prisoners; was employed as brigade major to the Madras troops in the Saugor and Nerbudda territories during the Gwalior campaign in 1843-44.

FURLOUGHS—MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

Jan. 26.—No. 103.—In modification of existing rules, and in continuation of G.G.O. No. 34, dated 11th inst., it is announced for general information that an officer who may have appeared before a medical board at Fort William, and been recommended by it for furlough to Europe, may either embark at Calcutta, or proceed via Bombay, without further examination by a medical board at the latter place; and in either case his furlough will commence from date of embarkation.

When an officer desires to proceed via Bombay, he will word his application accordingly; and the general order will specify that he has permission to embark at Bombay.

Officers who are not stationed at or near the Presidency, or who, in proceeding from their stations to Bombay, would not ordinarily pass through Calcutta, must present themselves before the board at Bombay, and obtain furlough on medical certificate from the Government of that Presidency, as at present.

An officer proceeding to Europe on furlough on private affairs from any part of the Bengal Presidency will also be allowed the same indulgence of reckoning his furlough from the date of his departure from Bombay, should he apply for permission to embark there; but it must be distinctly understood that he can obtain the furlough, as at present, only from the Government of his own Presidency, and that he cannot embark until it has been actually granted.

The preparatory leave to the port of embarkation, whether the officer is proceeding on furlough on private affairs or on medical certificate, is, in all ordinary cases, limited to thirty days.

ROYAL SCHOOL FOR OFFICERS' DAUGHTERS.

No. 112.—With reference to G.G.O. No. 368 of 1868, the following military letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 448, dated Dec. 23 last, is published for general information and guidance with reference to paragraph 3:—

Military.—No. 448.

India-office, London, Dec. 23, 1868.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

Sir,—With reference to the despatch to your Excellency, dated Feb. 24 last, No. 59, I have to acquaint you that the first nomination to the Royal School for Officers' Daughters at Bath, under the arrangement therein communicated, has been conferred on Miss Amy Fitzgerald, daughter of the late Major C. M. Fitzgerald, of the Bengal staff corps.

2. You will cause this nomination to be made known to the army in such manner as you may think fit.

3. It is probable that some time will elapse before another nomination will be at the disposal of the Secretary of State; but it is desirable that any claims which may be preferred should be forwarded to this office with full particulars, in order that they may be registered for consideration on the occurrence of a vacancy.—I have, &c.,

ARGYLL.

DEPARTURE OF THE CAMP OF THE LIEUT. GOVERNOR, N.W.P.

No. 423a.—In continuation of G.O. No. 1,054a, dated Sept. 5 last, it is hereby notified that the camp of his Honour the Lieut. gov., N.W. Provinces, will leave Cawnpore on March 3, arrive at Futtehpore on the 6th, and at Allahabad on the 15th.

MR. D. G. BARKLEY'S FURLOUGH CLAIMS.

Fort William, Jan. 26.—No. 684.—Read office memorandum of the home dept., No. 46, dated 7th inst., forwarding certain documents regarding the eligibility of Mr. D. G. Barkley, Bengal C.S., for two years' furlough to Europe.

Resolution.—The Accountant gen., Punjab, reports that Mr. Barkley's service reckons from Dec. 29, 1867; that he had sick leave to Europe for 15 months in 1862-63; and that his actual service up to Sept. 23, 1868, when he left Mooltan on subsidiary leave preparatory to embarking for Europe, amounts to 9 years, 5 months, and 26 days; and that he is therefore entitled, under the new rules, to 2 years' furlough on private affairs. This report is manifestly incorrect. Mr. Barkley, by his actual service, has indeed gained 2 years' furlough, but against this must be set the amount of sick leave he has already had, viz., 15 months, thus leaving only 9 months to his credit.

Rule 29 has no bearing on the point at issue. That rule merely declares the aggregate amount of leave remaining to be taken during an officer's entire service. It in no way alters the rules in Chapter I. for taking such leave.

RETIREMENT.—The following officer has submitted his resignation:—Mr. R. L. Davis, clerk, 1st assistant, 2nd grade, office of the Chief Engineer and Secretary to the Government, Punjab, Public Works Department, is permitted to resign his appointment, at his own request, with effect from 21st January.

ARRIVALS FROM EUROPE.—The undermentioned officers have reported their return from England:—Lieut.-colonel G. G. Anderson, of Infantry; Lieut.-colonel C. C. Drury, of the Bengal Staff Corps; Assistant-surgeon C. Prentis, of the Medical Department; and Lieut. J. S. Melville, Unattached—date of arrival at Fort William, 20th January, 1869. The Rev. G. D. Symonds, a junior chaplain on the Bengal Establishment, reported his return from leave on the 11th January; Mr. Symonds' services are placed at the disposal of the Government of the Punjab.

PENSIONS TO NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICERS.—The undermentioned non-commissioned officer and soldiers of the artillery and infantry company of European invalid battalion are admitted to pensions as specified below, instead of those assigned to them in Govt. G.O. No. 1,015 of 1868:—Artillery: Gunner J. Gleeson, 1s. (one shilling) per diem, payable in Europe; Gunner P. Clarke, 1s. (one shilling) per diem, payable in Europe. Infantry: Corporal H. Preston, Rs. 25-11-9 per month, payable in India, as a special case, pending the orders of the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India. Private J. Power, 1s. (one shilling) per diem, payable in Europe. Private R. Goggan, 1s. (one shilling) per diem, payable in Europe. Bombardier Higgins will draw his stipend in India instead of in Europe as previously notified.

THE ENTREE TO GOVERNMENT HOUSE.—H.E. the Viceroy is pleased to confer upon the undermentioned gentlemen the privilege of the private entrée to Government House:—Colonel T. F. Wilson, C.B., Staff Corps Aide-de-Camp to her Majesty the Queen.

THE MEDICAL COLLEGE.—His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-general notifies the following appointment, with effect from January 13:—Surg. J. Fayrer, M.D., Professor of Surgery, Medical College, and ex officio First Surgeon, College Hospital, to act, until further orders, as surgeon to his Excellency, in addition to his present duties.

TELEGRAPH APPOINTMENTS.—Mr. T. C. Hill, an assistant superintendent of the first grade in the Telegraph Department, to officiate as superintendent of the third grade of that department, with effect from the evening of September 23 last, on which date he relieved Mr. Superintendent J. H. Nowill of the charge of the Assam division. Mr. Jeffery Julian Allen, appointed by her Majesty's Secretary of State for India as an assistant-superintendent of the fourth grade in the Telegraph Department, with effect from November 26 last, reported his arrival on January 21.

MINT ARRANGEMENTS.—The following arrangements have been sanctioned by the Governor-general in Council, consequent on the grant by the Government of Bombay of a furlough to Europe for two years to Surg. major J. F. Shekleton, A.B., M.B., Assay Master of the Calcutta Mint:—Surg. H. E. Busted, late officiating assay master of the Madras Mint, to officiate as assay master of the Calcutta Mint. Surg. P. F. Bellew, deputy assay master of the Calcutta Mint, to officiate as assay master of the Madras Mint. Mr. F. W. Peterson, to officiate as deputy assay master of the Calcutta Mint.—Dr. Bellew made over charge of the office of deputy assay master of the Calcutta Mint to Mr. Peterson on Jan. 16. Mr. D. R. Onslow to be secretary to the statistical committee.

ORPHANS OF SOLDIERS.—To obviate misconception, it is notified that subsistence allowance is inadmissible on account of an adopted child or step-child of a soldier, but the subsistence allowance sanctioned for an orphan child is not discontinued when the mother re-marries. When the mother of a soldier's orphan, whose subsistence allowance has been discontinued in consequence of its having been sent to England or the colonies at the expense of the State, or on the discharge of the father from the army, without or with pension, re-married a soldier, and is within the prescribed limit of married women, the subsistence allowance will be restored from the date of such re-marriage, if it takes place in India, or from the date of return to India of the mother and child, if the marriage occurred elsewhere. This order is applicable to the three presidencies.

CIVIL FURLOUGHS AND LEAVES OF ABSENCE, &c.—Major Hamner, one month's privilege leave. Lieut. Aislabie, 3rd Sikh inf., for thirty days, from Jan. 23, to Bombay, m.c. Lieut. Hunter, guide corps, is granted an extension of privilege leave to Jan. 20, to remain in Calcutta, and study the native languages. Mr. G. H. Lawrence, magistrate and collector of Allypore, to Europe for one year, six months, and twenty-four days, with effect from date on which he may avail himself of the same. Asst. surg. C. F. Oldham, in civil med. charge of Gujerat, has obtained the usual prep. leave. Mr. R. E. Egerton, financial comr. of the Punjab, to Europe for nine months, with effect from such date in April as he may avail himself of the same, with prep. leave from April 1. Capt. Bannerman, commandant of the Malwa Bheel corps and Bheel agent, has twenty days, prep. to Europe. Major R. Ouseley, officiating settlement officer of Roy Bareilly, in the province of Oude, is granted the usual leave, prep. to Europe, from such date as he may avail himself of it. Lieut. col. Mercer, commissioner of Sylkot, to Europe from March 1.

MILITARY FURLOUGHS, &c.—The undermentioned officers are allowed furlough to Europe (m.c.) under the last new rules, except where otherwise specified:—Capt. Lewin, dep. comr. hill tracts, Chittagong, for 2 years. Lieut. col. Alexander, comdt. 1st Bengal cav., for 2 years, embarking at Bombay, private affairs. Lieut. col. Ratray, comdt., 42nd (Assam) regt. of N.L.I., for 2 years, private affairs. Major (brevet lieut. col.) Hutchinson, insp. gen. of police, Punjab, for 1 year, embarking at Bombay, private affairs. Capt. (brevet major) Sherriif, of the Bengal staff corps, for 2 years, embarking at Bombay, private affairs. Capt. Lindsay, late 68th regt. N.I., 3rd squad. officer, 1st Bengal cav., for 2 years, private affairs. Capt. Tierney, R.A., 2nd class comy. of ordnance, for 2 years, private affairs. Surg. Vivian, for 1 year, embarking at Bombay, private affairs. Asst. surg. Smith, of the med. dept., for 2 years, private affairs. The undermentioned officers have reported their departure on the dates specified opposite to their names:—Asst. surg. Colles, of the medical department, Candia, Jan. 20. Capt. Williams, and Lieut. Lindsay, of the Bengal staff corps, Shannon, Jan. 25. The undermentioned warrant officer is permitted to proceed to Europe, on m.c.:—Conductor Yeldham, ordnance commissariat department, for 1 year. The undermentioned officers have leave of absence on m.c.:—Surg. Andrews, to England, via the Cape, from date of embarkation. Capt. ## Official Papers.

THE CALCUTTA MEDICAL COLLEGE HOSPITAL.

The following is the substance of the resolution of Government on the desired improvements in the Calcutta Medical College Hospital. The concluding paragraph applies with equal force to other public buildings in Calcutta, and we consider it is as much an obligation of Government to insist upon its Public Works Department securing itself against such reproach, and avoiding the necessity for such improvements as to undertake them when they are needed:—

"The Calcutta Medical College Hospital was opened in 1852-53, having cost Government Rs. 2,36,772, exclusive of the price of half the site. The building was defective, it seems, from its origin, and a few years after its establishment the hospital was universally condemned as utterly unfit for the objects for which it was intended."

In 1865-66 the Sanitary Commission reported as follows:—

"It would be difficult to exaggerate the defects of the Medical College Hospital. It is radically bad; almost all the principles which are universally admitted to be essential have been neglected in its construction, and we entirely agree with the opinion that has been expressed by the staff of the hospital, that the defects are of such a nature that are beyond the reach of remedy."

"The remarks made by the Sanitary Commission were fully illustrated in detail by a committee appointed in 1866 under the Lieut.-governor's orders to report on the building. To remedy its radical defects in a satisfactory way, the outlay of six lakhs of rupees is needed. For a grant of this sum from the Imperial revenues, the Government of Bengal has applied to the Government of India, on the ground that the combined college and hospital do not form a merely local institution, but (like the Museum of India, and in much greater degree at present than the University) an institution designed to meet the wants of the whole of Northern India, by supplying sub-assistant surgeons and native doctors for civil duties, and by training medical subordinates for the army.

"The Gov. gen. in Council is willing to admit that the arguments of the Lieut. gov., whose views, however, differ entirely from those held by Sir C. Beadon, are not without much weight. The Calcutta Medical College, with its hospital, is certainly not a mere local institution, but one intended to meet the wants of the whole of the Bengal Presidency. On the other hand, it must not be forgotten that the college and hospital already receive a very liberal support from the State. While, therefore, it cannot be said to be the duty of the Government to bear the whole of the expense required for placing the hospital, which forms an essential adjunct of the college, in a more satisfactory condition, H.E. in Council is satisfied that sufficient reasons have been shown to establish a claim to some assistance from the State in effecting this object.

"His Excellency the Governor-general in Council, therefore, has agreed to contribute for this work a sum equivalent to any amount not exceeding three lakhs of rupees that may be raised by private subscriptions, or contributed by the municipality.

"In agreeing to defray a portion of the required expenditure from the imperial revenues, the Governor-general in Council has informed the Lieutenant-governor that he thinks it essential that the improvements should be undertaken by competent architects, and approved by the highest sanitary authorities. That a building only opened in 1852 should now be pronounced 'a monument of a bygone age,' and should deserve the just reproaches of the Sanitary Commission in 1865-66, and of the committee appointed in 1866, can only be accounted for by its having been originally planned by persons incompetent to the task, in defiance of principles even then known to science."

VIRTUES OF IPECACUANHA.—That there is nothing new under the sun is an ancient and trite saying, but one nevertheless containing a great deal of truth. History, as we know, has a tendency to repeat itself, a remark applicable indeed to most sublunary affairs. Of course, science creates exceptions, but a marvellous number of those vaunted new inventions, disturbing our equanimity in the 19th century, are but revivals of what was once as common as "household words." Like fashion, however, science even is subject to "cyclical changes;" and particularly so that portion of this wide term appertaining to the practice of medicine. Of this we have a recent example. Dr. Murray, the Inspector-gen. of Hospitals for the Upper Provinces, in addressing Government, remarks that the success which has attended the introduction of the Cinchona plant into India leads to the desire for the naturalisation of other valuable medicines. Ipecacuanha, he states, is a specific against dysentery, but the drug, a native plant of Brazil, is expensive, and it is submitted that it would be desirable to cultivate it in India, with the same attention now being paid to Cinchona. Drs. Farquhar and Ross also contribute memoranda in support of Dr. Murray's proposition, and both these gentlemen bring forward statistical arguments tending to demonstrate that since ipecacuanha has been used in India for the cure of dysentery the mortality from this disease has decreased by one-half. Dr. Ross commits himself to the statement that when ipecacuanha fails to act specifically, it is either from there being organic complications, which must of themselves in the end prove mortal, or that the remedy has been administered without proper knowledge or precautions. It is also added, that ipecacuanha is as much a specific for dysentery as quinine for malarious fevers; and Dr. Farquhar sums up by remarking that its "importation and cultivation would be a most valuable boon to the country."—Delhi Gazette.

DEATH OF LORD GOUGH.

We regret to announce the death of Field-Marshal Lord Gough, which took place on Tuesday morning, the 2nd inst., at St. Helen's, near Dublin, in the 90th year of his age.

As one of the last surviving heroes of the Peninsular war, Lord Gough had seen more service than any other living man. His life was full of adventure, and there was hardly any part of the world where this veteran soldier did not maintain the honour of his country by brave deeds and loyal services. The son of a country gentleman at Woodstown, in the county Limerick, he entered the army in 1794, while he was in his fifteenth year, and being almost immediately ordered upon foreign service, he had the good fortune to be present at the capture of the Dutch fleet in Saldanha Bay, followed by the surrender of the Cape of Good Hope, which has ever since been in our possession. In the West Indies he saw fighting at Surinam and Porto Rico. On his return to England he was promoted to the lieutenant-colonelcy of the 87th regiment, with which he proceeded to the Peninsula in the year 1809. He was first under the immediate command of the Duke, and received a severe wound in the glorious battle of Talavera. He was afterwards detached with other regiments, under the command of Graham, to aid in the defence of Cadiz, and while there his regiment bore a conspicuous part in the battle of Barossa. Here the eagle of a French regiment fell into the hands of the 87th and their gallant colonel. His next service was in the defence of Tarifa, near Gibraltar, where the outward walls of the town having been mined, an assault was made in force, but was completely defeated, the officer in command giving up his sword to Colonel Gough through the bars of a portcullis that crossed the bed of the river. He was with Wellington in his final Peninsular campaign, when he struck directly at the communications of the enemy with France, and caught the French army in a trap in the basin of Vittoria. His regiment, the 87th, was attached to the left wing in that hard-fought battle, and to it was assigned the task of driving the French out of the village of Hermandad. The struggle was severe, for the French were there in force, but British valour prevailed; the village was won, and its capture contributed greatly to the completeness of the victory. It was on this occasion, we believe, that the 87th earned the appellation by which they are now so well known, of "Faugh-a-Ballaghs." The French troops were massed together in the main street of the village, and plied their muskets with deadly effect upon the advancing regiment, who evinced a disposition to quail before the withering fire. It was but for a moment. The impetuous colonel, addressing his men in their native Irish, exclaimed, "87th, Faugh-a-Ballagh" (clear the way), a cry they had often responded to in the faction fights of their own country. Those few words were enough; with a wild cheer they rushed forward to the charge, and the French were swept out of the village. Gough's Irish boys had the honour of capturing one of the most remarkable trophies of the victory—the baton of Field-Marshal Jourdan. At the battle of the Nivelle he also greatly distinguished himself, and was severely wounded, as he had been in one of the skirmishes with the French during the siege of Cadiz.

Peace came, and with it a long period of inaction. His next service was in the East, where he commanded, in 1841, an expedition despatched to China to avenge our honour and obtain redress. A series of successes ended in the treaty of Nankin, and a baronetcy for Sir H. Gough. Soon after there was a rising of the Malabattas—the last of their efforts to stem our power in India up to the time of the mutiny. Gough advanced against them and gained a complete victory, capturing fifty-six guns, by which their power was completely broken, and peace and security was restored through Central India.

But more stirring times were at hand. After the death of Runjeet Singh the Punjab was abandoned to anarchy, while his large, well-equipped, and highly disciplined army was left without a head. After some years of turbulence those officers whom it still consented to obey resolved to cross the Sutlej and make an inroad upon British territory. An army of observation had been assembled on the British side of the frontier. The two armies soon came into collision, and some hard-fought battles were the result. The two days' fight of Ferozshuhur had to be followed up by the rout of Sohraon before the Khalsa would accept their defeat. In less than two years the British power in India was once more placed in imminent peril. Lord Gough again took the field, but the heavy butcher's bill at Chilianwalla alarmed the country, and a call was made for Sir C. Napier; but before his arrival the gallant old hero, whose fame had been temporarily obscured by the bloody yet indecisive battles he fought, had finally crushed the Sikh forces at Goojerat, and stamped out all chance of future insurrection. He was, therefore, able to hand over the army to his successor, flushed with victory and with the country in a state of profound peace. He returned to England, where he was received with all the honour due to his rank and military reputation. For his successful finish of the first Sikh war he had been made a baron; he was now created a viscount, with a Parliamentary grant of £2,000 for his own life, and that of his two next successors in the peerage. The East India Company also granted him a pension of £2,000, which expires with him.

He did not again engage in active service, but spent the evening of his days in tranquil retirement, loaded with years and honours. In addition to those we have mentioned he was a Knight of St. Patrick, the Star of India, and of St. Charles of Spain. He was also colonel of the Royal Horse Guards and of the 60th Rifles, while his countrymen showed their appreciation of him by requesting him to accept the honorary post of colonel of the London Irish Volunteers. In June, 1856, he was commissioned by the Queen to present the various officers of the English and French armies in the Crimea with the insignia of the Bath, in his Sovereign's name. He married a daughter of the late General Stephens, of the Royal Artillery, by whom he has left several children.

MUTINY ON BOARD THE "SIMLA."—The ship Simla, from London to Calcutta, with a general cargo for Calcutta, put into Plymouth Sound on Saturday night. Nineteen able seamen refused to do duty. She encountered heavy weather on Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday last.—(Plymouth, March 7.)

Miscellaneous.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The Bangalore left Southampton on Saturday for the East, with £111,428 in specie, of which £1,116 in gold is for Galle, £11,000 in gold and £4,000 in silver for Bombay, £16,817 in gold for Madras, £14,891 in silver for Singapore, £24,944 in silver for Hong Kong, £36,840 in silver for Shanghai, and £1,820 in silver for Yokohama.

A NEW SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH TO INDIA.—The prospectus of the company which has been for some time in course of formation for laying a submarine telegraph line between England and India was issued yesterday (Tuesday). The undertaking contemplated is very extensive, embracing a submarine cable from England, by Gibraltar, Malta, and Egypt, to India, and thence to Australia; but, in the first instance, subscriptions will be invited only for a small section, most probably between Malta and Brindisi. The company will be brought out under highly respectable auspices, the Right Hon. W. N. Massey, late Minister of Finance in India, being chairman of the board.

PUBLIC DEBT OF INDIA.—The return of debt, including service funds, deposits, and all liabilities chargeable on the revenues of India, made up to the end of September last in India, and the end of December in England, shows a total amount of £118,669,915. The amount in the previous year was £113,685,899. The increase is chiefly in railways and other companies' capital remaining in the Home Treasury, and in deposits and miscellaneous items in India. The return does not include the charge on the revenues of India of the 10½ per cent. dividend on £6,000,000, the capital stock of the East India Company, which is subject to redemption by Parliament on payment to the Company of £200 for £100 stock.

TESTIMONIAL PRESENTED TO MR. S. P. LOW.—On the afternoon of Tuesday, March 2, Generals Alexander, Clarke, Coffin, and White, of the Madras army, in the name of the subscribers to the Madras Military Fund in this country, presented Mr. S. P. Low, of the firm of Messrs. Grindlay and Co., with two very handsome silver fruit-dishes, in acknowledgment of "the long and valuable services" rendered by him in aid of the subscribers' efforts to obtain from the India Office "certain ameliorating conditions" which they had after all failed to secure. The offering was accompanied by an appropriate address, bearing the signatures of twenty-eight officers now at home. On the testimonial is the following inscription:—

"Presented to S. P. Low, Esq., by members of the Madras Military Fund, in testimony of their sense of his many valuable and disinterested services to that Fund."

AN ATTEMPT AT SUICIDE.—Lieutenant-Colonel John Clarke Phillips Prescott, an Indian officer (and not of the 3rd Buffs as stated in some of the papers), was brought before Mr. Benson, at the Thames Police-court, on Wednesday, charged with attempting to commit suicide by throwing himself from a steamboat into the Thames. Mr. John Gay, consulting surgeon, of Finsbury-place South, said he knew Lieutenant-Colonel Prescott well, and a more honourable or more highly respected man did not exist. He had committed an act which he very much regretted, while labouring under temporary aberration of intellect. He had only arrived in England on Monday from India, where he had suffered from sunstroke. He was certain that the Colonel would not repeat the attempt if he was liberated. Mr. Benson said that after the statement made by Mr. Gay he felt himself justified in discharging the prisoner, who, he hoped, would pledge his honour as an officer and gentleman not to repeat the offence. This was done.

DEATH OF SIR EMERSON TENNENT.—We regret to state that Sir James Emerson Tennent, Bart., died suddenly on Saturday afternoon last. The deceased gentleman, who was in his sixty-fifth year, was called to the bar in 1831, and held office under Sir Robert Peel's Government as Secretary to the India Board; he was also appointed Civil Secretary to the Colonial Government of Ceylon. Sir James was a Conservative member for Belfast from December, 1832, till August, 1845, and for Lisburn from December, 1851, till December, 1852. He was also a magistrate for the counties of Antrim, Down, and Fermanagh, and a deputy-lieutenant for the latter county. Under the Government of the Earl of Derby, Sir Emerson was secretary to the Poor-law Board, and subsequently became permanent secretary to the Board, which position he resigned in 1867, the year in which he was created a baronet. The best known of his works are "Travels in Greece in 1825," "Travels in Belgium," "History of Modern Greece," published in 1848; "Account of Ceylon—Physical, Historical, and Topographical;" "Progress of Christianity in Ceylon," published in 1850; and "Sketches of the Natural History of Ceylon," published in 1861. The deceased baronet is succeeded by his son, William Emerson Tennent, of the Board of Trade.

ARMY ESTIMATES.—Accompanying the army estimates is the following statement, showing the difference between the numbers on the establishment of the regiments and depots in the United Kingdom of regiments in India, in 1868-69, and those proposed for 1869-70:—Vote A.—Numbers in 1868-69, 136,650; numbers proposed for 1869-70, 125,529; decrease, 1869-70, 11,121. Vote B.—Native Indian troops, serving in China and Straits Settlements. Numbers proposed for 1869-70, 1,760; numbers voted for 1868-9, 880. Increase, 1869-70, 880. A regiment of her Majesty's Native Indian army will be stationed at the Straits Settlements during the year 1869-70, pending a reconsideration of the garrison necessary for its defence. The pay of officers on furlough from India will be paid direct by the Indian Government from 1st April next. A re-arrangement as to the mode in which the charge is to be calculated for recruiting the drafts for regiments serving in India is now under consideration. The transfer of the charge for furlough pay to India occasions a decrease of £136,000 as compared with last year; the receipts from India, which are paid into the Exchequer, will fall off to a similar amount. The staff of four depot battalions has been reduced.

THE SIAMESE TWINS.—A generation has passed away since the debut of those extraordinary specimens of lusus nature, the Siamese Twins, in this country as children. It is more extraordinary still that those closely-united brothers should have lived to the age of elderly men; that both should have married; and that both should now be surrounded by their families at their old place of exhibition, the Egyptian-hall, Piccadilly. Two good-looking young ladies, bearing a strong family resemblance in features to their parents, appear on the platform of the hall, standing by the side of the authors of their being. Parents and children alike comport themselves with all cheerfulness; but it is sad to look upon the Twins, who still, at the age of sixty, live, move, and have their being inseparably bound together by a strong cartilaginous ligament. The birth and extraction of the Siamese Twins remain as strongly marked as ever in their Mongolian features—faces that wear a wan and fatigued expression, betraying the oppressive nature of the burthen they must bear with them through existence. Of all exhibitions, that of the Siamese Twins, with their children about them (they each have large families), is the most curious, and at the same time most humiliating. The Siamese Twins are associated with other ethnological curiosities, viz., a Circassian lady of dignified and handsome appearance, with an enormous shock of hair; and a giantess eight feet one inch in height, twenty years of age, handsome in features and symmetrical in figure.

MINOR INDIAN CAMPAIGNS.—The following letter has been addressed to the Times:—"Sir,—Now that it has been decided by her Majesty's Government that medals are to be given for New Zealand and Abyssinia, surely a claim for some recognition of their services may be made by those who have served in the Indian frontier campaign of Bhootan and Sittana, for both of which popular report assigned a medal some time ago. There is little doubt among military men of the justice of granting the New Zealand medal; there may be a doubt about Abyssinia, but all are glad the services of men who have worked hard should be recognised so quickly by our Government. But may we not have one, too—we unfortunate soldiers who have borne the brunt of frontier warfare? We have acquired large tracts of country, fought hand-to-hand day and night, endured hardships, exposure, and sickness, which few can realise, and in both campaigns, after large loss of life, obtained success. The facts speak for themselves; our commanders and seniors have had the honours and brevets showered upon them; are the underlings, who have endured the toil and heat of the day, to get nothing? Will no member of Parliament plead for us? Our seniors seem to have ignored the steps by which they obtained their deserved honours. I do not know how the scheme of a general service medal fell through. We surely have an equal claim for a recognition of our services as our more lucky fellow comrades. A piece of riband is not much, and is all that is asked by a long-suffering and long-expecting soldier.—I am, Sir, yours very truly,
"BADLY WOUNDED."

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, March 2. THE GARRISON OF KOHAT.—Mr WYLLIE inquired of the Under-Secretary for India what truth there might be in a very alarming rumour to the effect that the garrison of Kohat had been surprised by a party of Oorukzais, and that the British had sustained a loss of 300 men.—Mr. GRANT DUFF thanked his hon. friend for having given him an opportunity of contradicting a rumour which must have caused such terrible anxiety that day in so many English homes. The real state of affairs would be best shown by his reading a telegram from the Viceroy, dated Calcutta, Feb. 27. It was as follows:—"On the 13th of February party of Oorukzais surprised police post near Kohat when police were asleep. Three men taken away. One killed. Lieutenant-governor has authorised Colonel Keyes to make a day's march from Kohat into the pass for the purpose of punishment." Another telegram received last night from General Stuart said that Colonel Keyes' expedition had been a success.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, March 4. THE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.—Before going into Committee of Supply on the supplemental estimate for the Abyssinian war, Mr. WHITE called for some explanation of what he called the "monstrous discrepancy" between the original estimate of £5,000,000 and the actual expenditure of £8,600,000, and he suggested the appointment of a committee to inquire into the causes of the miscalculation.—Sir G. JENKINSON suggested that the committee, if appointed, should also inquire into the causes of the war, and by whose blundering it had been produced.—Sir S. NORTHCOOTE reminded the House that when the first estimate was framed the expedition had not left India, and that the second estimate was necessarily vague and loose, and exceeded, in fact, the information furnished by the departments. He pointed out, too, as a reason for the insufficiency of the estimate, our entire ignorance of the country into which the expedition was despatched, its actual barrenness of supplies, and the necessity of taking precautions against events which never occurred. Much of the excess, he anticipated, had arisen since the period up to which the estimate extended, and in conveying the troops from the shores of Abyssinia to India after the expedition was over. He repudiated for the late Government the charge of having kept back anything from Parliament, or of having submitted culpably inaccurate estimates.—In Committee of Supply, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER moved the supplemental estimate of £3,600,000, which, with the £5,000,000 already provided, brought up the cost of the expedition to £8,600,000. At present the Home Government had only received very rough accounts of the expenditure, but according to these the War-office had spent £461,000, subject to a small deduction; the Admiralty £1,262,000, and the Indian Government £7,042,000. Under this last item £319,000 had been spent for extra staff pay and batta; for stores and supplies, £563,000; mules, camels, and forage, £1,400,000; land transport in Abyssinia, £1,345,000; sea transport, £4,232,000; coals, £581,000; and miscellaneous, £160,000.—Mr. HUNT remarked that the fact just mentioned by Mr. Lowe, that he had only yet received rough accounts, showed the difficulty of getting accurate information from India. In fact, so late as December 8, the Indian Government telegraphed to this country that they had only spent five millions.—In the course of the short conversation which followed, Mr. WHITE renewed his complaint of the miscalculations of the late Government; Mr. DENT expressed his discontent with the scanty information afforded; while Sir P. O'BRIEN proposed to postpone the vote until a committee had been named to ascertain the causes of the excess. But on Mr. GLADSTONE pointing out that the money had been spent by the Indian Government and must be repaid, he gave way, and the vote was agreed to.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, March 8. CENTRAL ASIA.—An Hon. MEMBER gave notice that on Friday next, on the motion for going into Committee of Supply, he should call attention to the state of affairs in Central Asia.

THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.—Mr. G. DUFF, in reply to Sir P. O'BRIEN, was understood to say that there is no rule to exclude from the office of examiner at the Indian civil service examinations private tutors in the universities; but care is taken to exclude any one from examining his own pupils. In the list including all the examinations since 1858 seven persons were selected from the Irish and five from the Scotch Universities.

ARRIVAL OF THE B. AND B. S. S. COMPANY'S "NEERA."—Messrs. Stearns, Hobart and Co.'s new steamship Neera, 2,200 tons, Captain Hanscom, arrived at Bombay on Feb. 11, after a run of fifty-two days from Liverpool. The Neera experienced very bad weather on the passage, carrying away her fore topmast and damaging her forward deck-houses. In the English Channel she picked up the shipwrecked captain and crew of a French lugger, and brought them on to Bombay. From Liverpool she brought 3,000 packages, and 12,000 bags of sugar from the Mauritius.

From Mr. Trattles, Jet Works, Staithes, Yorks, Feb. 22, 1869:—

"I had been suffering for a considerable time with a most severe cold and cough, and having heard of your wonderful uncasiness how I could possibly attend. I took the Wafers, and, as if by a charm, the cough ceased, and I am now entirely well."
Dr. LOCOCK'S WAFERS give instant relief to ASTHMA, CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, and all DISORDERS of the BREATH and LUNGS, and have a pleasant taste.

Price 1s. 1jd., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d. per box.

Sold by all Druggists.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

Glandular swellings of the throat, neuralgia, ticdouloureux, rheumatism, gout, lumbago, and other diseases affecting the glands, muscles, and nerves of sensation, are permanently eradicated by this healing, antifebrile, and soothing preparation. It is also a perfect remedy for all skin diseases, and every kind of superficial inflammation. They soon lose their angry and painful character under the cooling, corrective, and healing influences of this invaluable Ointment. The Pills have never been administered, either by hospital or private practitioners, in dyspepsia or liver complaints, without producing the desired result. Holloway's remedies act well in unison, and together are competent to grapple successfully with the majority of mortal maladies.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases :—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colic, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—“Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Cholera, Ague, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after a most severe and protracted suffering, and when other remedies had failed.”

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec., 1866) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—“I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera.”

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—“Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not supply a want and fill a place.”

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—“So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases.”

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that “108 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use.”

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words “Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne,” without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

WHITMORE'S COMPOUND LINIMENT OF ARNICA.

A SPECIFIC for the CURE of RHEUMATISM, LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, SPRAINS, CONTUSIONS, WEAKNESS of the JOINTS, CHILBLAINS, &c. It is also an excellent remedy as a stimulating application to the surface of the chest and back in bronchitis, inflammation of the lungs, pulmonary consumption, and whooping cough. When the liver is inactive, rubbed over it, its stimulating properties have a beneficial effect, and in all cases where counter irritation is desirable, it will be found invaluable.

In bottles, small, medium, and large.

WILKINSON'S BRONCHIO-THORACIC LOZENGES.

Prepared from the receipt of an eminent Physician, and experience has fully justified their recommendation as the most speedy remedy in irritation of the throat, catarrhal coughs, bronchitis, incipient consumption, spitting of blood, &c., &c. To public speakers and vocalists they will be found invaluable, as they impart a clear and beautiful tone to the voice. Free from any preparation of opium, and of an agreeable taste, they are perfectly safe.

In bottles of one uniform size.

WHITMORE'S STOMACHIC DINNER PILLS.

No Pill is so efficacious in promoting digestion, strengthening the stomach, correcting acidity, preventing or removing headache, giddiness, &c., arising from a costive habit, debilitated stomach, or torpid liver.

They require no change of diet, and those of the most delicate constitution may take them with safety.

Taken as an adjunct with WILKINSON'S SARSAPARILLA with the greatest success.

In bottles, small, medium, and large.

Prepared by THOMAS WILKINSON (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

"INDIAN BAEL," for Diarrhoea, Dysentery, &c. Imported by J. G. GOULD, Pharmaceutical Chemist, 199, Oxford-street, corner of Orchard-street, Portman-square, W.

DENT'S CHRONOMETERS, WATCHES, AND CLOCKS.

33, COCKSPUR-STREET, CHARING-CROSS, Corner of Spring-gardens.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED

STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body."

It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering.—"Daily Telegraph," July 13, 1866.

TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guaranteed not to turn black, or make the Teeth look unsightly.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. WEBB's residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 229, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,

&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

JOHN WHITE, MANUFACTURER, 229, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.—

UPWARDS of FIFTY YEARS' experience has fully confirmed the superior reputation of these Lozenges in the cure of ASTHMA, WINTER COUGH, HOARSENESS, SHORTNESS of BREATH, and other PULMONARY MALADIES.

RECENT TESTIMONIAL.

August 23, 1868.
Dear Sir,—Having tried your Cough Lozenges in India, I have much pleasure in testifying to their beneficial effects in cases of cold, inflammation, asthma, and bronchial affections; so good a medicine ought to be known to be appreciated. I have prescribed it largely with the best results.

ENGLISH HOMES IN INDIA.

PUBLISHERS' NOTICE.

The writer of these volumes—an accomplished member of a family whose name is conspicuous in Indian story—being now resident in India, they have not had the benefit of her final corrections. It is hoped, however, that this inevitable drawback will detract but little from the pleasure to be afforded by the perusal of the tales, which are, indeed, what they profess to be, stories of English Homes in India, represented as such homes are in different parts of the country and under various social and professional aspects. They endeavour fairly and without exaggeration to illustrate Anglo-Indian life as it is, in its many varying phases, and to bring upon the scene, in their everyday costume, many kinds of Anglo-Indian women, from the Resident at a Native Court, to the subaltern officer and the railway employé; and it is believed that all who have visited the countries described will recognise the truth of the portraiture.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, February 20; Agra and Calcutta, February 16; Madras, February 15. Later news from Calcutta up to the 19th had been received by telegram at Bombay.

The news by this mail serves mainly to fill up the outlines of intelligence already conveyed to us by the telegraph. We are once more assured that the timely rains which have fallen in the Punjab and the North-West Provinces have dispelled all fears of downright famine in those parts. Sir W. Muir has informed the Central Committee at Allahabad that monthly subscriptions will no longer be required; the alms already given or promised being enough to relieve the distress that might still be expected in a milder form for the next few months. His vindication of the energy shown by Government in the late crisis sounds superfluous to those who consider by how very few hours a large part of India has escaped a terrible disaster. The change for the better is very great already, even in the Central Provinces. The price of grain is steadily falling, and the barren wastes are once more alive with verdure.

THE first tidings of the Bazotie raid into Kohat have been published in the Bombay papers. Nothing more however do we learn as yet from them than the fact that a party of Bazoties had "surprised a tower near Kohat, held by militia, killing one man and carrying off two." A tower near the 4th Punjab Cavalry was also fired at. We are also reminded that some of these Bazoties were last year concerned in the death of Captain Ruxton, and it is said that Government was still treating with them on that subject when the new outrage took place.

THE Kookies of whom we have lately heard so much seem to have broken out in a new place. The Chittagong Frontier was the scene of their latest ravages. On the 6th February a hundred of them attacked a village in Cox's Bazaar subdivision, killing two children and carrying off six women and a boy. A fresh body of police has been ordered thither, and reinforcements of troops were marching towards the frontier after the still invisible Loshais.

A LARGE part of Bombay assembled at the Town-hall on the 15th February to celebrate the fortieth anniversary of Dr. Wilson's arrival in the Western capital. The Governor himself took the chair, and ushered in the business of the meeting in a highly complimentary speech. The address accompanying the testimonial recounted the reverend missionary's many conspicuous services to the community during a career of unceasing labour in various forms. One of the speakers, Dr. Bhau Daji, paid a handsome tribute to that combination of intellectual gifts with Christian virtues which has caused Dr. Wilson's name to be "honoured not only by prince and peasant, but by the most orthodox pundit." Dr. Wilson held among other posts the Vice-chancellorship of Bombay University. The testimonial consists of £2,100, the interest of which he will enjoy during his life, while the principal will afterwards be invested in a scholarship bearing his name.

THE Bombay papers publish Lord Napier's answer to some statements in Mr. Rassam's Report touching the cattle forwarded to Lord Napier's camp by King Theodore. The gist of the matter seems to be that all the English and some of the German captives were released on the 11th April, that Theodore's letter with the reference to the offer of "a few cows" reached Lord Napier on the 12th, just before Mr. Flad went off to bring in the remaining prisoners, that Lord Napier took the offer of cattle as a matter of form usual among the Abyssinians, but when he afterwards learned how much Theodore had misinterpreted his acceptance, he indignantly forbade the admission of the cattle within his pickets. Finally, the news of their rejection reached Theodore before all the European artisans had left Magdala. The dispute is of no great consequence now; but Sir W. Merewether's testimony sufficiently proves that, whoever else may have been misled in the matter, Theodore himself knew that "unconditional surrender" was the one condition demanded of him.

THE Indian Government has just started a legislative department distinct from the Home Office, with Mr. Whitley Stokes for its first secretary. It will not originate or initiate anything, its duty being to "clothe with a technical shape projects of law of which the policy has been affirmed elsewhere." The executive departments will first consider all legislative projects entertained by Government, and after due discussion, will lay the results before the new department, which will then discuss the question in presence of an executive official, and proceed to draft a Bill accordingly.

WE are glad to see that the principle of making British soldiers useful is fast gaining ground in India. For some years past small bodies of soldiers have been employed in making roads among the hills of Bombay and the Punjab. This year 2,000 troops have been told off for this healthy out-door labour in the Himalayas alone. The men like the work, and there is no reason why they should not have their wishes fulfilled in this matter at all practicable seasons. Of course they are fairly paid for the same, and the State gains every way by employing their spare hours and energies on work which not only keeps them out of mischief, but trains them for an essential branch of field duties.

THE committee appointed by the members of the Bengal Civil Service to consider the questions raised concerning the Civil Annuity Fund have decided to draw up two alternative schemes, on which, when duly signed, two separate memorials will be founded for transmission to the India Office. The one scheme represents the views of those who demand one fixed uniform pension, without regard to salary or length of service; the other, of those who would graduate the pension according to the pay drawn for some years beforehand. The committee further propose to displace the present fund by another, bearing the character of a compulsory savings fund made up, as before, of 4 per cent. deductions from pay, but allowing all over-payments to go to the subscriber on retirement or to his heirs in the event of his previous death.

SIR JOHN LAWRENCE was welcomed on Monday evening at Charing-cross Terminus by a number of old friends and admirers. According to some of the papers his long-predicted peerage is coming at last.

INDIA is not after all to have a fleet of her own, but only to have the honour of paying £10,000 a-year for the ships that may be placed at her disposal.

BOOK-PUBLISHING in the North-West Provinces can hardly be a flourishing trade, to judge by the returns supplied to the local Government. Among thirty millions of people—that is, a population equal to our own—not more than 276 books were published in the year before last, and that is an increase of thirteen on the year preceding. Clearly our Indian friends are centuries behind us in respect of literary fruitfulness. The small increase indeed for 1867 would have been a considerable falling off, but for the great number of reprints published that year, as compared with the year before. Only fifty-four new works were issued in 1867 against seventy-five in 1866. In respect of new editions the difference—between twelve and seventy-six—is still more in favour of the last-named year. The reprints however of 1867 are nearly as two to one of the reprints of 1866. Of the fifty-four new works three are in Persian, twenty-nine in Urdu, four in Sanskrit, fourteen in Hindee, and the remainder in two of these languages. Under another classification we find six educational, four religious, eleven legal, ten didactic, and twenty-three miscellaneous. The last head includes twenty almanacs, which leaves just three representatives of literature pure and simple. History and biography furnish one volume each. There is one story, one work on music, one on “various sciences,” and one on the laws of cricket. One Nagri dictionary, one of Arabic, Persian, and Urdu words, three works on surveying, one on Indian geography, a book of Nagri and Urdu proverbs, one of idioms, and two works on Krishna may also be mentioned. In the number of publications Agra takes the lead, but in point of variety is surpassed by Meerut, while Benares makes no show at all. Meerut contributes six new editions of old works, all more or less instructive. The two supplied by Benares treat of astrology and dreams. Of the reprints ninety-eight are devoted to religion, thirty-nine to education, ten to law, and six to medicine. Out of eight works on ethics Bareilly and Meerut between them furnish six. There are not a few volumes of “Counsels,” and ten of astrology and dreams, a proportion not larger than we might have expected. Among the miscellaneous reprints we find nine books of stories, three or four of fables, and eighteen volumes of verse, which include love poems, “descriptions of twelve months,” songs, chronicles in verse, and so forth. Of course there are several histories of Ram, Hanuman, Krishna, Mohammed, and other heroes of history or fable. The number of reprints of works on grammar, science, geography, and other branches of useful knowledge, is very small indeed. The largest edition printed of any work on a general subject is 2,550 copies of the Koran in Arabic and Urdu. Religious, moral, and poetical works seem as a rule to command the widest popularity in India as elsewhere, so far at least as reprints of standard works are concerned. New poetry seems equally at a discount everywhere.

ON Monday, the 8th March, as we learn by telegram, Sir R. Temple opened his first Budget. As usual the completed accounts for the last two years differ far the worse from the original estimates. The deficit for 1867-8 is £1,610,517, or half a million more than Sir S. Northcote reckoned it last July. That for 1868-9 is £2,801,244, or over a million and a half more than Mr. Massey's original estimate. For the coming year Sir R. Temple counts on a surplus of £52,650. If his calculations prove correct, he will be the black swan of late Indian financiers. Of the items of his budget we know nothing except that an income-tax of one per cent. is expected to yield £900,000; that a loan of £5,000,000 will be raised, of which one million will go to the paying off old debts; and that £3,655,000 will be laid out on extraordinary public works, including £800,000 for special purposes in Bombay, and a certain sum for buying out the Orissa Irrigation Company. The large outlay for this year on works of irrigation shows a marked increase on former years, but still falls short, we think, of India's pressing needs. The loan of five millions might as well have been doubled or trebled while the Government was about it, for no more time should be lost in assuring India against the chances of a famine like that which she has just escaped by a hair's breadth. We note that no change has been proposed in the customs or the salt duties; nor is any reference made to the oft-mooted question of substituting an excise-duty for the opium monopoly of Bengal. These yearly deficits, which mislead so many writers and speakers in this country, prove nothing worse than the absurdity of trying to pay for reproductive works out of yearly revenue.

IN the Lords' debate last Thursday, on the Indian Minister's revised edition of Sir S. Northcote's India Bill, Lord Lyveden maintained that a full measure of justice to the natives of India would never be rendered until competitive examinations for the Civil Service were held in Calcutta. Lord Salisbury enlarged on the absurdity of applying European ideas to the Government of India, thought that the natives had a fine field for their ambition in the service of native States, had no opinion of competitive examinations, and regarded the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal as “either too big or not big enough.” He also attacked the constitution of the Indian Council, protested against its veto on money questions, demanded a more frequent change of members, and pleaded for some infusion of the commercial element. Lord Houghton and Lord Hardinge both preferred the Duke's plan of smuggling natives into the Civil Service under the Viceroy's wing to any system of competitive examination. The Duke of Somerset found his grace of Argyll's Bill “interesting” to those concerned, and called for a financial statement in the Upper House. The Duke of Argyll promised, in reply, to make the statement required, and declared that “in all matters of policy, including even taxation,” the Secretary of State could overrule his Council. Such at least is the more rational version of the Duke's speech, regarded as an answer to part of Lord Salisbury's. On the main features of the Bill itself we have commented elsewhere.

“It never rains, but it pours.” A second private company has offered to compensate the public for the disgraceful shortcomings of the Indo-European Telegraph line. We are glad to see that the merchants of England have spirit enough to start rival lines without help from the Government. The Direct English, Indian, and Australian Submarine Telegraph Company will lay down a cable which “shall be in English hands from end to end.” The names on the board seem to guarantee the good faith and soundness of an undertaking which will bind Australia afresh to the mother country, and transmit a message from England to India in an hour. The new company's cable, which is lighter and much cheaper than those now used for other lines, has been carefully tested by Sir W. Thomson and Mr. Varley, and the former gentleman's report leaves nothing to desire. A beginning will be made by the laying of a cable this spring between Malta and Brindisi. The next section laid will be either from Malta to Egypt or from Suez to Bombay. The cost of the cable for the latter section, which will be ready for shipment by the latter part of this year, will amount to £606,800, laying included. The company reckon on 300 messages a-day, with a probable yield of £135,000 a-year, on an average of thirty shillings a message; which, after a small deduction for working expenses, ought to leave a handsome dividend.

OUR POLICY IN CENTRAL ASIA.

MR. WYLLIE'S promised motion on the Central Asian question has after all been adjourned to a very late day, for reasons doubtless of due weight in the mover's eyes. The delay, however politic, prevents us from obtaining an early insight into the official leanings on a matter which craves careful walking. What is it that we are required to do in face of Russian progress in Central Asia, which the Government either in this country or in India has not yet done? There is certainly a notion abroad in favour of coming to some sort of arrangement with the northern Power on behalf of our Indian Empire. Russia ought now, it is said, to be brought to book in respect of her future relations with India and her Affghan neighbour. Her near approach to our Indian frontier forms so disturbing an element in our political survey, that we ought to have some means of getting at a clear conception of its actual purport. It is so unpleasant to be thus kept in suspense. Whether her intents are wicked or charitable, we cannot tell; but, like Hamlet's Royal father, she "comes in such a questionable shape" that we must speak to her for our own satisfaction, and ask her at any rate to join us in guaranteeing the neutrality of Affghanistan. That trifling courtesy once rendered, we should breathe freely, and leave Russia to pursue her career of conquest unchecked by a murmur from her new friends.

Thoughts of this kind are not unnatural under the circumstances. But it is worth considering what sort of answer Russian statesmen would make to these requests. Let us put ourselves for a moment in their place, and suppose that in 1848 the Russian frontier had reached the borders of Afghanistan. If Russian statesmen had then asked us to explain our future intentions towards the Punjab, or demurred to any extension of our North-Western Frontier without Russian leave, would the answer given by us have soothed the inquirers' fears or gratified their national self-esteem? "Mind your own business," we should have said in more studied and slightly more courteous terms. What answer Russia would give to a like invitation from us may be gathered from some remarks in a late number of the Moscow Gazette. "We are of opinion," says the writer, "that Russia would never allow her position in Asia or her relations with the Khanates to be questioned, as England, we are certain, would not allow herself to be brought to account for her own position in India. Indeed, such a course of action would be looked upon as an interference of one State in the internal affairs of another."

The same writer goes on to ask what Power "could force Russia or England to respect any guarantees in Central Asia, if the need of self-defence demanded their infraction?" He holds that in such a case "the best guarantee would be the self-interest of each State." Russia, we are assured, "has not and cannot have any views dangerous to English dominion in India." This we believe to be the simple truth, with reference to the present drift of Russian politics. Russia's work lies all before her to the north of the Hindoo Khoosh, and many long years will it take her to plant her feet firmly in the heart of Turkistan. And no less readily do we believe that the prospect of any hostile collision between Russia and England would be deemed at least as lamentable in the former country as in the latter. Even were this otherwise, the idea of a guarantee for Affghan neutrality would be none the less impracticable. Russia would certainly decline to join in it; nor would any pledge of the kind, however freely given, delay the final collision, if it is ever to come, by a single hour. In time of peace no such guarantee is needed, and the first shock of arms would turn it into waste paper. Our experience of guarantees in Europe has not on the whole been happy, even when more than two Powers have entered into a common pledge. Guarantees did nothing for Poland and Denmark, and in the hour of need will hardly do more, we fear, for Belgium. The best guarantee we can have for the peace of India rests on the belief we may inspire abroad in our own strength, and on the natural reluctance of rival Powers to try conclusions with us too soon. It will be time enough to ask about Russia's intentions when we hear that Russian troops are marching on Herat.

Is there no way then of coming to a fair understanding with our Northern rival? Without doubt there is a way, to which the Russian journalist himself sees no objection. No harm can be done in opening any negotiations which have for their aim the promotion of a peaceful trade between the two countries. The Moscow Gazette thinks "that the Russian Government will not refuse to come to an understanding which might lead to the development of friendly relations between England and Russia," in the interests of a common trade and of friendly intercourse between the subjects of either Power. It chimes in with all proposals for an exchange of consular agents between Tashkend and Lahore or Peshawar. In some such direction it is quite possible for Russia and British India to meet each other on the footing of a common interest. If Russia will open the markets of Central Asia to British goods, on terms at all reasonable, England for her part will readily clinch the bargain.

THE DUKE OF ARGYLL'S INDIA BILL.

THE new Minister for India has lost no time in taking up one of the two Bills bequeathed to him by his predecessor at the India Office. On Thursday last the Upper House listened with general approval to the programme laid before it by the Duke of Argyll. With one exception, the Bill which then passed its second reading is to all appearance identical with the former of the two Bills which stress of other business compelled Sir S. Northcote to drop last year. Its first two clauses merely repair the blundering legislation of past days. In 1861 the Indian Government made its own servants amenable to British law for the offences they might commit in native States. In 1865 Lord Halifax extended the provisions of 1861 to "all British subjects," an amendment which still overlooked the case of her Majesty's native Indian subjects. This oversight the new Bill repairs with retrospective effect, so as to secure the validity of all past Acts of the Indian Government in this connection.

The next clause restores to the Viceroy in Council the power enjoyed by him up to 1853 of making laws and regulations for outlying territories without leave of his Legislative Council. By a fourth clause a like power is entrusted to every local governor or lieutenant-governor in respect of certain territories under his rule, provided that the measures proposed by him in the exercise of such power shall have been finally sanctioned on each occasion by the Viceroy in Council. All such laws and regulations are to have equal force with the acts of the Supreme Government in Legislative Council assembled. Another clause adds temporarily to the Legislative Council the head of the province in which the Council may at any time be engaged in making laws. By another, the Viceroy is empowered to override his Legislative Council whenever reasons of State seem to justify him in so doing; but at the will of any two members the dissent of the majority shall be notified to the Secretary of State. Against these enlargements of the Viceroy's summary jurisdiction none of the speakers had a word to say. Lord Salisbury hailed the Duke of Argyll as a hopeful disciple of the school that has long maintained the duty of governing Asiatics Asiatically, by strengthening in every possible way the hands of the Governor-general. Lord Lyveden accepted this part of the Bill without a question, and to the same effect spoke Lord Hardinge and the Duke of Somerset. One peer only, Lord Houghton, seemed alive to the growing difficulty of strengthening the hands of the Indian Government without weakening those of the Secretary of State for India. It was "almost impossible"—he owned—"to speak on this subject without involving self-contradiction." He, too, however, came to the conclusion that India ought to be governed in India by those who understood her best. And with this rule of action few will quarrel, however greatly opinions may differ as to the way of carrying it out. With regard to the particular illustration of it now given, we can only trust that India at large will not suffer by the partial return to a more despotic system. Summary legislation may still for a time prove best adapted to the wants of the ruder races that people the frontier and the hilly tracts interspersed throughout the country. Only we must take care that the new demand for more despotic processes shall not hinder the free development of a broader polity in provinces where a civilised people are already learning to walk politically alone. One of the stock objections to our rule in India is the tendency to over-legislation. We are accused of worrying the natives with too many laws too rashly foisted on an ill-prepared people. Sir R. Temple has lately shown us how weak are the grounds for such a charge. Were it never so true, however, and in some few respects it may be true, personal government and summary legislation are more likely to aggravate the evil than the slower process of carrying a projected law through all the formalities of a legislative council. Still, as we said before, there are cases in which personal government will for some time to come be found to answer best.

The other half of the Bill deals with the question of admitting natives to the Civil Service in accordance with the spirit of the Act of 1833. Hitherto, says the Duke, we have not fulfilled "our duty or our promises to the natives" in this respect. Sir John Lawrence's nine scholarships are as nothing to what should have been done. There are many offices in the Covenanted Service for which no English experience is necessary, and competitive examinations are not the only nor even the best way of securing the best men. His Grace therefore proposes to empower the Governor-general in Council to appoint natives of India from time to time to the higher offices under the Government. This proposal, against which not a voice was raised, has at least the merit of reaching a desirable end by the best available means. It opens for natives a side-door to the paradise hitherto closed against them by the conditions of an examination held in this country. It is very well to talk about the advantages of a residence in England to natives who would rise in the public service of India. But even if such talk had any rational foundation, the simple fact is that to the vast majority of natives such a residence is for various reasons wholly impossible. Lord Lyveden is for holding examinations in India also; and there is really no good reason against such a course, except the ill-founded fear that none but Bengallies would enter the field. Meanwhile however the present Bill will feel the way towards further improvements, by enabling the Indian Government to reward natives of tried ability and good social standing with some of the choice things hitherto monopolised by Englishmen from home. It is quite time to begin abating a monopoly which, however excusable and even politic sixty years ago, has stood self-condemned ever since the India Bill of 1833.

That the present Bill leaves untouched the question of a separate Government for Bengal would be matter for regret but for the Indian Minister's avowed objection to the change desired by his predecessor. Instead of loosening the connection between Bengal Proper and the Supreme Government, the Duke of Argyll would draw the two into yet closer union. He is not for having two Kings of Brentford in one city, thinks that much time and trouble might be saved by a few minutes' talk instead of endless correspondence, and sees his way to lighten the burdens of the Lieutenant-governor without "coming to Parliament for new powers." He seems, in fact, to agree with Lord Salisbury that "if you cannot make the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal stronger, you had better make him weaker." In other words, he would evidently recur to the old practice of regarding the Viceroy of all India as the proper head of the Bengal Government; a practice which to our thinking has grown out of all harmony with the wants and tendencies of the India of to-day. The true remedy for existing difficulties lies rather in detaching Bengal Proper under a full Government like that of Bombay, and in placing provinces like Assam in the list of territories subject to the Viceroy's direct control.

DR. HALL AND DR. GOLDSTÜCKER.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In your last issue there was a leading article on the accusations recently brought by Dr. Goldstücker against Dr. Hall in the columns of the Athenæum. As an intimate friend of Dr. Hall and one cognisant of the facts of this particular controversy, will you allow me a short space in your columns to say what I know? The charge which Dr. Goldstücker brings against Dr. Hall is—that Dr. Hall persuaded Mr. Furnival to ask him certain questions in the Athenæum—that Dr. Hall then publicly accused Dr. Goldstücker of asking these questions, and imputed to him the basest motives for so doing. Such a proceeding, when thus nakedly stated, is so absurd and irrational as to refute itself, and the misapprehensions on which Dr. Goldstücker's charges are constructed can be easily cleared up.

It is true that Dr. Hall asked Mr. Furnival to ask him certain questions in the Athenæum—a perfectly justifiable request—but it is not true that he was "the intellectual author" of the letter signed "M.C." The letter was widely different from what Dr. Hall either suggested or desired. Dr. Hall never attributed the authorship of this letter to Dr. Goldstücker or to any one else. When questioned on the subject by Mr. Trübner and Mr. Beames, he evaded giving any opinion of his own, by mentioning instead a surmise that he had heard from third parties. This Dr. Hall shows on indisputable evidence in a reply which he has prepared, and the statements of Mr. Trübner and Mr. Beames are "glosses," so to speak, exactly of the kind which almost always unconsciously creep into reports of conversation which were not actually written down from the lips of the speaker.—I am, Sir, &c.,

ROBERT OSBORN, Captain Bengal Staff Corps.

A PAIR OF QUERIES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

DEAR SIR,—Will you oblige a subscriber by giving him an answer to two queries—the one on a matter of public, and the second on one of private interest?

Question I. Is the consulting physician for Indian officers, to whom they are, I believe, obliged to report themselves, a salaried official; and if so, is he entitled to receive a fee of £1. 1s. per visit, or when prescribing? And the question is put with more particular reference to the case of subalterns. They pay no such fee in India, and on what grounds can it be taken in England where the wretched mortal is, in many cases, on 6s. 6d. a-day?

Question II. (to settle a bet). Was Blue Gown, the winner of the Derby of 1868, one of the first three favourites at the time of the race, and if so, for how long previously?—I am, dear Sir, yours truly, A FIELD OFFICER.
[We fear the fee is payable in this country. Query II. is out of our line, but Blue Gown was among the first three favourites on the morning of the race, and for some days before.—Ed. A. I. M.]

Spirit of the Indian Press.

LOCAL EXAMINATION OF NATIVE CANDIDATES FOR THE CIVIL SERVICE.

The Bombay Gazette holds that in the first place the examinations could not be made equal. It is said that the Education Departments here could furnish examiners quite as distinguished and as highly qualified as those obtainable in England. The answer is they could do nothing of the sort. In England the Civil Service Commissioners may select the very pick and cream of the examiners from all the seats of learning in the country—men not only who have been trained by long practice to the very highest efficiency in their business, but who from constant intercourse with others as learned and able as themselves, or even more so, are thoroughly abreast of the intellectual movement of the day in their several departments. They know not as a rule whose papers they are examining, and their impartiality, so far as we are aware, has never been impeached. Compare with this class of men, the educational staff in India. With a very few exceptions it is composed of gentlemen not even in the outset distinguished as scholars in England. They cannot possibly have had the same practice in dealing as examiners with really intellectual materials. Their level in learning is at most that of the time when they left Europe; and the great Arnold was wont to say that, in the progress of scholarship, the most competent headmaster drifted to the rear in about ten years. They would have to deal with papers, the handwriting of which would be perfectly familiar to them as that of their own pupils and proteges. Could complete impartiality be expected in such circumstances? It has been thought necessary, and not without abundant reason, to commit the University examinations as much as possible to gentlemen unconnected with the schools and colleges. Would it be safe to make the professors arbiters in a contest so much more exciting, that for the Civil Service? If, on the other hand, you seek examiners outside the University, you must call in amateurs; who, whatever their natural abilities, cannot have the accomplishments of skilled professionals. But suppose this difficulty were got over, even by the costly expedient of sending examiners from England, how is the perfect equality of the examination in four different places and by four sets of men to be determined? It is utterly chimerical to expect it; it is, if possible, still more so to expect this to be acquiesced in.

CASTE.

The Indian Daily News looks with little sympathy upon any attempt to induce the Hindu convert to adopt European dress and habits, which must necessarily expose him to the ridicule of those amidst whom he dwells. Customs which are not in themselves idolatrous or superstitious he may surely be allowed to retain. To give an example, some have thought that the kudumi, or tuft of hair at the back of the head, which native men and boys generally save from the razor, is a badge of heathenism, and, though it is far from the general practice of missionaries, converts have been sometimes required to remove this hair before they are admitted to baptism. It is true that there are certain heathen ceremonies which the loss of the kudumi would incapacitate a man from performing, and thus it has been alleged that its excision may prevent a convert from relapsing into his former superstitions. In connection with this practice, it has however been well remarked that one of the most common of the idolatrous ceremonies among the Hindus is that in which the worshipper crosses his arms, seizes the lobes of his ears, and prostrates himself before the elephant-faced "belly-god," and that though the most efficacious way of incapacitating a convert from ever again performing such worship would be to cut off his ears, such a procedure would scarcely be advisable. When truth commands admiration we have good grounds for hoping that at length it will move the heart and influence the practice. But all this must be the work of time. Let us meanwhile try to raise the lower castes from the deep ignorance and degradation into which they have sunk, and which unfortunately excites more frequently the contempt than the pity of their more favoured fellow-countrymen. The question which is now mooted as to whether we have not somewhat too exclusively devoted ourselves to the civilisation and education of the higher castes in our Government institutions to the prejudice of the lower castes is important, and we trust it will meet with the careful consideration which it deserves. Let the lower castes first be taught to respect themselves, and they will not fail soon to command respect from others.

INDIAN RAILWAYS.

The Englishman thinks that unless there is a great alteration in everything connected with the public works department, Sir John Lawrence has left for his successor a task which he himself never could have carried out; as long as military engineers are banded from pillar to post, one day superintending the white-washing of barracks or the scouring of latrines; another day pitch-forked into the railway department where they are kept until they have become efficient officers in that particular line, when, owing to some senior officer in the service dying or retiring, they enter a higher grade, the special knowledge acquired is altogether lost. Why or wherefore a man entering a higher grade should be taken from a branch which he does understand, and put into a branch where his talents are of no use, and where the duties can be efficiently done by a conductor, must be answered by some official who can find plausible reasons for a Government's doing what an individual would scout as the height of folly. An engineer is not spoiled for military purposes by doing duty as a civil engineer. His education in the principles of construction is in no ways inferior to that of his rival, the civil engineer; if anything, it is superior. In practice and administrative talent he is very inferior. If the Government are themselves to carry out public works, be they railways, be they canals, or be they ordinary highways, they must have a special department; whether that department be composed of purely military engineers, or purely civil, or of military and civil engineers combined is immaterial, provided there be a continuity of service. Every change produces increased charge. Everyone concerned in construction seems to think that he is in duty bound to go to work in a different way from his predecessor. If a man be found equal to his work, give him the increased pay due to his grade, and let him stay where he is, until his work is finished. If it be necessary to have a service of civil engineers, if one of them be found equal to the work, in the name of common sense, let him stay where he is, and let him rise in grade and pay as his military brother does, and do not perpetuate the absurdity of invariably putting a military man of five years over a civilian of twenty-five years' experience. If the Government will adopt some properly regulated system for the construction of public works, we believe that the estimate of Sir John Lawrence may be reduced, not simply to £12,000 per mile, but to something nearer half the sum. India requires no fancy speeds in the shape of ruinous express or accelerated traffic trains. All she requires is moderate speed and frequent opportunities of bringing her masses and dribbles of produce to market. What has been done in Belgium, in Russia, and in Austria may be done equally well in India, if not better. All that is required is for the Government to show that it is in earnest, and to initiate without delay a proper system in the execution of public works.

ECCLIESIASTICAL ITEMS.—The Venerable Archdeacon Dealtry has reported to Government that the state of his health will compel him to go home in April next; in the meantime he has obtained sanction to proceed on visitation for two months to the Missions in Southern India. The Rev. Dr. Sayers goes to Ootacamund for two months, after which the Rev. W. W. G. Cooper will take charge of that chaplaincy. On Dr. Sayers' arrival at Ootacamund the Rev. C. R. Dury will return to St. Thomas' Mount, and the Rev. F. G. Lys to North Black Town for a short season only, as he, too, we understand, contemplates going to Europe on sick leave.

THE FAMINE IN THE N.W. PROVINCES.—At the close of a levee held at Allahabad on the 16th inst., by the Lieutenant-governor of the N.W. Provinces, Sir William Muir met the members of the Central Famine Relief Committee. His Honour, in cordially acknowledging their services, had the eminent satisfaction of informing them that, in view of the promising indications as to the future which the recent timely fall of rain had established, there would probably be no necessity for further monthly subscriptions, nor for any more aid from the charitable beyond the donations already paid and promised. In approximate figures the total sum so realised is Rs. 60,000, which, supplemented by a similar amount on the part of Government, gives Rs. 1,20,000 as the total available fund. Of this total an unexpended balance remains of about Rs. 84,000. Although the emergent calls for aid had been greatly lessened, there was still much distress to be relieved, notably in the districts of Ajmere, Jhansie, Lullutpore, and Bijnour, where charity would require to be dispensed for some months to come. His Honour took occasion during the interview to allude to the apparently premature organisation of the machinery for distributing relief, and its asserted disproportion to the need eventually disclosed. But the truth was that at an early stage of the famine no one could foresee what dimensions it would assume, and a state of unpreparedness for any emergency might have greatly aggravated the difficulties of dealing with it. Before the committee separated a long discussion took place with reference to the establishment of a poor-house and orphanage, as well as an asylum for lepers, for all of which, to judge by the facts brought to notice by various members of the committee, there would be only too many applicants. "It seems probable," says the Pioneer, "that whatever eventual surplus of the fund there may be after relieving the temporary wants of the sufferers by the famine throughout the North-West will serve to minister to the constant relief of the never-failing misery nearer home."

STATION TALK.

NURSINGPORE, Feb. 8.—Mr. Morris, Officiating Chief Commissioner, has arrived by trolley from Calcutta, via Jubbulpore, and will proceed at once with his camp, which has been awaiting him here, towards Hoshungabad, Nimar, and thence return by train to Nagpore. The Chief Inspector of Post-offices, Mr. Jordan, has also been here. He has arranged for running the mail between this and Jubbulpore by trolley, instead of by runners, from the ensuing monsoons, by which time the bridges over the Shere and Nerbudda will be completed. The weather is becoming chilly again, owing to some rain which has fallen. Our gram crops are very good, and the wheat is fair.

AGRA, Feb. 15.—The last detachment of H.M.'s 41st Regiment left barracks on Saturday afternoon about five o'clock for the railway station, from whence they departed by special train at 9 P.M. The 77th Regiment have come in, so the rumour I mentioned in my letter last week, that the regiment had been ordered to halt at or near Umballa in consequence of many cases of small-pox occurring in the ranks, is, I am glad to say, untrue. Small-pox is still prevalent in Agra, though not so bad as it was a month ago. I have heard of several Europeans being attacked, and on Saturday evening I noticed the funeral of a staff non-commissioned officer who succumbed to the disease the previous evening; and I have heard of another fatal case that occurred yesterday. The 41st had to leave two or three patients behind, one of whom is not, I hear, expected to live. There can be no doubt that the principal cause of the spread of small-pox is the carelessness of the natives. I have myself seen a dozen children, in the course of an hour, being carried along the public roads when terribly afflicted with the disease. Surely the legislature should interfere and put a stop to this practice, which is not only highly dangerous to the patients themselves but also to others. Another cause of the spread of the disease in Agra was the lowness of the river. After the dead were thrown into the river they soon drifted ashore, in consequence of the excessive shallowness of the water; and there they were allowed to remain until eaten by jackals, vultures, &c., &c. This state of affairs was brought to the notice of the authorities, but whether they interfered in the matter or not I cannot say.

DINAPORE, Feb. 12.—Major General Beatson returned to Allahabad, the head-quarters of the division, on Monday last, after having paid a visit to Segowlie, the station of a regiment of native cavalry. The general had a look at the 32nd Punjabees the day after their arrival, but did not inspect any of the European troops, who have to undergo that ordeal first at the hand of the Brigadier-General commanding the station. The weather during last week was quite cool, not to say chilly, and often cloudy, with high winds, causing an unpleasant dust, which no rain will come to lay. To-day and yesterday have been mild, if not warm, and at noon-tide the sun is giving us a foretaste of what he intends doing a month hence.

ALLAHABAD, Feb. 12.—On the night of the 9th we had a slight sprinkling of rain sufficient to allay the dust. The winds during the past week have been very high and the weather clear and cloudy alternately. The days are becoming sensibly warmer, and indeed it is with dread that we reflect of the times in store for us; this year the hot weather will be far more intense than the last. Even now it is very unpleasant to be riding or driving during mid-day. On the 29th of last month the employes of the railway gave a subscription ball. Failing to secure the 58th band, recourse was had to a company of native musicians of this town, better known as the "Phillipians," so I certainly cannot say that the music discoursed was very sweet or harmonious. The guests were composed of all classes of society, from C.S.'s down to railway guards. Dancing was kept up till the small hours of the morning, and it is saying a great deal to pronounce it a successful ball. The stewards deserve great credit for their exertions in securing a good night's entertainment to such a heterogeneous company. I hope to see the example set by the railway followed up in other quarters. A cricket match was played a short time back between the Lucknow and Allahabad clubs, the Lucknow eleven coming off victorious. But this success is in a great measure due to the absence of several fine players from the Allahabad eleven. A return match, to be played at Lucknow shortly, is contemplated, when I hope our station club will retrieve their reputation as cricketers. The boys and girls of the Allahabad High School presented the Rev. Mr. Baldwin with very appropriate addresses, accompanied by a Bible and a dressing-case, consequent on his departure to England on furlough. Some of the members of the community, following the example of the boys, also got up an address for the occasion, but instead of the address being read, the Hon. Mr. Turner made a short speech, and the reverend gentleman replied in very feeling language. Mr. Baldwin's locum tenens is the Rev. Mr. Baly, from Simla. The Lieutenant-Governor and suite march in to-morrow, after making a tour of nearly five months. The famine committee are very busy attending to the several calls for relief from all parts of the province.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN JENKINS.—Captain Jenkins, of the Mongyne, we believe, was crossing from Dalla early yesterday morning in a sampan, overbalanced himself, fell into the river and was drowned.—Rangoon Times, Feb. 10.

ECCLESIASTICAL.—We understand that the Rev. Charles Kirk, M.A., will probably be appointed Garrison Chaplain, and the Rev. C. T. Wilson, M.A., Senior Chaplain at the Presidency, on the retirement of the Rev. F. J. Spring, M.A.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF will probably, says the Pioneer, leave Calcutta before the Viceroy. It is understood that Sir William Mansfield will make a short professional tour through the provinces before going up to Simla.

THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR OF THE PUNJAB.—The Lucknow Times says it is on the tapis that on the retirement of Sir Donald McLeod, Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, his post will be filled either by the Honourable Sir George Couper or Colonel Barrow.

TELEGRAPHIC.—We are informed that H.M.'s steam ship Serpent is engaged taking deep sea soundings between Galle and Penang, in order to determine the feasibility of establishing telegraphic communication between those ports.

THE FAMINE OF 1867.—Mr. H. L. Dampier has been directed by his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor to convey his thanks to the Hon. C. P. Hobhouse and the members of the Famine Committee of 1867, for the aid they rendered Government during the crisis of the second Orissa famine.

LORD MAYO.—His Excellency the Viceroy has, we observe, accepted the office of Patron of the Bengal Social Science Association. His Excellency has also inspected the Goraie, for the purpose of making himself acquainted with the works in progress for bridging that river.

THE LOSHAIS.—From a copy of a telegram received in Calcutta, from the Brigadier-General Commanding the Eastern Frontier District, dated the 10th instant, it appears that two columns will be sent against the Loshai villages, one along the course of the Sonai river, and the other along the course of Dhulesurri.

UNCOVENANTED FURLOUGH RULES.—The Committee formerly appointed at Calcutta to consider the Uncovenanted Furlough Rules, and dissolved, has been resuscitated, in consequence of the Secretary of State's objections to the rules sent home. Mr. E. C. Bayley is president, and the first meeting was to take place on the 11th February.

RUMOURED OFFICIAL CHANGES.—It is currently reported that Major Lucie Smith, Deputy Commissioner of Chanda, will very shortly take leave to England, and that consequent thereon the following changes will be made:—Major Ashburner to Chanda, Major Playfair to Chindwarra, Captain Ward to Jubbulpore, and Captain Saurin Brooke to Mundla.—Central India Times, Feb. 13.

We are glad to know that the country between Delhi and Meerut is one sheet of verdure. Those who travelled over this line a month ago would be astonished at the change. Where there was no cultivation the ploughs are at work, but there seems no want of healthy cultivation now on either side of the railway line, as far as the eye can reach.—Mofussilite, Feb. 11.

THE CENSUS now in operation at Lucknow is, we hear, creating great distrust among the more ignorant native population, not altogether, it appears, without reason, as badmashes have availed themselves of the opportunity to enter houses on the pretence of being Census officers, and have committed thefts and other offences. The general impression is that the Census is some mysterious move in the policy of Government.—Indian Public Opinion, Feb. 9.

WORKS OF ART IN THE N. W. P.—The Government of the North-Western Provinces are setting about the work of restoring and preserving ancient architectural triumphs in the right way; we say nothing about the scale. They intend to restore all the marble work in Humayun's tomb at Delhi, and have opened a Sanscrit school there, with attendance of fifty pupils, and at a monthly expense of 235 rupees.

EMPLOYMENT FOR SOLDIERS IN THE HILLS.—The Government of India has sanctioned the employment of upwards of 2,000 British troops on public works in the Himalayas during the ensuing season. Their employment will consist in road-making, and in building at the new hill stations. The parties will be divided as follows:—200 men with proportion of officers of the 25th foot, from Bareilly, at Ranekhet; the 55th foot, at Chukrata; 500 men, proportionately taken from the 38th, 85th, and 92nd Regiments, at Sealkote, Meeran Meer, and Jullundur respectively, on the Chumba hills; 600 men taken from the 1st battalion, 6th Foot, and 1st battalion, 19th Regiment, at Rawul Pindee, and from the 88th at Nowshera, on the Murree and Abbottabad-road. The men thus employed will work under the orders of their own officers, but under the supervision of the executive engineer of the works, and will all receive working pay according to the nature of their employment. The system is popular with the men, who gain in health, and receive extra pay, while its benefit to the State is patent.

THE WEATHER.—A correspondent writing from Mussoorie on Feb. 6 says:—"It was snowing heavily all last night, and this morning I hear there is more than two feet of snow up at Landour. Even as low as we are, we have nearly a foot of it."—Delhi Gazette, Feb. 11.

LEGISLATION.—At the meeting of the Council of the Governor General on the 5th Feb., the Hon. Mr. Shaw Stewart introduced the Civil Courts (Bombay) Bill, and moved that it be referred to a Select Committee. The chief point upon which discussion took place was that of judicial patronage; should that patronage be wholly vested in the High Court or in Government? Mr. Maine's sympathies evidently were with the lawyers, but he did not venture upon any thing like strong opposition to Sir Henry Durand and Sir Richard Temple, who vindicated the supremacy of the Executive.

THE GRANARY OF THE NORTH-WEST.—The following figures, taken from the Pioneer, show that Oudh is fairly entitled to be called the granary of the North-West. From the 1st to the 15th of January Lucknow alone sent to Cawnpore no less than 99,764 maunds of grain, valued at Rs. 2,13,935; and in the ten days from the 15th to the 25th she despatched 20,844 maunds. During the latter period 1,35,000 maunds were passed through Benares intended for Agra, Delhi, and other cities in the North-West and the Punjab. The recent fall of rain has had the effect of checking the exportation of grain. Thus, during the last week of January only 1,000 maunds were exported from Lucknow.

JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES.—The Calcutta Gazette of yesterday contains a statement from which we gather that, during the year 1868, only two new companies were registered—the Mutual Tea Company, with a nominal capital of Rs. 1,20,000; and the Bank of Calcutta, with a capital of Rs. 10,00,000. Nineteen companies, with a nominal capital of Rs. 72,72,500, were wound up. These may be thus arranged:—Tea Companies, 7, Rs. 36,12,500; Banks, 2, Rs. 10,00,000; Hotels, 2, Rs. 1,20,000; Steam Tug, 1, Rs. 7,50,000; Yarn Mills, 1, Rs. 6,00,000; Reclamation, 1, Rs. 5,00,000; Carriage Builders, 1, Rs. 3,00,000; Dispensary, 1, Rs. 2,50,000; Emigration, 1, Rs. 1,00,000; Newspaper, 1, Rs. 30,000; Co-operation Society, Rs. 1, 10,000.—Englishman, Feb. 4.

THE BISHOP OF CALCUTTA.—The Lord Bishop of Calcutta has commenced his first visitation of the Central Provinces. His lordship will arrive in Nagpore from Wurdah on Thursday next. Bishop's School and the principal schools of the city will be visited on Friday, and the Rev. Mr. Cooper has invited his lordship to inspect the schools and other good works connected with the Free Church Mission. On Saturday evening, the 20th inst., the Lord Bishop has kindly consented to deliver a lecture on some general subject to all the native youths of Nagpore who are able to speak the English language. The large school-room of the Free Church Mission will be the place of meeting, and the lecture will commence about 6.30 P.M.

LAHORE.—The arrival of Mr. Lee Smith at Lahore, long and anxiously expected, has caused a small commotion there. People appear to be over-anxious to witness the turning of the first sod of the Lahore to Peshawur Railway by the Lieutenant Governor, but there are certain preliminary arrangements that must cause delay and inaction for a time. In the first place the Government has to raise £2,000,000 towards the cost of the projected line; next there are tenders for contracts to be examined and passed. We trust that the system of low contract rates will not be tried again. Low rates under existing exceptional circumstances may be readily secured, but all experience shows that seeming advantage to be false economy in the long run. We are assured that Sir Donald McLeod, aware of the advantages his own province and India in general will derive from the line, has evinced a willingness to eschew red-tape, and to assume the whole responsibility, if he be left to the free exercise of his own judgment. Lord Mayo's declaration on the eve of leaving England, that he would have more action and less scribbling, gives a hope that this important work will not be bound round with the orthodox impediments to early progress.

SINDHIA.—The Maharajah Sindiah of Gwalior has had a khurcta addressed to him by the Viceroy, expressing the gratification felt by the Government of India on learning the interest shown by his Highness in the condition of his famine-stricken people. Revenue was remitted in many districts where the crops had failed; but thriving zemindars must not expect to be let off as well as starving ones. "I have been angered," says his Highness, "by the attempts made by many landholders, whose crops have not suffered, to impose upon me by claiming immunity under the proclamation. In this respect I found the proclamation had done harm; all put their heads up, expecting to be covered by it. Many thakoor and cultivators whom I knew to be prosperous came in shouting for consideration." Road-making has been instituted in the suffering districts, and both his Highness and his Dewan have been making tours of inspection through the country, with only a handful of attendants, in order that his retinue might not be burdensome on the people. Says Colonel Daly—"I am sure good must come of these expeditions. The Maharajah will see the condition of his people, and the people will gain heart from the presence of their chief among them. This resolution to go himself thus lightly attended was entirely Scindhia's own, and the promptitude with which it was adopted marks the man."

INDIAN EXCHEQUER BILLS.—We have excellent authority for stating that should the Government of India at any future period, find itself necessitated to borrow large sums of money for short periods, as it has had to do to provide funds for the Abyssinian Expedition, the money will not be borrowed from the Bank of Bengal, or from any other Bank, but raised by means of short date Indian Exchequer Bill or Government Debentures. These Bills may be issued in England by the Secretary of State.

LORD MAYO AND THE TURF.—The stewards of the Calcutta Races, we are glad to state, have announced that a race on the undermentioned terms will appear in the prospectus of the Calcutta Races, 1869-70:—"The Viceroy's Cup: A piece of plate, value 1,000 rupees, presented by his Excellency the Earl of Mayo, K.P., G.M.S.I. For all horses. Weight for age and class reduced 7 lbs. Maidens allowed 7 lbs. Winners of the previous season 5 lbs., of two or more previous seasons 9 lbs. extra. No allowance for geldings. 2 miles. Entrance 1st July, 190 rupees. Entrance 1st October, 200 rupees, when the race closes. A sweepstakes of 100 rupees additional for each horse declared to start. N.B.—The stewards are authorised to state that, in the event of this Cup being given at Calcutta meetings, after the season 1869-70, geldings will be excluded." The Indian Turf cannot but benefit by a judicious patronage on the part of Lord Mayo. And we agree with the Pioneer in thinking that "Lord Mayo's desire to make a manly pastime subsidiary to some practical good to the country is shown by the conditions of the race. Every animal imported that can race two miles under Indian weights must be more or less a gain to our breeding establishments, and we hope that the Viceroy's gift may only prelude a judicious disposal of Queen's plates throughout India, so as to reach the end alluded to."

Madras.

APPOINTMENT.—Lieutenant M. Protheroe, of the Madras Staff Corps, has been appointed Second Assistant Superintendent of Port Blair.—Madras Mail.

OFFICIAL CHANGES.—Mr. Louis Forbes, the Civil and Sessions Judge at Kurnool, is, the Madras Mail learns, about to proceed home on furlough. He will be succeeded at Kurnool by Mr. P. P. Hutchins, the Registrar of the High Court; and Mr. Wigram, who is at present acting Under-Secretary to Government in the Revenue Department, will officiate for Mr. Hutchins as Registrar.

MR. BALLARD, Collector and Magistrate in Malabar, has, says the Madras Times, been appointed acting Resident at the Court of Travancore, in room of Mr. Newill, who goes to Europe on leave. Mr. Ballard has accepted the appointment, in which he will probably be confirmed, should Mr. Newill not return to India. The Malabar Collectorship has not yet been filled up.

COFFEE PROSPECTS.—We continue to receive unfavourable accounts of the coffee crops in Coorg; on several estates only half the amount of the estimated crops have been gathered in, and this has a depreciating effect on estates in general. A coffee estate in Munzerabad, and which is known to have cost about 35,000 rupees, was actually bought in at a public sale in Mysore the other day for 2,000 rupees.

HOMEWARD BOUND.—The ship Gosforth was to leave Madras on Monday, Feb. 15. Among her passengers are Mr. A. R. Hutchins, c.s., who is compelled to go home to recruit his strength after an exhausting fever caught in the Northern Circars, and Mr. M. Cruickshank, of the Oriental Bank, who, it will be recollected, met with a serious accident by a fall from his horse about a month ago, from the effects of which he has not yet quite recovered. The "indispensable" Mr. B. Cardozo, of municipality celebrity, is also a passenger by this vessel.

THE SHARPE SCHOLARSHIP.—The Madras Government has accepted the sum of 2,633-4-0 Rs., which the inhabitants of Calicut have raised for the purpose of founding a scholarship, designated the "Sharpe Scholarship," in the provincial school at Calicut, to mark the estimation in which they held Mr. G. R. Sharpe, the late Civil and Session Judge of Calicut. The Accountant-general will receive the amount referred to and invest it in the Four per Cent. Loan. The scholarship will be fixed at 9 Rs. per mensem for the present and be tenable for one year. It will not be tenable along with the Conolly or other private scholarships; and in the event of the provincial school being raised to the rank of a college, the scholarship B.A. will be allowed to run from the matriculation test to that for the degree, subject to the conditions prescribed.—Madras Mail, Feb. 10.

NARROW ESCAPE.—We learn from Berhampore that Captain T. Beckley, R.E., now on special duty in that district, has had a narrow escape for his life. He was levelling for a line of canal which he proposes to lead from Russulcondah to Gopalpore via Aska, and it passing a small hill through dense jungle in the Kemedi estate, near Degoopodee, he was set upon by a huge bear and thrown forward on his face; the bear then came upon him, tearing off his clothes, and only for the admirable presence of mind displayed by the captain there was no escape from death. He managed to extricate himself from the bear, and place the animal in such a position on the edge of a rock that it could not secure its hold again on the captain, who threw the bear clean over, and the brute fell some ten feet below with a terrible crash. Captain Beckley, though somewhat severely wounded in the hip, and otherwise slightly bruised, is, we are glad to be assured, safe and doing well.—Madras Times, Feb. 13.

SICK LEAVE.—Mr. Charles Grant Walker, B.A. (Oxon), late Under-Secretary to the Madras Government, and now Small Cause Court Judge at Vellore, hopes to proceed to Australia by the next steamer. Mr. Walker is the senior of the "Wallahs" by date of appointment as well as by personal worth and talents. He goes away on sick leave, and there is not one who has been brought into contact with him but will cordially wish him an early restoration to health and strength in the balmy air of the southern seas. Though he entered the service so recently as August, 1860, he now stands No. 90 on the list of our 179 Heaven-borns.—Madras Mail, Feb. 9.

MILITARY.—The F Company of the Sappers and Miners arrived in Bangalore on Saturday morning, in twenty-four days from Secunderabad, under the command of Captain Strickland. The march from Secunderabad to Cuddapah, which usually at this season occupies a month, was completed in twenty-two days. It was not only an exceptionally rapid one, but it was also exceptionally healthy, for no sickness occurred en route, though the party, including women, children, and followers, numbered upwards of 400 souls. The halts were brief, and by strict attention to the sanitary condition of the camp, by placing the followers and families to the leeward, and by incessant attention to details, Captain Strickland did the journey in a very soldier-like way. On the penny-wise pound-foolish policy of the day no other officer accompanied the detachment. The country between Secunderabad and Cuddapah is stated to be quite burnt up, and the prospects of the season are of the most ominous description.—Madras Mail, Feb. 8.

A FEMALE NORMAL SCHOOL AT MADRAS.—A female normal school is now being established by Government at Madras. Its object will be to impart knowledge to such Hindoo females as may be willing to join the institution, and to train them in the art of teaching, that they may thus be the means of spreading education among their countrywomen. The instruction will be given in Tamil and Telugu; all religious teaching will be strictly excluded. Each student will be required to remain in the school for four years, and will receive, provided she makes satisfactory progress, during the first year, a scholarship of Rs. 15 per month; during the second and third year a scholarship of Rs. 20 per month; during the fourth year a scholarship of Rs. 25 per month. There will be a lady superintendent in charge of the school, which will further be visited by a committee, consisting partly of native gentlemen. The teachers employed will, if possible, be Hindoo females. Persons willing to enter the school have to send in their applications on or before the 20th instant. Full particulars are required as to their residence, age, parentage, vernacular language, &c.

THE UNIVERSITY AND U. C. S. EXAMINATIONS.—On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of the present week the U. C. S. General Test Examination was held, the candidates being examined in different parts of Madras. We now learn that the candidates who appeared for this test will have to undergo another examination, as the papers for the test found their way into the hands of some of the candidates before the day of examination. One of the papers which thus got out was sent to one of the superintendents two days before the first examination day. A similar disgraceful occurrence has happened with regard to the B. A. degree examination. While this examination was going on, the extraordinary expedition displayed by three native students in returning accurate answers to the papers set aroused the suspicions of the examiners. On looking into the matter the examiners had reasons for suspecting that some of the candidates had become acquainted with the questions before their appearance in the Banqueting Hall. The candidates for this examination were lectured by Mr. Powell, and are to undergo a second examination. No doubt strict inquiry will be made, and steps be adopted to prevent a recurrence of such gross scandals.—Madras Times, Feb. 15.

ORIENTAL MANUSCRIPTS.—The Rev. T. Foulkes recently brought to the notice of Government the destruction by insects of the Oriental Manuscripts deposited in the book depot, and Mr. Lilly, Under-secretary to Government, having been directed to examine them, reported that he quite agreed with Mr. Foulkes that no time ought to be lost in devising measures for checking the ravages which insects are at present making in this valuable collection, said to be the largest in the world, and containing the only known copies of works of considerable importance to Orientalists and Philologists. There would seem to be good grounds for apprehending irreparable damage if steps be not at once taken to arrest the destruction which is at present in active progress, and to remedy as far as may be possible the mischief induced by years of neglect. He therefore suggested the appointment of a committee to report on the actual state of the collection, the measures requisite for its present preservation, and the best means of eventually bestowing it, so as to ensure its safe keeping and easy accessibility to scholars who may desire to consult it. The Director of Public Instruction, under whose charge the MSS. nominally are, might, Mr. Lilly thought, be named President of the Committee, and the Reverend Mr. Foulkes, who has taken a lively interest in the condition of these literary treasures, the worth of which he is probably better able to appreciate than any other person in Madras, would doubtless gladly afford his valuable assistance as a member of it. Government approved of Mr. Lilly's suggestion, and appointed as a committee, for the special purpose above described, the following gentlemen:—E. B. Powell, Esq., C.S.L., Director of public instruction; the Reverend T. Foulkes, W. S. Lilly, Esq., and J. Pickford, Esq., B.A., Professor of Sanskrit. The thanks of Government were accorded to the Reverend T. Foulkes for bringing the subject to their notice.

LORD NAPIER AND MR. RASSAM.

Mr. Rassam's Abyssinian Report contains the following paragraph:—

We then went with General Merewether to the Commander-in-Chief's tent, and read the letter. Alaka Ingada read it and Samuel translated it to me in Arabic, while I rendered it, word for word, to Sir Robert Napier in English. As Samuel was ordered by the King to take the answer, and was required to go up and assist in bringing down to the British camp the European artisans and their families, he asked what reply he was to take to the King with regard to a present of cows and sheep which was offered by the King in his letter. On communicating the question to Sir Robert Napier, he said, "I accept them."

This has elicited the following statement from Lord Napier, in a letter to the India-office:—

When Mr. Rassam's report first came to my notice in England, my own recollection of the details attending the translation of the letter was at variance with Mr. Rassam's account, but my recollection being very indistinct, and considering Mr. Rassam simply as a translator, I felt that I should not be justified in impugning the accuracy of his distinct and deliberate statement, on the strength of my own imperfect remembrance of what, at the time, appeared unimportant. I accordingly wrote to the Secretary of State as follows:—

"That I was unwilling to rely on my own recollection of the details of the circumstances connected with the oral translation of Theodore's letter, from Amharic to Arabic, and from Arabic to English.

"That I accepted fully the integrity of the statement of Mr. Rassam, and was entirely responsible for the political and military proceeding of the British force.

"That any assent given by me to the offer of the cattle was under the impression that the question referred to a present of a few cows and sheep, similar to the usual accompaniment of letters in Abyssinia, consisting of a few animals as a tribute of respect, the acceptance of which meant nothing more than the civil reception of the letter itself.

"That this was consistent with the terms of my first letter to Theodore, in which I maintained the usual forms of civility adopted towards the other princes of the country, both to indicate that no personal severity was intended towards him, and to avoid exciting any ebullition of fury against the captives."

On my return to India I requested Sir W. Merewether to state what took place at the translation of Theodore's letter; I quote his account in full:—

"SIR WM. MEREWETHER'S STATEMENT."

"The statement contained in the latter part of the 348th para. of Mr. Rassam's confidential report to Lord Stanley is not correct, where he writes, in reference to the offered present of cows and sheep, his Excellency said, 'I accept them.' I was present the whole time, and am positive no such words were uttered. To the best of my recollection the following were the exact circumstances:—

"All the English captives came into the camp on the night of the 11th April, but Mrs. Flad; some of the German artisans and others, with the whole of their wives and families, still remained on the mountain. It was arranged by the Commander-in-Chief that Mr. Flad and the Germans who had accompanied the released English prisoners should return early on the morning of the 12th, to bring Mrs. Flad and all the rest down. Just as they were about to start, on the 12th, Alaka Ingada arrived with the letter from the king, and Mr. Flad was stayed until it had been read. As stated by Mr. Rassam, I took him and the messenger to the Commander-in-Chief's tent, and the letter was read and explained as described. It was then pointed out by me that as there was nothing in the letter affecting the previous arrangement for the departure of Mr. Flad and the others, and the day was getting on, they had better depart and a reply could follow. His Excellency gave orders accordingly, and a verbal message was sent to the king, to the effect that his letter had been received, and reply to it would be sent afterwards by Dejjaj Allema, who would remain in the British camp for that purpose. All then went away, but almost immediately, in two or three minutes, Mr. Rassam returned with Samuel, and asked the Commander-in-Chief what answer was to be given about the cattle—were they accepted? ["To-day is Easter," said Theodore; "be pleased to let me send a few cows to you."]

"The Commander-in-Chief was still sitting on a chair, as when they left first; without apparently giving any particular thought, or attempting to discuss the question in any way, he simply bowed his head, but did not utter a word. On this Mr. Rassam and Samuel went away. Evidently the Commander-in-Chief considered the matter of small importance, not affecting the main point—viz., the terms which had been offered the King, and which had been more than once communicated to him—"unconditional surrender"—when honourable treatment would be accorded him and his family. It was afterwards, when the cattle actually arrived, that the importance attached to the present by Mr. Rassam became known. The cattle were then ordered not to be admitted within the piquets.

"WM. MEREWETHER."

"The immediate connexion in Mr. Rassam's narrative between the reading of the letter and my asserted reply lends, no doubt unintentionally, an erroneous colouring to the occurrences. It will be seen from Colonel Merewether's account, that the latter had been disposed of, and the messengers dismissed. The subsequent reference to the offered cattle led me to regard them in the same light as those that accompanied every other letter that I had received from Chiefs in Abyssinia. On learning that a large present of a thousand cattle and five hundred sheep were on their way from Theodore, and that their acceptance would be considered a pledge of friendship, I was surprised and indignant, and immediately forbade their admission within the piquets.

"Mr. Rassam having passed the night with the released captives, it may be presumed that he must have become acquainted with the circumstances of Lieutenant Prideaux's return, and that I was determined to enforce Theodore's personal surrender. It cannot therefore be supposed that he in any way countenanced the construction which Theodore's servants must have put on the question of the cattle, for which they are responsible.

"Mr. Flad has assured me that on his leaving Theodore he met the messenger returning with the news that the cattle had not been accepted, and that the news of their rejection reached Theodore before all the European artisans had left him. The principal captives had arrived in camp before Theodore's letter was even written; it will therefore be seen that the question of the cattle had no influence on the release of the prisoners.

"I have thought it right to address your Grace on the subject, as Mr. Rassam's statement uncorrected might lead to misconception.—I have, &c.,

"NAPIER OF MAGDALA."

STATION TALK.

KOLAPORE, Feb. 10.—Lord Napier arrived here about 10 A.M. on Wednesday, the 3rd instant, accompanied by Colonels Dillon and Gell, and Captain Scott, his arrival being announced by a salute from the Rajah's battery. In the afternoon his lordship held a levee, at which all the officers of the station were present, and afterwards received a State visit from the Rajah of Kolapore in the durbar-room of the Residency. The Chiefs of Sanglee and Koorundwar also paid separate visits, and at 5.30 P.M. his lordship proceeded to inspect the Kolapore Infantry, with whose appearance he expressed himself much pleased. A dinner-party at the Residency concluded the day's proceedings. On Thursday, at 6 A.M., H.M.'s 17th Regiment N.I. were drawn up in review order for inspection by his Excellency, and, after marching past, went through several manoeuvres. At the conclusion of the parade Lord Napier complimented Lieut.-Colonel Pogson and the officers on the state of the regiment. He afterwards inspected the regimental schools and hospital. The same evening return visits were paid to the Chiefs of Sanglee and Koorundwar, and subsequently to the Rajah of Kolapore, all the officers of the station accompanying his Excellency. The palace was brilliantly and effectively illuminated, and a very successful triumphal arch, which bid "Welcome to Lord Napier of Magdala," was erected at the gates. The court-yard of the palace was really an imposing site. The young Rajah, who is a very fair English scholar, expressed to Lord Napier the gratification he experienced in welcoming so distinguished a man to his dominions; and Lord Napier replied in a short and impressive speech. Friday was, comparatively speaking, a day of rest, and on Saturday Lord Napier, accompanied by Colonel Anderson and a small party, visited Penalla, a strong hill-fort, some fifteen miles from this, the fortifications, &c., of which possess several points of interest. Lord Napier and staff left at 5 A.M. on the 8th for Sattara, stopping for a short time on the road at Kurrar to inspect the bridge and irrigation works there. The idea of locating any European troops in the barracks here has, for the present, been entirely abandoned, the pressure for barrack accommodation at Belgaum having been relieved by the permanent withdrawal of a battery of artillery from that station.

RAJCOTE, Feb. 15.—Christian missionaries are not known to be blessed with a superabundance of this world's goods. A Mr. Anund Misser, formerly a Benares Brahmin, and now a missionary of the Baptist Mission at Dacca, seems, however, to be an exception. He has been here for nearly a month prosecuting the claim against H.H. the Nawab of Joonaghur, for a sum of fifteen lacs, twenty-six thousand eight hundred and forty-nine rupees, thirteen annas, and three pies, on account of property he was plundered of when at Joonaghur, and of which the following are the details:—

810 precious stones ...	510	2	0
One gold ring ...	10	0	0
71 blue stones ...	42	4	0
A carpet ...	2	3	0
A blanket ...	5	0	0
8 suits of clothes ...	35	2	3
2 pair shoes ...	3	0	0
7 copper pots ...	8	1	0

Total ... Rs. 15,26,849 13 3

It is ridiculously absurd to believe that Mr. Anund could have had by him books of the value of fifteen lacs, twenty-four thousand eight hundred and eleven, and yet we have the assertion of a Christian missionary to that effect. People at a distance may be disposed to think Mr. Anund non compos, but he is not so; he is an acute, shrewd man, and apparently well educated.

KURRACHEE, Feb.—Capt. Jeremiah Coleman, who was lately placed on the Invalid establishment, died suddenly on the 8th inst., at the residence of his son, Mr. Charles Coleman, chief accountant of the Kurrachee branch of the Agra Bank. The deceased gentleman was in the best of health during the day. In the evening he complained of a pain in his head, but as it was only slight he took little notice of it, and lay down on a sofa. Soon after his son saw that his father was dying, and before any assistance could be rendered, life was extinct. The funeral took place the next evening. A company of H.M.'s 82nd Prince of Wales's Volunteers, forming the firing party, with the band of the Royal Artillery playing the Dead March, preceded the body; the pall-bearers were Col. Annesley, Military Paymaster; Major L'Estrange, Assistant Commissary General; Capt. Worsley, of the B-18th Royal Artillery; and Capt. Fletcher, R.A. acting staff officer. The mourners were Mr. Charles Coleman and Mr. William Maher; followed by Col. Woolcombe, C.B., the officers of the regiments located here, and a number of civilians. The funeral service was read by the Rev. Mr. Sheldon, of the Church Missionary Society. The deceased came out to India in one of her Majesty's regiments, and was transferred to the Royal Artillery. In 1827 he joined the 1st Battalion, and for many years discharged the duties of schoolmaster in a manner that elicited the approbation of all his superiors. Ultimately he was transferred to the Ordnance Department, and did excellent service during the Southern Mahratta campaign of 1844; he was at the capture of the hill forts of Somunghur, Boodaghur, Punalla, and Powanghur, as also at the fall of the forts of Monehur and Munsuntosh in 1845; and so well did he distinguish himself by his zeal and ability in the performance of the important and arduous duties which then devolved upon him, that the late Captain Hamilton spoke of him in the highest terms of praise, and brought his services to the notice of Government. In 1854 the deceased was rewarded with the rank of Lieutenant. The honorary commission of captain was conferred on him for the able and effective way in which he acquitted himself in his capacity as Deputy Commissary of Ordnance.

SECUNDERABAD, Feb. 11.—The "station of the Deccan," Secunderabad, was yesterday all excitement, in consequence of a report that Major Arbuthnott, of the 18th Hussars, had been wounded by a panther; so let a participator in the fray tell the story:—A large female panther, which had been caught in the jungles near Monidapore, was brought into cantonment over night, and notice given that it would be let loose on the plain near the Artillery butts the next morning. Accordingly from an early hour horsemen, with and without spears, put in an appearance, mounted on horses of all sorts, from the showy chestnut ridden by our latest arrival, who had gained many a "spear" on the plains of Nagpore, down to a small grey horse with banded legs and a suspiciously-looking black C on his shoulder. The following were ranged in line behind the trap: Lieuts. T. and V., two youthful "subs" belonging to the Artillery, our Horse Artillery friend of the aforesaid chestnut, R. W., Lieut. B., and Major A., of the 18th Hussars, and W., whose pluck has often been tried before, and who certainly on this occasion showed once more his indomitable courage. Just when all was ready two ladies, escorted by an officer in the singularly inappropriate costume of undress uniform and full dress horse appointments, galloped up determined not to miss an exciting scene; they, with three or four others, who thought prudence the better part of valour, stayed behind the line of spear-men. All being ready, after one or two ineffectual attempts the trap-door was lifted, when the brute bounded forth. Giving him some fifty yards start, the word to ride was heard, and then ensued a hard race between the caster and the handsome chestnut for the spear; the little grey, however, managed to beat his more showy opponent, and was first alongside the panther, who jinked straight across, and the youthful sub, not handling his spear in a skilful manner, missed his chance. The Horse Artilleryman then made a determined attempt, which also failed, and the savage brute immediately wheeled round and made straight back; even Lt. B. managed to secure the spear as the beast sprang over his horse's haunches; R. W. then pricked him, and also plucky little W., the enraged creature leaving the marks of his claws in the flank of the latter's horse. The panther then crouched, and Major A. charged; his horse, however, stopped short, and turned sharp off, when in one bound the brute was on him; scrambling up by his leg he reached his shoulder, and with a crash man and panther fell to the ground. Here R. W., V., B., and W. charged at the rolling bodies, all anxious to distract the brute's attention, and after receiving two or three prods it left the unfortunate A.; but, half stunned and blinded by the blood which poured from a wound on his face, he continued to stagger up; the panther perceiving this, left the horsemen and again attacked the major, who caught the brute on the point of his spear as he sprang, but the bamboo snapped and the panther again seized A. Here every horse but B.'s and the "caster" refused to approach; so a gallant native, who was carrying a spare spear, without any hesitation rushed in and stuck it into the beast's body, and W. also jumped off and plunged his spear well home. The panther here left his first victim and sprang at W., but was turned off by B. and V., while T.'s horse could not be made to approach at all. R. W. then got his horse up to scratch, and his spear broke in the panther's body; W.'s did the same. A. had by this time scrambled away, and V. and R. W. dismounting, plunged in their spears again and again. Some one then remarked, "Don't spoil the skin," on which the spears were withdrawn; and as the last was being pulled out, the panther with an expiring effort leaped at W., but was speedily pinned down and rolled over dead. Major A. luckily received only one severe bite in the forearm and several superficial scratches, although his clothes were literally torn to ribbons; his nose was however broken by the fall; nevertheless he was able to ride into Bowenpilly, where his wounds were dressed, and then he proceeded back to cantonment. He is now progressing favourably. So ended the most exciting panther hunt ever held at this sporting station.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

THE REV. DR. WILSON, of Bombay, will visit Calcutta and the cities of Northern India early in March.—Friend of India.

VINCHOO.—The Viceroy has, on the recommendation of the Bombay Government, sanctioned a loan of Rs. 30,000 to the Chief of Vinchoor. The money is to be expended on the relief of the distress prevailing in the Chief's territory in consequence of the scarcity.

MILITARY.—A Kurrachee paper says the detachment of H.M.'s 2nd Queen's, at present stationed at Hyderabad, will leave that place for Kurrachee by the end of February, or as soon as Lord Napier of Magdala ends his inspection of that station. The detachment, instead of remaining at Kurrachee, will proceed direct to Kearnaree, where they will board the vessel expected in port to convey them to their destination.

LOSS OF THE "CHANTICLEER."—We regret to report the loss of the ship Chanticleer, Captain Dodds, which left Bombay a few months since for Zanzibar, there to load for London. It is stated that she went ashore at Pemba, and became a total wreck, the whole of the crew being saved. The Chanticleer was a small vessel of 394 tons, but was nearly new.

LORD NAPIER'S RETURN TO BOMBAY.—His Excellency, Lord Napier of Magdala, Commander-in-Chief, arrived in Bombay on the 16th February, having completed his tour of the Southern Mahratta stations. A salute of fifteen guns was fired on his lordship's arrival.

DR. ARNOTT'S RETIREMENT.—The following appears in the Government Gazette:—"His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, in submitting Dr. Arnett's application to retire, has stated his own experience of the high value of Dr. Arnett's services; and his Excellency the Governor in Council will have the pleasure of communicating the same to her Majesty Government, accompanied by the expression of his own sense of the ability with which Dr. Arnett has filled the post of Inspector-General, Indian Medical Department."

H.M.'s GUNBOAT "STAR."—H.M.'s Star, four guns, Commander W. S. De Kantow, arrived in Bombay on February 19 from Aden and the East Coast of Africa. She left Zanzibar on the 29th October, and the various slave ports were visited on the passage up to Aden. During the cruise, twenty-four slave dhows and 134 slaves were captured, and the captures were condemned at the Admiralty Court at Aden. The Star left Aden on the 26th ult., and had fine weather on the passage up to Bombay.

BAHREIN.—It will be remembered that in the autumn of last year it was found necessary to depose Mahomed bin Kuleefah, the Chief of Bahrein, in consequence of his repeated attempts to disturb the peace of the Persian Gulf. A fine of one hundred thousand dollars, payable by instalments, was also imposed on his State. The Bombay Government permitted the ex-Chief to reside at his former capital, on the understanding that his brother, the reigning Chief, should be responsible for his conduct, and this proceeding has been approved by the Government of India.

THE TESTIMONIAL TO DR. WILSON.—A large company of ladies and gentlemen assembled on the afternoon of the 15th February, in the Town-hall, to witness the presentation to the Rev. Dr. Wilson of a sum of money, a salver, and an address, on the occasion of the 40th anniversary of that gentleman's arrival in Bombay. Many native gentlemen were present, and also one or two native ladies. His Excellency Sir Seymour Fitzgerald occupied the chair, Dr. Wilson sitting on the right, and Sir Richard Couch on the left of the honourable chairman. The address recounted Dr. Wilson's many distinguished services to his fellow townsmen and the cause of religion.

SEROHI.—In a recent issue we referred to the doings of an outlawed Thakoor in the small State of Serohi. We have since been informed, on what would appear to be good authority, that some of the details we then gave were hardly correct. This will surprise no one who knows the difficulty of getting at the exact truth in such matters. The outlaw, it appears, at no time plundered the village of Mudar; nor did he a few weeks back attack an outpost of the Erinpoora Legion. On the contrary, the latter claim to have been the attacking party. No half-brother of the outlaw has been captured by the district authorities, nor has any intention of reprisals been intimated on Mount Aboo either by placards posted in conspicuous places, or by mysterious reports. One silly report of the kind, to which no one however gave a moment's thought, is stated to have been promptly traced to a servant in the employ of a European officer. Our correspondent does not profess to enter into the political matters referred to in the article in question, but adds that if the remarks it contains were written on similar information, he would not feel inclined to answer for their correctness.—Times of India.

THE GOVERNOR'S VISIT TO THE COUNTY GAOL.—His Excellency Sir Seymour Fitzgerald, accompanied by one of the members of his personal staff and an escort of sowars, visited her Majesty's county gaol on the morning of Saturday last. His Excellency made his appearance in the gaol yard between seven and eight o'clock, and spent more than an hour and a-half in visiting and examining all that was worth seeing in the place. Mr. Charles Lake, the Governor of the gaol, accompanied his Excellency, and explained to him the entire system of prison discipline while going through the various yards and wards. His Excellency seemed to take a lively interest in all that he saw, and expressed himself highly pleased with the various branches of skilled industry which were carried on under the Marshal's superintendence. The principal manufactures are coir matting in lengths, separate ornamental mats, china, rattan, chair and basket work; weaving, comprising the manufacture of table-cloths, towels, table napkins, trouserings, &c. His Excellency can get through a great deal of work in a very short time, and as he makes his appearance at public institutions when the managers least expect him, he sees real work instead of prepared performances.

BELGAUM.—Lord Napier of Magdala was lately at Belgaum on a tour of inspection, and accepted an invitation from the Lady Superior to visit the Convent-school at the station, established some eighteen months ago, and conducted by three of the daughters of the "Holy Cross." For several days previously the children had been hard at work to get up something that would be really interesting to their distinguished visitor. Their programme was as follows:—A song of welcome, composed specially for the occasion—an address to his Excellency—a dialogue, or short dramatic recitation, about the late Abyssinian campaign, and a lively material song, describing in quaint language the march of Sir Robert Napier's army from Zoula to Magdala; and the memorable events of the 10th and 13th April, 1868. His lordship seemed to be particularly pleased with the dialogue. The graphic and detailed description of various localities in Abyssinia, the lively manner in which one of the pupils, who acted the part of a soldier of the 4th (King's Own) Regiment, gave an account of the character and life of King Theodorus and of his final fate, elicited great admiration and applause from all present; and when the same pupil opened a small box, and showed various Abyssinian curiosities, such as books, crosses, &c., every one present seemed anxious to know if they had actually been brought from Abyssinia. The articles were indeed genuine, and the dialogue itself was made up from the diary of a gentleman who took part in the Abyssinian campaign. Lord Napier seemed so highly interested that he could not help interrupting the dialogue with the exclamation, "You must have been there, or you could not have described it so exactly."—Madras Times, Feb. 10.

PRESENTATION OF COLOURS TO H.M.'S 24TH BOMBAY N.I.—On Monday afternoon, the 15th Feb., the whole of the Poona brigade was assembled under arms on the grand parade-ground, under the command of Brigadier-General Pratt, C.B., to witness the presentation, by H.E. Lord Napier of Magdala, of new colours to H.M.'s 24th Regiment B.N.I. A large concourse assembled to witness the presentation. About half-past five o'clock, H.E. Lord Napier, accompanied by Major-General Gordon, C.B., Colonels Gell, Dillon, Champion, Wallace, Moore, Maude, Captains Scott and Hume. A.D.C.'s and others rode on to the ground, the whole of the troops presenting arms. The ceremony of parading the old colours, and the unfurling of the new, was at once commenced. His Excellency dismounted and advanced to the front of the regiment, where he received the new colours, and, holding them in his hands, addressed the regiment in a long and kindly speech, referring to its many gallant achievements in Arabia, Persia, and India, especially while under his personal command in the Gwalior campaign. He referred to the high character for discipline, steadiness, and trustworthiness which the regiment had ever borne, both in garrison and in the field, and declared, in warm terms, that he had every confidence in its capacity and readiness to do honour to the colours he was committing to its charge. He also paid Colonel Kemball a well-deserved compliment for his share in the efficiency which characterised the regiment. Colonel Kemball briefly responded, commenting on the gratification to his regiment in receiving its new colours from the hands of the "Hero of Magdala" and the "Soldier's Friend," a title Lord Napier's active kindness of heart towards the soldiers under his command had earned for him in this Presidency. After a happy reference to his late campaign, Colonel Kemball assured his Excellency that the colours just received would be safe in the regiment's keeping. A general salute was then ordered, and, after a march past, the troops were dismissed.—Poona Observer.

THE BOMBAY LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.—A meeting of the Council of the Governor of Bombay was held on Feb. 17, at the Town-hall, his Excellency Sir Seymour Fitzgerald presiding. A Bill introduced by the Hon. Mr. Campbell, for providing for the periodical inspection of steam boilers and prime movers, was read a first time and referred to a Select Committee, who were instructed to report at the next meeting of the Council. A Bill for the prevention of adulteration of cotton, and the better suppression of frauds in the cotton trade in the Presidency of Bombay, and for providing funds to improve the cultivation of cotton, was read a first time and referred to a Select Committee. Relative to this measure there was a lengthened discussion. The Bill to provide, in the Presidency of Bombay, funds for expenditure on objects of local public utility and improvement, and to constitute local committees for the due administration of such funds, passed the second reading. The Bill for taxing professions and trades within the city of Bombay for municipal purposes was read a second time and considered in detail. Shortly after five o'clock the Council, which had sat from noon, was adjourned until the 18th, when the consideration of the schedule of the Bill for the levy of Town Duties was proceeded with, and after a lengthened discussion all the items were passed, with the exception of the proposed levy of Rs. 5 per chest on opium, which was omitted. The Hon. Mr. Bayley moved the insertion of the following item:—"Grain of all sorts, per candy, Rs. 5," but subsequently withdrew the proposition. The Hon. Mr. Munguldas Nuthobhoy moved that the Bill be read a third time, but an amendment to this was moved by Mr. Bayley, who proposed to recommit the Bill for the insertion of a new clause. On a division the amendment was carried, the President, Colonel Marriott, the Hon. Mr. Brown, the Hon. Mr. Campbell, and Mr. Bayley voting for it. The Bill for providing funds in the presidency of Bombay for expenditure on objects of local public utility and improvement was read a third time and passed. The Bill for taxing professions and trades within the city of Bombay was also read a third time and passed. Leave to extend the time for presenting the reports on the Bills for the inspection of steam boilers, and for the prevention of the adulteration of cotton, was given, and the proceedings closed.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

INSTRUCTION IN BATTERIES, ROYAL ARTILLERY.

Jan. 28.—No. 121.—With a view to ensure a regular course of instruction in batteries of Royal Artillery, and more especially in garrison batteries in India, H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to authorise the issue of the ordnance stores laid down in the subjoined lists.

2. List I. with tables A, B, and C, include the stores requisite for the instruction of one garrison battery in the service of heavy ordnance, and list II. for gunnery instruction for one battery of horse or field artillery.

3. At large stations where more than one battery may be located, the following stores only will be requisite:—

For one garrison battery and one field battery, or for two garrison batteries, stores as per tables A, B, and C, of list I.

For one garrison battery and two or three field batteries ditto, ditto, and list II.

For two field batteries, list II.

For three field batteries, ditto, ditto, with 50 per cent. additional.

For two garrison batteries and three field batteries, tables A, B, and C, of list I., with allowance for three field batteries.

For three garrison batteries, half as much again as shown in tables A, B, and C, of list I.

Table A.

Carriage garrison for 24-pounder gun...	...	...	...	1
" field for 18 "	...	...	...	1
" field for 8-inch howitzer	...	...	...	1
Gun, 24-pounder	...	...	...	1
" 18 "	...	...	...	1
Howitzer, 8-inch...	...	...	...	1
Mortar, 8-inch, with bed and quoins	...	...	...	1

N.B.—Although one carriage is shown as the fixed compliment for 24 and 18-pounder guns, the issue of a second carriage when available and actually required will not be deemed inadmissible.

The ordnance shown in this table is not required to be serviceable, but will consist of unserviceable guns with carriages rendered sufficiently strong for drill purposes, though not fit for other service.

[We omit the miscellaneous stores.]

Table B shows the stores required for the service of the ordnance, in order to be able to carry out drill instruction with two squads at a time in the majority of the exercises laid down in Manual of Artillery Exercises, Heavy Ordnance, parts I. to V., with as much of part VI. as seems requisite for the ordnance met with in India.

Table C shows the stores required for the purposes of instruction in knotting, splicing, &c., and lecturing.

List II.

Stores Required for the Purpose of Gunnery Instruction by Batteries of Royal Artillery omitted.

It has been assumed that the guns and stores of the battery will be available for drill purposes; also that sections of fuzes for the purpose of fuse instruction are existing in each battery.

BENGAL MILITARY FUND.

Feb. 3.—No. 138.—The following letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 521, dated Dec. 23 last, is published for general information:—

India Office, London, Dec. 23, 1868.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor-general of India in Council.

Sir,—I have received and considered in Council your letter in the Military Department, No. 423, dated Oct. 31 last, relative to the rates of subscription chargeable to members of the Bengal military fund who proceed to Europe or elsewhere under the furlough regulations of 1868.

2. I approve of the decision arrived at by you, that English rates of subscription only should be levied from officers availing themselves of the new furlough rules of 1868.—I have, &c., (Signed) ARCYLL.

INDIAN WARRANT ALLOWANCES.

Feb. 3.—No. 137.—The Right Hon. the Governor-general in Council is pleased to determine that, as the Indian warrant allowances laid down in Government G.O. No. 69 of 1868, though intended as a full equivalent for batta, tentage, and house-rent, were not designed to meet extraordinary charges; whenever suitable quarters are not available at the several presidency towns for warrant officers, and they are required to make their own arrangements, the following additional amounts will be passed to the respective grades as a special allowance for presidency house-rent:—Deputy commissary, Rs. 45; assistant commissary, Rs. 30; deputy assistant commissary, Rs. 30; conductor, Rs. 15; sub-conductor, Rs. 10.

PAY ON FURLOUGH.

The Govt. of India has ruled that if an officer whilst on furlough under the rules of 1868 is transferred to another appointment, he will still continue to draw the furlough pay as before, whatever the emoluments of the new appointment may be, but the officer acting in the latter will of course be restricted to half staff salary. In the event of an officer's appointment being abolished during his absence on furlough, he will cease to have any claim to half the staff salary, and would revert to the furlough pay of his military rank, and it would rest with the department under which he might have been employed to represent the case for the special orders of Government, if the abolition should have been unexpected, or the circumstances such as to deserve special consideration.

SERVICE—HONORARY DISTINCTIONS.

The following G.O. by H.E. the C. in C. in India is published for information and guidance:—

Head Quarters, Calcutta, Jan. 2.—The C. in C. in India has the pleasure to publish to the army in India the following G.O. by H.R.H. the Field Marshal C. in C., conveying the commands of her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen:—

G.O. No. 101, Nov., 1868 (Honorary Distinctions).

MOVEMENT OF TROOPS—ANNUAL RELIEFS.

Intimation has been received from the Quartermaster-general, Horse Guards, of the intended embarkation for India, during 1869-70, of the 9th Brigade Royal Artillery in relief of the 14th Brigade to return to England.

WARRANT OFFICERS—PAY AND ALLOWANCES.

No. 18.—The following letter, No. 1,011, dated Dec. 23, 1868, from the Secretary to the Government of India, military department, to the Secretary to Government, Bombay, is published, in continuation of G.O. No. 242 of 1868:—

I am directed to acknowledge your letter No. 5,040, dated Oct. 7, 1868, referring for orders a question as to the claim of warrant officers above the grade of conductor to horse allowance.

In reply, I am to acquaint you, for the information of the Right Hon. the Gov. in Council, that the claim is undoubtedly barred by existing regulation; but, as the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. in Council considers the restriction one which has no good reason to recommend it, H.E. in Council, being aware of the heavy and active duties which very frequently devolve on warrant officers on service, is pleased to decide that henceforward all warrant officers, of whatever rank, shall be entitled to horse allowance while employed on active service in the field.

LEAVE TO CIVIL SERVANTS.—MAGISTRATE OF KHOOSTEA.

Feb. 3.—No. 832.—Read the following extracts from the rules of June 16, 1868, for the grant of leave of absence to Covenanted Civil servants:—

Section XXX.—“Any officer now in the service shall, when next proceeding on furlough, elect whether he will draw allowances at the higher minimum rate of £500 per annum (not exceeding his total salary at the time). If he shall so elect, he will in any future furlough be limited as to allowance to the lower maximum rate of £1,000 per annum.”

Section XXXII.—“Any officer now absent on furlough, or under medical certificate, may elect whether the remainder of his leave shall be taken under these rules from the date of their promulgation. If he shall so elect, Rule XXX. shall not apply to him.”

Read letter from the Officiating Junior Secretary to the Government of Bengal, No. 223, dated the 19th inst., submitting for decision the question whether Mr. T. W. Gribble, assistant magistrate of Khoostea, who was absent on leave on medical certificate on an allowance of £500 per annum at the time of the promulgation of the new rules, and continued after their promulgation to draw that allowance instead of the lower minimum of £300 per annum, should be regarded, with reference to the last sentence of Section XXXII. of the new rules, as having forfeited the right of electing the lower minimum and higher minimum rates of furlough allowance which are allowed by Section XXX., unless he refunds the amount in excess of £300 per annum which he drew for the portion of his leave subsequent to the 1st July, 1868.

Resolution.—The Gov. gen. in Council observes that the intention of Sect. XXXII. of the new rules was that if an absentee was entitled, under the new rules, to an augmentation of the allowance which he was receiving at the time they came into force, by accepting the augmentation, he should forfeit his right to the higher minimum allowance of £500 per annum during any future furlough. Mr. Gribble's case is different. By electing that his remaining leave from the 1st July, 1868, should be regulated by the new rules, he would have suffered a diminution of his allowances. Rule XXXII. was not intended to apply to such cases, and it has already been decided that the new rules shall not affect injuriously the allowance which any officer was drawing at the time of their promulgation. 2. His Excellency in Council is therefore pleased to rule that Mr. Gribble is entitled to the right of election allowed by Sect. XXX. of the new rules without refunding any portion of the absence allowance he has drawn.

Feb. 4.—No. 835.—From G. H. M. Batten, Esq., under-secretary to the Government of India, financial dept., to the Accountant-general, N.W. Provinces.

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of Mr. Deputy Accountant-general J. Eede's letter, No. P. A. 7,157 of the 16th ult., and in reply to state that covenanted civil servants, when retiring from the service, may be allowed the subsidiary leave which is admissible to them under Sect. XI. of the rules of 16th June, 1868, when they proceed on furlough, provided the leave can be granted without detriment to the public service.

No. 765.—From G. H. M. Batten, Esq., under-secretary to Government of India, financial dept., to the Secretary to the Govt. of Punjab.

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 143 of the 11th inst., and its enclosure, regarding the allowances of Mr. J. W. Smyth, the officiating deputy commissioner of Lahore, and, in reply, to state that the rules of 16th June, 1868, for the grant of acting allowances to covenanted civil servants were not intended to reduce the allowances which any officer was drawing at the time of their promulgation.

No. 768.—From R. B. Chapman, Esq., officiating secretary to Government of India, financial dept., to the Accountant-general, Bombay.

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 2,841 A of the 16th inst., and, in reply, to state that you are right in supposing that Sect. XXXII. of the rules of 16th June, 1868, for the grant of leave of absence to covenanted civil servants does not apply to the cases of officers who were absent at the time of the promulgation of those rules, on special leave on private affairs.

Feb. 1.—No. 798.—From R. B. Chapman, Esq., officiating secretary to Government of India, financial dept., to the Accountant-general, N.W. Provinces.

In reply to Mr. Deputy Accountant-general J. Eede's letter, No. 6,686-P-A, dated Dec. 18, 1868, I am desired to convey the following replies regarding the various sections of the new Military Leave Rules:—

Rule XI.—The military department state that “the Number VIII. appears to have been entered in Rule XI., when the rules were revised, from inadvertence. It will be erased.”

Rule XIV.—You will have observed from orders No. 447, dated Jan. 19, 1869, published at page 114 of the Gazette of India, the military department have ruled that Rule II. applies to an officer taking furlough on medical certificate for the first time before the completion of eight years' actual service, both as to retention of his appointment and amount of furlough allowances.

Rule XXII.—The minimum staff salary of Rs. 100 per mensem granted to an acting officer includes the half staff of his own appointment, if he have one.

Rule XXV.—The words in the Gazette of India, “private affairs on medical certificate,” are a misprint for “private affairs or medical certificate.”

Rule XXVII.—The “condition” referred to is that leave granted under this rule will not be reckoned as furlough, and that the absentee will draw a moiety of his staff salary.

The leave will not be included in the maximum period of eight years prescribed in Rule XVI., unless it be extended beyond three months.

Rule XXXIII.—Mr. Eede's interpretation is correct. It will, however, rest entirely with the local Government to decide in each case whether it will grant leave in India to a military officer under the old rules.

The last paragraph of Mr. Eede's letter is not understood. You are requested to submit a further explanation.

DRESS OF NON-COMMISSIONED STAFF.

WOUND PENSIONS.—CASE OF LIEUT. COL. GRANT.

Fort St. George, Feb. 2.—No. 37.—The following extract from a despatch from the Right. Hon. the Secretary of State for India, to the Government of India, dated Dec. 8, 1868, No. 430, is published:—

I have considered in Council your Excellency's letter dated Oct. 10 last, No. 388, transmitting for favourable consideration an application from Lieut. Col. Edward L. Grant, of the Madras invalid battalion, for a wound pension on account of the injuries received by him during the mutiny of 1857.

2. The length of time which elapsed between the date on which Col. Grant was wounded, and the date of the report of the medical committee pronouncing the effect of the wounds to be equal to the loss of a limb, preclude the grant of a pension to that officer under the terms of the Royal Warrant of May 28, 1861.

3. Considering, however, the nature of the services rendered by Col. Grant, during the defence of the Residency at Lucknow, and the suffering which has been entailed upon him by the wounds received in the discharge of his duty, H.M.'s Government, as a special case, have determined to admit that officer to the wound pension of a captain, commencing from May 6, 1868, the date of the medical committee's report on his case.

MEDICAL PROMOTIONS.—The following promotions are made, subject to H.M.'s approval:—Asst. surgs. Ross, M.B., Heard, M.D., Smith, M.D., De Fabeck, Whitton, M.B. and B.A., Beaumont, M.D.—to be surgeons, with effect from Jan. 29, having completed twelve years' service.

MUNICIPAL.—Under the provisions of Sect. 81 of Act XIII. of 1864, the Governor in Council is pleased to appoint the undermentioned officers to institute prosecutions under the said Act, for offences committed in the districts specified opposite their names:—Capt. C. L. Highmoor, supt. of police, 1st grade, Bellary. Mr. W. J. A. Sullivan, acting asst. supt. of police, 2nd class, Bellary. Capt. F. D. Plowden, acting asst. supt. of police, 1st class, in the hill tracts of Ganjam. Capt. C. C. Morris, acting asst. supt. of police, 1st class, Ganjam. Lieut. D. Heming, acting supt. of police, Godavery district. Lieut. T. Price, acting asst. supt. of police, 1st class, Salem.

ARRIVALS FROM EUROPE.—The undermentioned officer and warrant officer have returned to their duty, by permission of the home Government, without prejudice to their rank:—Capt. H. S. Robinson, staff corps, and Sub-conductor A. McKinley, ordnance department, arrived at Bombay Jan. 30. Surg. H. C. Brodrick, M.D., medical department, arrived at Madras Jan. 22. Lieut. col. A. Pritchard, staff corps, Lieut. col. F. C. Barber, infantry, and Capt. G. Tyndall, staff corps, attached 1st regiment N.I., arrived at Madras Jan. 30. Asst. surg. Nicholson, 20th brigade R.A., having reported his arrival at Madras, is directed to do duty with H.M.'s 45th foot, till the departure of the steamer for Rangoon March 3. Capt. (major) Johnson, 5th brigade R.A., who arrived at Madras Jan. 11, from England, will be considered as having travelled from Bepore to Madras, on duty at the public expense.

CIVIL FURLONGHS.—The following civil furloughs and leaves of absence were obtained in February:—Mr. A. R. Hutchins, one year's furlough to Europe, from Feb. 9, with subsidiary leave from date of leaving his district to date of sailing of the ship Gosforth. Surgeon Wilson, M.D., zillah surgeon of Tinnevely, subsidiary leave for the prescribed period to proceed to Madras, for purpose of obtaining leave to Europe on m.c. Lieut. Pickance, asst. superint. of police, Gumsur and the Hill Tracts of Ganjam, subsidiary leave for the prescribed period, to proceed to Madras for the purpose of obtaining leave to Europe on m.c. Major W. H. Hessey, deputy superintendent, No. 1 revenue survey, three months' privilege leave from the date of his availing himself of it. Mr. A. Wedderburn, collector and magistrate of Coimbatore, three months' cumulative privilege leave. Rev. D. G. Clarke, B.A., chaplain of Bolaram and Chuddeghaut, privilege leave for three months.

Official Papers.

THE REORGANISATION OF THE LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

Fort William, Feb. 8.—No. 80.—Read papers regarding certain proposed changes in the organisation of the legislative department of the Government of India.

Read again the despatch on the above subject addressed by the Government of India to H.M.'s reply, No. 16, dated Oct. 12, 1868.

Read the Secretary of State's reply, No. 42, dated Dec. 23, 1868, sanctioning the proposal.

Resolution.—The suggested changes in the organisation of the legislative department having now been sanctioned by H.M.'s Secretary of State for India, the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to direct that, from and after Feb. 10, 1869, the connection at present existing between the home and legislative departments shall be severed; that the legislative department, which is at present a branch of the home-office, shall in future be distinct; and that the officer at the head of the department shall be designated secretary to the Council of the Gov. gen. for making laws and regulations.

2. In thus constituting a separate legislative department, the Gov. gen. in Council desires that it may be borne in mind that that department is not, in respect of Government measures, an originating or initiating department, and that its proper function in respect of such measures is to clothe with a technical shape projects of law of which the policy has been affirmed elsewhere.

3. All legislative proposals on the part of Government should therefore first be considered in the executive department in which they originate, or to which their subject belongs. The necessity for legislation will there be affirmed, and all points connected with such legislation will there be considered and settled, except the technical detail of the Bill to be submitted to the Council for making laws and regulations. The papers, with the orders of Government thereon, will then be transmitted by the executive department direct to the legislative department.

4. The secretary of the executive department to which a Bill pertains will be present during its discussion in the Legislative Council.

5. In accordance with the arrangement above indicated, the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to direct that all legislative proposals emanating from local governments and administrations shall be addressed, not to the legislative department, but to the proper executive department of the Government of India; and if a proposal for legislation should accidentally reach the legislative department direct, that department shall refer it at once to the proper executive department for instructions as to the necessity for legislation, and as to the character and tenor of the Bill embodying it.

6. The Gov. gen. in Council further directs that, should a question of policy arise even after the reference to the legislative department and during the technical manipulation of the Bill, such questions shall not be disposed of in the legislative department, but shall be executively considered in the department of the Government of India to which it belongs.

7. When once a measure has been referred to the legislative department that department shall correspond directly with the local governments and administrations, and all correspondence with her Majesty's Government relating to Bills and Acts, whether of the imperial or local councils, shall in future be conducted in the legislative department.

8. With respect to Bills passed in the local councils, and submitted for the assent of the Governor-general, and projects of local laws submitted for preliminary approval to the Government of India, the Governor-general in Council directs that they shall be forwarded by the local to the Government of India in the executive department to which their subject belongs. After consideration in that department, the papers shall be transferred, with an opinion as to the policy of the measure to the legislative department for disposal.

9. The duties devolving on the Governor-general in Council, under 24 and 25 Vict., cap. 67, secs. 17 and 18, will be still transacted through the Home Office.

10. For all purposes except the above, the legislative division of the business of the Home Office will cease, and will devolve on the new legislative department.

11. The proceedings of the Government of India in the legislative department will be recorded in the same way as they have heretofore been recorded, and copies forwarded to her Majesty's Government.

No. 69.—With reference to the foregoing resolution, the Governor-general in Council is pleased to appoint Mr. Whitley Stokes to be Secretary to the Council of the Governor-general for making laws and regulations, with effect from the 10th inst.

E. C. BAYLEY, Secretary to the Government of India.

ROBBERY OF A MAIL STEAMER.—A most daring robbery was committed on board the P. and O. steamer Surat that has just left the Madras Roads. During the passage between Aden and Galle one of the passengers lost his watch, and somehow became suspicious of a "tindal," or Lascar petty officer, who had charge of the main deck. On arrival at Galle, this Lascar asked leave to go on shore. The passenger who had lost his watch called the attention of the ship's officers to this application as an additional ground for suspicion; and it was determined to allow the man to go on shore, but to have him closely watched. He took French leave, however. Instead of passing down the gangway, he went down the ship's side into a Cingalese boat, and was making for the shore when he was summoned to return. He continued to make the best of his way ashore, when one of the ship's boats was lowered, manned, and sent in pursuit. It soon overtook him, and brought him back to the ship. A search then revealed, not the passenger's watch, but six hundred sovereigns contained in a number of small bags. Examination showed that the specie room had been entered, and a box of one thousand sovereigns bound for Madras emptied of its contents. On further search, three hundred and forty-two sovereigns were found secreted on board, leaving fifty-eight missing out of the thousand. No violence had been used, and the thief must have stolen the key of the specie-room from the cabin of the officer in charge of it. It is believed that he must have had confederates, and it was probably their share of the plunder that was found on board. The prisoner was immediately placed in irons on board the Surat, and has been carried on to Calcutta.—Madras Times, Feb. 15.

THE INDIA-OFFICE.

A copy of an Order in Council, dated December 12, 1868, has been issued approving certain proposed alterations of salaries and new appointments in the office of Secretary of State for India in Council. The alterations and appointments made under the order are the following:—Mr. Henry C. G. Bedford, chief clerk, Store Department, a personal allowance of £100 per annum in addition to his salary, commencing from Lady-day, 1868. Mr. Thomas Pake-man, senior clerk, Store Department, a personal allowance of £50 per annum in addition to his salary, commencing from Lady-day, 1868. Mr. W. A. Franks, registrar, a personal allowance of £100 per annum in addition to his salary, commencing from Lady-day, 1868. Mr. J. T. Ludlam, extra assistant to registrar, a salary of £450 per annum, from July 16, 1868, rising by £15 annually to a maximum of £650 per annum, in lieu of present salary of £400 per annum; the appointment not to be filled up when vacated by Mr. Ludlam. In the Military Funds Department:—Two senior book-keepers, salaries to increase by annual rise of £15 to £350 per annum, instead of rising by £20 triennially to £250 per annum. Two junior book-keepers, salaries to increase by annual rise of £10 to £250 per annum, instead of rising by £20 triennially to £200 per annum. An additional junior bookkeeper, salary £100 per annum, rising £10 annually to £250 per annum. These last mentioned orders to take effect from Nov. 26, 1868. In the store department the number of senior clerks to be increased from four to six, and the maximum of salary raised from £650 to £700 per annum, commencing from the 25th of March, 1868. The division of the junior clerks into two sections to be abolished from the 25th of March, 1868, and the number of junior clerks fixed at thirteen instead of fifteen. The scale of salaries of these appointments (except in the case of those on the 1st section, prior to the 25th of March, 1868) to be fixed at £100 per annum, rising £15 annually to a maximum of £400 per annum in lieu of present salary for junior clerks, 1st section, of £320, rising by £15 annually to a maximum of £480 per annum; and for junior clerks, 2nd section, of £100, rising by £10 annually to a maximum of £300 per annum. The number of assistant-examiners of stores to be increased from seven to eight, from the 3rd of September, 1868, the salary being the same as that already sanctioned for assistant examiners. The appointments created include a keeper of the records, military department, and a lithographic printer, each with a salary of £150 per annum from the 24th of October, 1867. The appointments created or revised include 1 head office keeper at £200 salary; 3 office keepers, one at £150, two at £140; 10 messengers, first class, £106, rising £2 annually to £120; 22 messengers, second class (with uniform), £90, rising £2 annually to £100; 28 messengers, third class (with uniforms), £80, rising £2 annually to £90. Two messengers employed at the stores depot, Belvedere-road, on same scale as messengers in the third class at India-office. One housekeeper, £80 per annum; 1 assistant-housekeeper, £60 per annum; 24 housemaids, £40 per annum; 6 charwomen, 14s. per week each. These appointments are instead of—4 doorkeepers at £140 to £250; 35 office porters, &c., £90 to £140; 18 messengers, door porters, &c., £80 to £130 (with clothing); 1 housekeeper, £100; 1 assistant-housekeeper, £80; 8 charwomen, £36. 8s.

Miscellaneous.

THE DUKE OF ARGYLL, Secretary of State for India in Council, has nominated the Rev. Allan Ramsay, M.A., curate of Crondall, near Farnham, to a chaplaincy on the Bengal establishment.

DEATH OF MR. MALCOLM LEWIN.—The death of Mr. Malcolm Lewin, who for many years took an active part in the affairs of the East India Company, occurred on the morning of March 9. He was for some time an Indian judge. On his return home he took a leading part in the meetings of the East India proprietors, in opposition to the policy of the Court of Directors.

THE OVERLAND ROUTE BETWEEN OSTEND AND BRINDISI.—Captain Taylor, who has been commissioned by the English Government to examine the various routes for the transport of the Indian mails, has arrived at Brindisi from Greece, and will go over the line from Ancona to Bologna. He will thence proceed to Venice, returning to England via Brenner, accompanied by Calvaliere Biglia, inspector of Italian railways, in order to determine the best route for the direct service between Ostend and Brindisi.

CLEOPATRA'S NEEDLE.—In a letter to the Pall Mall Gazette, Sir Charles Trevelyan puts in a plea for "Cleopatra's Needle," which, although the property of the British nation, lies neglected under the sand at Alexandria. That well-known explorer, Sir James Alexander, has written to Sir Charles on the subject, and states that the obelisk might be removed to this country, at a cost of about £1,500—that is, if there were "no job" in the matter. Sir Charles suggests that "Cleopatra's Needle" might be advantageously placed in the centre of the Temple Gardens.

MONT CENIS TUNNEL.—At the commencement of February, 1869, the extent pierced on the great Mont Cenis tunnel was as follows:—On the Bardonnèche side, 6,015 yards; on the Modane side, 4,288 yards; total, 10,303 yards. At the commencement of January, 1869, the total distance pierced was 10,184 yards, so that the progress made in January amounted to 119 yards, of which 55 yards related to the Bardonnèche side and 64 yards to the Modane side. At the commencement of February the distance still remaining to be pierced was 3,317 yards, so that at the present rate of progress the tunnel will not be completed before the autumn of 1872.

THE MUTINY ON BOARD THE "SIMLA."—William Foster and fifteen other able seamen belonging to the ship Simla, 1,444 tons, have been brought before the magistrates of Plymouth for insubordination. The Simla was from London to Calcutta, and Captain Edmonds stated the prisoners were in debt to her, and that in Channel they had refused to do duty, and compelled him to put into Plymouth upon the pretence that the ship was leaky. The magistrates having appealed, without success, to the men, determined to send on board Mr. W. B. Cuming, Lloyd's surveyor, accompanied by three of the prisoners. The Court reassembled at five o'clock, when the surveyor reported that the ship was staunch, on which the crew expressed a wish to return to her. They were all sixteen sentenced to three months' imprisonment, with hard labour.

THE RAJAHS OF TIPPERAH.—"NEEL RISTE DEB BERMONO v. BEERCHUNDER THAKOOR."—This was an appeal from Bengal, part heard before the Judicial Committee on March 10. It was the most important appeal of the sittings, and a full court was formed for the hearing. The property in dispute is between £60,000 and £70,000 a-year, and the title to the Rajah of Tipperah-on-the-Hill, an immense territory. The case turned on the right of succession under the Hindoo law. The appellant claims the title and property as the eldest legitimate member of the late rajah, and the respondent is a younger brother by another rane or wife, and, according to custom, it is alleged was nominated the "Young Sovereign" by the late rajah. Mr. Field having concluded his address for the appellant, was followed by Mr. J. D. Bell on the same side. Their lordships did not call on the other side, and said notice would be given if they wished to hear the respondent's case.

NON-PURCHASE REGIMENTS.—We understand that the case of certain officers of the new line regiments, who are desirous of reverting to their old position, or to be appointed to the Indian Staff Corps, is likely soon to receive a decision from the authorities at the India Office, to whom it has been referred by his Royal Highness, the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief. The position of these officers is certainly a very hard one, and although the bulk of the officers in the new line regiments receive with satisfaction their new conditions of service, and particularly the prospect of alternating between service in England and abroad, still there are several very deserving officers of long service who would find it utterly impossible to live in England upon the reduced pay, in consequence of their having long since contracted monetary obligations based on the pay and allowances of the Indian service. In carrying out the amalgamation between the Queen's troops and the company's troops, it was unavoidable that many anomalies and hardships should be developed. It is gratifying to think that his Royal Highness has shown a disposition to favour the full examination of such cases, and that the authorities at the India Office are discovering how much of real grievance they can remove by granting a very few moderate requirements.—Broad Arrow.

RE-ENLISTMENTS.—A Royal Warrant, signed by Mr. Cardwell, has been issued, announcing that the re-engagement of soldiers will in future be limited to those cases in which men shall renew their engagement for a second term of service while actually serving. This new regulation is to take effect from the 1st day of April, or, in the case of soldiers serving out of the United Kingdom, on the 30th day of April. The warrant also announces that the following issues and payments heretofore granted to soldiers at the time of the engagement shall cease on March 31, viz., the free kit, or commutation in lieu thereof; the 20 days' marching money; the payment of compensation in lieu of clothing from the 1st of April to date of re-engagement, if such re-engagement should be made before the 1st of July; and the payment of £2 for the provision of winter clothing in North America.

"KALOODDOWLAH v. SAH BUNARSEE DOSS."—Lord Justice Giffard gave judgment in the Privy Council, on March 11, in this case. It was an appeal from a decree of the Judicial Commissioner at Oude, by which a decree of the judge of the Court at Lucknow, dismissing the appellant's suit, was affirmed. The suit had reference to some Government securities as promissory notes, which the appellant's brother, it was alleged, had stolen during the Indian rebellion, and a portion got into the hands of the respondent Doss, a banker, who was held to be entitled to the same. His lordship, in giving judgment, referred to the dispute which existed in the appellant's family as to the division of the property of the late mother of the two brothers, and the disappearance of the notes or, "company's paper," when the Mutiny broke out. Two legal bars had been raised against the appellant's claim in the Courts below, and there had been no decision on the merits. Their lordships would recommend that the present appeal be allowed, and the case remanded to the Court below for hearing, when the questions in the case could be raised on proper pleadings. The appellant had obtained a judgment against his brother, who had taken the notes, and there was no reason why he should be dismissed from the suit which the appellant had brought against the respondent for the restitution of the notes or their value in money. The suit was remitted, and the costs to be costs in the cause. Judgment accordingly.

INDIAN COTTON.—A deputation of members of Parliament, members of Chambers of Commerce, and other gentlemen interested in cotton manufacture, waited upon the Duke of Argyll on Thursday last for the purpose of presenting memorials urging the policy of increasing the agencies by which India could be made a cotton-growing country, and praying that the means of irrigation and navigation and transit generally should be extended. Several members of the deputation having explained the views of the memorialists, the Duke of Argyll said he agreed with those who had urged that there should be a considerable commercial element in the Indian Council; but he thought the desideratum sought had been to a certain extent already obtained, and he mentioned the names of Mr. Arbuthnot and Mr. McNaghten as those of gentlemen who had a thorough knowledge of the commercial affairs of India. Considerable misunderstanding existed in the public mind regarding the intentions of the Indian Council. It was believed that that body was backward in supporting schemes projected for the improvement of Indian commerce. He could only say that some of the members of the Council who had been connected with the East India Company were most go-a-head as regarded the promotion of public improvement in India. As an instance of liberal dealing with Indian affairs, he would mention that some time ago it had been urged that Darwar should be opened up as a cotton-growing district. His predecessor had asked for information on the subject, and as that information had not yet arrived, he had himself made inquiries, and having ascertained that there was a strong prima facie case in favour of the project specified he had given instructions that a surveyor should be sent out to make the necessary examination. At the same time, the commercial classes should remember what a wide field for private enterprise existed in India. It was a great misfortune that the aid of Government should be looked for in almost every instance; scarcely a fence could be built in India without a claim for Government assistance. One of the deputation had alluded to the system of Government in India, and had suggested the propriety of parcelling the country into districts. Though a certain amount of decentralisation was possible, there were insuperable difficulties in the way of perfect decentralisation, and even Mr. Bright, who had proposed the course referred to, must admit that the army should be directed by a central authority. At the close of the Duke's speech, Mr. Cheetham, formerly M.P. for Salford, expressed the pleasure he felt on account of the consideration that after all the obstructions which had been placed in the way of those with whom he had acted in this matter, they now for the first time had an interview with a Minister who held out hopes for the future.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, March 9.—THE INDIAN GOVERNMENT AND AFGHANISTAN.—In reply to Mr. BECKETT DENISON, Mr. GRANT DUFF said that, in compliance with a request for assistance from the Ameer of Afghanistan, the late Viceroy gave him six lacs of rupees, and sanctioned the payment to him, somewhat later, of a like amount, a good deal of which had no doubt before this reached his treasury. The late Viceroy also sent him some muskets and ammunition. No formal conditions were attached to the gifts. They were intended as a pledge of goodwill, and as the expression of a hope that a strong Government was about to be established in a long distracted country. The words "subsidy" and "subsidising" were not appropriate to the circumstances. Sir John Lawrence never contemplated a subsidy, and the Government considered itself entirely unfettered as to the amount and kind of assistance to be rendered to the Ameer.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, March 11.—THE PUNJAB TENANCY ACT.—Sir C. WINGFIELD asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether he would lay before the House a copy of the despatch of the Secretary of State for India to the Governor-General of India, with reference to the Act passed by the Governor-General of India in Council, on the 1st of October, 1868, entitled the Punjab Tenancy Act.—Mr. GRANT DUFF: I cannot do what my hon. friend wishes, because no such despatch exists. A despatch on the Punjab Tenancy Bill was drawn last November, but it was cancelled by the then Secretary of State in Council, and never went to India.

HOUSE OF LORDS, THURSDAY, March 11.—GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA BILL.—In moving the second reading of this Bill, The Duke of ARGYLL said that it touched matters of high interest and importance. It is a measure which has been drawn up by the Government of India in order to remedy defects which have been found to exist in the machinery of the Government of that country. The first two clauses merely give the Indian Government complete authority over our own subjects resident in native States, subjecting them without reserve to our criminal jurisdiction. The third and fourth clauses involve questions of great interest and importance. Up to 1833 the Executive Council of the Governor-General had full power to make laws for the States under the Government; nor was the state of things materially altered until the Act of 1853 was passed. Since 1853 a very different state of things has existed. The Act of 1853 set up an independent Legislative Council. The effect of this was that the Governor-General in Executive Council could not make a regulation for any portion of India, however wild and outlying, without appealing to the Legislative Council. That has been found very inconvenient. Another inconvenience is that the discretionary power of the Governor-General has been injuriously limited. This Bill will enable the Governor-General in Executive Council to make laws for the non-regulation provinces; and the same power will be given to the Lieutenant-Governors of provinces which are placed under the government of such a functionary, subject to the approval of the Governor-General. The measure also provides that it shall not be incumbent on the members of the Executive Council to record their dissent from the Governor-General when they differ from him, unless two or more of such members shall desire it. The eighth clause enables the Government of India to select natives of the country for the covenanted civil service without their having undergone a competitive examination at home. This provision is essential to the due performance of our duties and promises to the natives of India. We have not hitherto fulfilled these duties so far as the employment of natives in our civil service. The Act of 1833 provided that these persons shall not be disqualified from employment by reason of their birth or religion. But this provision is illusory so long as we open no door to them except that of a competitive examination in London, through which they can, from obvious causes, rarely pass. He thought that to certain places in the civil service no natives of India should be appointed who had not spent some time in England, and had not had some experience of the working of English institutions. But there are other appointments for which natives who have not been in England are sufficiently qualified; and he proposed to allow such appointments to be competed for in examinations at Calcutta, or to be filled up by a selection of the Governor-General. It might be asked how this would affect the system of competitive examination which was established by the Act of 1853. Well, he did not think that competitive examination was the only or the best mode of securing good appointments. It was perhaps, under ordinary circumstances, the best safeguard against family nepotism or political jobbery. But there is no fear that anything of this kind will take place in India by the Governor-General. He did not, therefore, think that there would be any danger in entrusting him with the power to appoint such natives as he might think fit to posts under Government. The noble duke concluded by stating that he had struck out the clause contained in the Bill as it was drawn by the late Government, for erecting the lieutenant-governorship of Bengal into a full governorship. Under existing circumstances he thought it would be most inexpedient to make this change, which is opposed by Sir John Lawrence, by the most eminent members of his Council in India, and by all but three members of the Council at home. He thought however that it would be expedient to make the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal a member of the Executive Council of the Governor-General, which he was not at present; but on that point great difference of opinion exists, and he did not therefore propose to deal with it in the present Bill.—Lord LYVEDEN said that he cordially approved that provision in the Bill which would admit natives of India to the civil service without requiring them to submit to a competitive examination in England. At the same time he did not think that the natives of India would, or ought to, feel satisfied with the measure. They would still feel that they were at a disadvantage with the Europeans. The only fair plan would be to allow the natives to compete with Europeans for appointments in an examination held in Calcutta.—The Marquis of SALISBURY agreed almost entirely both with the speech and the Bill of the noble duke. He was satisfied that it would be most conducive to the interests of India to enlarge the legislative powers of the Governor-General of India. If we are to govern Asiatics well we must govern them Asiatically. It is absurd to attempt to apply European ideas to the government of that country. The Government of India ought to be rendered rather more than less despotic, and he was glad, therefore, to see that the noble Duke is about to take a step in the right direction. The noble Duke seemed to think that the only way to give the natives of India a share in the government of their country is by admitting them to our civil service. But that is not so. They have a large share through their participation in the government of the native States; and one of the strongest reasons for maintaining those States is that they afford a field for the energies of the capable natives. The course adopted by the noble Duke with reference to the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal was the correct one under the circumstances; but, at the same time, the position of that functionary is not satisfactory, and must be changed whenever we change the seat of our Government from Calcutta to some more healthy State. He trusted that the noble Duke would before long turn his attention to the constitution of the Indian Council at home, with a view both to secure a more rapid and constant infusion of new blood, and to obtain an adequate representation of the commercial interest in that body. It is also desirable that the power of the Council to veto the action of the Secretary of State in all matters relating to money should be taken away or greatly limited; for there is no reason why the Secretary of State for India should not exercise the same power and fulfil the same responsibility as the head of any other department.—Lord HOUGHTON desired to learn how it was proposed to combine the discretion given to the Governor-General to appoint natives to the Civil Service with the system of competitive examination established at home.—Lord HARDINGE concurred in the Bill. Every measure which tends to strengthen the hands of the Governor-General is a step in the right direction.—The Duke of SOMERSET asked whether the Secretary of State for India would on some future occasion make a statement with regard to the finances of India.—The Duke of ARGYLL, in reply, said that the mere maintenance of the native States would not fulfil the obligations into which we entered by the Act of 1833, to admit the natives of India to public employment. With regard to the home Council of India he would state his views more fully on a future occasion, when he introduced another Bill; but he believed it to be quite incorrect to say that the Council has any power to veto the acts of the Secretary of State with regard to any but money matters. In all political questions he is supreme. No doubt great care must be taken with regard to the admission of natives to our Civil Service, and he was by no means disposed to urge the Governor-General to take any precipitate steps in the matter. He would make a statement in that House on the subject of Indian finance in addition to that which would be laid before the House of Commons by the Under Secretary of State. The Bill was then read a second time

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, March 12.—Mr. GREGORY presented a petition from Benares, in India, praying for the repeal of all laws that prevented the peaceable practice of astrology.—(laughter).

CENTRAL ASIA.—Mr. EASTWICK postponed his notice on the affairs of Central Asia till Friday, July 9.

THE BANK OF BOMBAY.—Mr. G. DUFF, in reply to Mr. NICOL, said that he could not state precisely when this report would be presented, but there would be no unnecessary delay.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, March 15.—The Lord Napier of Magdala (Salary) Bill passed through Committee.

INDIAN FINANCE.

The Times observes that in the absence of more complete details it is impossible to pronounce a decisive judgment on the position of the Indian Exchequer, but there is one point very clearly brought out by many recent events to which the Indian Secretary may well direct his attention. It is the extreme uncertainty of Indian prognostics. The gross discrepancy between the Abyssinian Estimates as first sent home and the more recent demand provided for by a Vote of Supply last week is an offence which English taxpayers cannot easily understand, and will not soon forget; but we have, besides, year after year, accounts put forward by authority which are corrected and re-corrected, so that we can never rely upon the trustworthiness of any version of them. What is the excuse for this neglect? India comprises, without doubt, a vast area, and the accounts are transmitted from many collectors before they are reduced to one balance-sheet; but the management of accounts is, after all, mere mechanism, and revenue accounts, in particular, can at all times be readily checked by the actual balances in hand. The drudgery of account-keeping, again, is throughout India thrown upon native assistants, who are exceedingly expert in the manipulation of figures, although, probably, requiring intelligent superintendence. With a properly organised machinery there ought to be no difficulty in knowing at Calcutta within three weeks or a month of the end of a financial year the exact result of its operations. At present neither this nor anything like it is secured, and the Duke of Argyll may profitably signalise his administration at the India-office by insisting upon such a reform of Indian accounts as will satisfy this condition of despatch and accuracy.

THE TELEGRAPH TO INDIA.

The Daily News, without pretending to an opinion as to whether the heavy or light cable will win in the long run, says it is clear that the issue should be fairly tried out. Even supposing both lines to be laid, there is traffic enough on their own showing, even at present, to pay a good dividend on the estimated capital of both companies. But as the Direct Indian Company, with their light cable, will get at least five months' start of the British Indian, the experiment may have been successfully made, and the game played out, before the latter company have begun the most expensive part of their work. The words "played out" are used advisedly, because this is not like the question of broad and narrow gauge, a balance of advantages. Should Mr. Varley's light cable succeed, the heavy cable must disappear, for as a mere question of finance it will be impossible to continue the manufacture and use of the heavy iron-covered cable when one infinitely more handy and equal in all other respects can be made for half the money. The results must be as decisive as those which followed the introduction of the spinning jenny in the cotton trade. Of course it will be for the advantage of the public that the light and cheap cable should succeed, but we are "on velvet" in the controversy, as in the worst case we shall be certain to get telegraphic communication of our own with India in the course of 1870, though we shall pay more for it if we have to fall back on the heavy cable.

THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

The Times remarks that the grievances of native Indian candidates for the Civil Service have long found expression in murmurs, if not formal complaints. In the old times they were simply passed over; at present the same effect is produced by other means, and the natives are provoked by what seems a cruel and ostentatious hypocrisy. They are admissible to the Indian Civil Service Examination, but that examination is held in London, and it is directed, for the most part, to the subjects which form especially the educational course of Englishmen. The young Asiatic does not learn Latin and Greek, which have much weight in this examination. The languages with which he is most likely to be acquainted, and which would certainly be most valuable in his Indian career, are placed on little more than an equality with French or Italian, and he can never hope to gain as many marks under the head of "language" as an ordinary public schoolboy who, in addition to some classical knowledge, can read or write one or two European languages. The consequence has been that competition by native Indians for the Civil Service no longer exists. The proposal of the Government is simply that native civil servants should be appointed in India by the Governor-general, and not necessarily after competition. This is probably the best settlement of the question.

THE OFFICIAL EMPLOYMENT OF NATIVES IN INDIA.

The Telegraph holds that the proposal made by the Duke of Argyll to make a reality of a long-avoided pledge, and open the highest grades of office in India to Hindoos, is an event from which "Asia governed Asiatically," to use Lord Salisbury's phrase, will hereafter count her political Olympiads. It cannot be doubted that, for the safety and popularity of our rule, it is really wise to connect ourselves with the governed race, and obtain the advantage of that great contentment which we would ensure by opening to its millions a limited share of our authority and emoluments. The irony of history would have been too gross if, at a time when the United States of America opens the door of the State to the black Helots of the soil, we had continued to exclude the intellectual and capable élite of "Young India" from the lessons of Government which we are in the East to teach them—if we are in the East for any purpose or end that will bear the verdict of posterity. But though the revolution itself is inevitable and long over-due, the method of carrying it out must be adequately and wisely debated for; for, according to the conduct of the reform, it may be made a gentle and happy corollary of our education, or an unwise attempt to pick out and establish "British Brahmins."

THE CENTRAL ASIA HUBBUB.

The Broad Arrow reminds us that though there came a time when all Afghanistan to a man rose against us, and disaster unparalleled in British history befell our arms, Russia not only recalled her agent from Cabul, but consistently refused to have anything to say to the Afghans, or in any way to profit by our misfortunes. She did more. About the same time she did her utmost to rescue from the grasp of Nasir-Ullah, the tyrannical Emir of Bokhara, the two ill-fated British officers, Stoddart and Conolly. Moreover, far from fostering enmity between Persia and England—war had broken out between the two Powers—she unquestionably used her good offices for the re-establishment of peaceful relations. Again, in more recent times, when Herat was actually taken by a Persian army, no trace could be discovered that Russia was furthering any scheme of hostility to England. During the rebellion in India, if ever there was a time when the road to our Indian possessions lay open to an invader, Russia as certainly sympathised with us, and not with our rebellious subjects. The five years' anarchy in Afghanistan which followed the death of Dost Mahomed Khan offered a fair field for the indulgence of this alleged spirit of Russian intrigue. But beyond mere "canards" in Indian bazaars and newspapers, there are no signs that Russia has espoused the cause of any among the rival chiefs and factions; and this, notwithstanding our avowed indifference as to what might ensue amongst the descendants of our ally, the late Ameer of Cabul. Notwithstanding these favourable circumstances, it does not appear that she has made any attempt whatsoever to secure for herself any sort of alliance to aid her in advancing upon Cabul. If there were any good grounds for the apprehension disseminated by the Indian journals that Russia is threatening the security of our Empire there, the circumstance is a deplorable admission that we have little real faith in the popularity of our rule. So distant and so unwieldy a Government as that of Russia comprehends no element of danger to our dominion in the East, provided we could rely on the loyalty and good faith of our native subjects and allies there, as well as upon British soldiers. It is to be hoped, therefore, that this Central Asian question, as far as regards Russia, will be allowed by the new Governor-general to rest. Any arrangement as to fixing the limit of Russia's future conquests in Central Asia would not only be derogatory to that Power, but it would be time lost. She will advance or retire as it suits her own interests. And we have no more right to demand her to do this, because she has established Cossack posts on the Jaxartes to protect her commerce in those regions, than she had to demand that we were to halt when we were advancing to the Indus, and making a solid annexation of territory in the Punjab.

19TH BENGAL CAVALRY.—The following arrangements are made during the absence, on leave, of Major H. Melvill, 2nd in command, and Lieut. A. J. T. Welchman, 3rd squadron officer:—Capt. Upperton, 2nd squad. officer, to offic. as 2nd in com. and squad. officer; Lieut. Loch, 1st squad. subalt., to offic. as 2nd squad. officer; Lieut. Willis, 2nd squad. subalt., to offic. as 3rd squad. officer; and Lieut. Abbott, doing duty, to offic. as 1st squad. subaltern.

ENGLISH HOMES IN INDIA.

PART I.—THE THREE LOVES. | PART II.—THE WRONG TURNING.

PUBLISHERS' NOTICE.

The writer of these volumes—an accomplished member of a family whose name is conspicuous in Indian story—being now resident in India, they have not had the benefit of her final corrections. It is hoped, however, that this inevitable drawback will detract but little from the pleasure to be afforded by the perusal of the tales, which are, indeed, what they profess to be, stories of English Homes in India, represented as such homes are in different parts of the country and under various social and professional aspects. They endeavour fairly and without exaggeration to illustrate Anglo-Indian life as it is, in its many varying phases, and to bring upon the scene, in their everyday costume, many kinds of Anglo-Indian workmen, from the Resident at a Native Court, to the subaltern officer and the railway employé; and it is believed that all who have visited the countries described will recognise the truth of the portraiture.

PROSPECTUS.

The object of this Company is to lay and work Submarine Telegraphs between England, Gibraltar, Malta, Egypt, India, China, and Australia, which shaft be in English hands from end to end.

This Telegraph will work by Submarine Cables, and will therefore be more accurate, reliable, and speedy than by land lines.

The cost of the Cable selected will be little more than half that of the deep-sea Cable ordinarily in use.

The Cable has been carefully tested under the direction of Sir William Thomson and Mr. Varley, and nothing could be more satisfactory than the results. The report addressed by Sir William Thomson to the directors is appended.

With a view of insuring direct and advantageous communication with the Continent of Europe, it is proposed to lay at once a short line between Malta and Brindisi. The contractors will engage to ship this Cable not later than the end of May.

The directors reserve to themselves to decide whether, after this branch line is laid, a Cable from Malta to Egypt, or from Suez to Bombay, shall be next laid. In the event of the Cable between Malta and Egypt being undertaken first, no Call will be made beyond the £2 paid on application and allotment till the Malta-Egypt line is laid and working. In the event of the lines from Suez to Bombay being undertaken first, £1 will be called in June, and £1 in September, and the remaining £1 in December, 1869.

With respect to the anticipated revenue, it has been generally admitted that it is not too much to calculate upon 300 messages per day; that is, 150 messages each way. Supposing the line from Suez to Bombay to earn an average of thirty shillings per message for 300 days, the number of messages given above would, at that rate, yield a gross annual return of £135,000 upon a cost somewhat exceeding £800,000. The working expenses of Submarine Telegraphs form a very small percentage on the traffic.

Her Majesty's Government has furnished the Company with the latest surveys and soundings of the proposed route, which prove that the beds on which these Cables will lie are unusually good.

40,000 Shares have already been taken up, and there remain 110,000 Shares, which are offered to the public. Applications for Shares accompanied by a deposit of £1 per Share on the number applied for, may be made to any of the Bankers of the Company. Prospectuses and Forms of Application may be obtained at the Bankers, or at the Offices of the Company.

The deposit will be returned if no allotment is made to the applicant.

Copies of the Memorandum and Articles of Association may be inspected at the Offices of the Solicitor or of the Company.

For further particulars see detailed Prospectus in Newspapers.

COPY OF LETTER.

Sir William Thomson to the Directors of this Company.

LONDON, Feb. 27, 1869.

GENTLEMEN.—After the severe tests to which I have subjected your Cable yesterday and to-day, I have perfect confidence in recommending you to adopt it. I am convinced that it will give you a surer prospect of complete success in your undertaking than you could have with any other form of Cable hitherto devised or made.

In the varied experiments I have made, I have exaggerated every variety of rough usage and heavy strain to which it could be exposed in laying it, or even in hauling it up on a grapple from a depth of three miles, and I find the mechanical qualities to be most satisfactory, much superior, indeed, to anything I could have anticipated. The protection afforded to the electric wire was quite perfect throughout all the rough usage, both in respect of insulation and continuity.

I remain, your obedient servant,

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

SCROFULA VANQUISHED.—Vain indeed were the wishes of parents of children afflicted with hereditary diseases to find a remedy competent to grasp successfully with these great and terrible scourges of mankind. Mr. Thos. Roe, Druggist, at Whitthorne, writes thus to Professor Holloway:—"Sir—Alexander McFadden, son of a gamekeeper residing in this town, had a scrofulous sore on his foot for five years, which discharged much matter, and was continually growing larger and deeper. Almost everything had been unsuccessfully applied, with the hope of healing the ulcer, when the youth was brought to me, and I recommended a trial of your Ointment and Pills, which healed up the ulceration, and eventually effected a cure."

ESSENCE OF FLUID EXTRACT OF RED
JAMAICA SARSAPARILLA, prescribed by the Faculty
for purifying the blood, debility, liver complaints, and freeing the system from the effects of mercury. Exclusively used in India and the Colonies as a prevention to tropical diseases.

"Superior preparation that may always be relied upon."—Sir Astley Cooper.
"We are in every respect satisfied with it."—Lancet.
"We recommend your Sarsaparilla as the best."—
Medical Review.

Sold in quarter, half, and pint bottles.
CAUTION.—Many spurious, worthless, and injurious preparations are offered to the public. See that both bottle and label have the name and address.

QUINTESENCE OF JAMAICA GINGER AND CAMOMILE.

WILKINSON'S PREPARATION OF GINGER and
CAMOMILE has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine. It is a most efficient stomachic tonic, and the best remedy for flatulency and disorders arising from impaired digestion.

It is not affected by climate.
No European in India or tropical countries should be without it.

AROMATIC TINCTURE OF QUINOIDINE.

For the Prevention of Fever, Ague, and effects of Malaria. An unfailing remedy. It may be mentioned that those who, during the campaign in the Crimea,
daily took a small quantity, passed entirely unharmed through the raging fever of fever and dysentery that thinned the ranks around them.

Sold in half and quarter-pint bottles.
Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body."
It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.
TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent
Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guaranteed

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft
and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell.
Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. WENT'S residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free
by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Den-

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER
TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great
Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.,
postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.;
postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Postoffice, Piccadilly.
NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,
&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness
and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c.
It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

JOHN WHITE, MANUFACTURER, 228, PICCADILLY,
LONDON.

MONARY MALADIES.

RECENT TESTIMONIAL.

August 23, 1868.
Dear Sir,—Having tried your Cough Lozenges in India,
I have much pleasure in testifying to their beneficial effects in cases of incipient consumption, asthma, and bronchial affections; so good a medicine ought to be known to be appreciated. I have prescribed it largely with the best results.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, February 27; Agra and Calcutta, February 23; Madras, February 22.

The telegram published a few weeks ago regarding a new move of Azim Khan's adherents in Afghan Turkistan explains itself by the tidings contained in the Bombay papers. It seems that Mohammed Yusuf Khan, the ex-Ameer's son, has really raised the flag of revolt by seizing on the strong towns of Khilm and Tukhtapol in the absence or through the negligence of Shere-Ali's lieutenant in those parts. Abdurrahman Khan at once started off to join his cousin by the Bajour road; but whether he has made his way through all the perils before and around him remains to see. Azim Khan himself has not followed his nephew's example, and is less likely to do so with each day's delay. The event itself is of no great importance in its bearings on Shere Ali's fortunes. Abdurrahman Khan's hold on Turkistan was never very firm, nor had he left behind him a popular name. Shere Ali, on the other hand, has all the advantages of late success and the new breeze of British patronage on his side. It is certain, at any rate, that nothing has yet occurred to interfere with the intended meeting between him and Lord Mayo at Umballa.

WE have also a more detailed account of the Bazotie raid on Kohat. It seems that a small body of Othman Kheyl Dowlutzaïs surprised the guard of a tower at the foot of the Kohat Kothul, on a dark wet night. The one man who resisted was killed, and the rest were carried off to the hills, whence one of them afterwards got away. This happened on the 13th of February. A few days before these same Orukzaïs fired on another party fired several shots at a tower only 150 yards in front of the 4th Punjab Cavalry Lines. Meanwhile the Bazoties were still treating with Major Pollock as to the reparation due from them for last year's outrages, which brought about the death of Captain Ruxton.

LORD MAYO's journey upwards is to begin about the 20th March. His Lordship purposed visiting Raneeunge, to see for himself into the extent and management of the coal mines in that neighbourhood. Lady Mayo has been distributing prizes to the Calcutta volunteers, and his Lordship has accepted the headship of the Indian Freemasons.

THE famine cloud has wellnigh passed away, even from Rajpootana, where, in spite of a vast emigration and a fearful loss in cattle, matters were beginning to look brighter. Only in Ajmere and Lullutpore are the relief-works kept going regularly, and the calls on private charity still continued. The Jumna and Ganges Canals have done incalculable service by doubling the area of irrigation during the drought. A few dry days more however would have rendered them powerless for further good. So swiftly did prices fall after the rain, that large stocks of rice which had just been sent from Cawnpore to Meerut were forthwith returned to Cawnpore.

AJMERE will benefit largely by the public works begotten of the famine. "Now," says a correspondent of the Friend of India, "we are getting proper roads, new tanks are being constructed, and old ones repaired." The Deputy Commissioner took Mr. Inglis, of the Revenue Board, "to the worst parts of the district, managed to upset him once or twice, kept him upwards of twelve hours on the road between Beawr and Ajmere, a distance of thirty-five miles," and sent him away convinced that the district in question had been "most shamefully neglected" by the Government.

THE Committee on Indian Weights and Measures have sent in their long-expected Report. Seeing no likelihood of the French metric system being established in England, they recommend the yard, cubit, foot, and inch, as standards of length, the acre of area in official transactions, the 2 lb. seer of weight, with binary divisions and decimal multiples. Fifty seers will make a maund, a hundred seers a sotee or double maund, and a thousand seers a ton. The new Post-office tola they would make equal to half-an-ounce. The quart, containing one seer weight of mixed grain or rice, is recommended as the unit of capacity, with binary divisions down to sixteenths, and decimal multiples; all in accordance with Sir John Herschel's scale of connection between measures of weight, capacity, and length. Native names are to be retained wherever they exist, with English ones for such measures as feet, inches, and tons. The committee advise the gradual introduction of the new measures, first into public departments, afterwards into towns and villages. The Indian Government differs from the Committee as to the exact weight of the seer, and the process of subdividing it. We trust however that the India Office will uphold the Committee against the decimalising mania of the Supreme Government.

WE hear that the Madras Government has undertaken to compile a new Code of Regulations for the Madras army, as well as a new Code for the Medical Service. Major Holland is still at work on the Military Code for Bengal. Colonel S. Becher's Pay Rules for the three Presidencies are on the eve of publication. We may well ask with the Pioneer why three separate Codes should be needed for what is practically one army. As the Secretary for India remarked the other day, even Mr. Bright would hardly desire to have three or more distinct and independent armies in one Peninsula; and we are at a loss to see why the rules that serve for one Presidency should not equally suit another.

THE death of the Nizam, which was announced in a recent telegram from Bombay, seems to have caused no particular sensation in his own country. All was quiet there by the latest accounts. His son, a minor, has been duly proclaimed his successor, and a regency has been established under the guardianship of the Indian Government. The late Nizam had a troubled time of it for many years between the turbulence of his own soldiery and the pressure put upon him by Lord Dalhousie's government. After pawning the Berars to his most powerful creditor, he found himself comparatively in smooth water under the able guidance of Salar Jung. During the Mutiny he had the good sense to follow his Minister's counsels in preference to the desires of a large body of his countrymen, who would gladly have helped him in a crusade against the Feringhie. His impatience of English supremacy showed itself in his rejection of the knighthood afterwards offered him in the name of his new Lady Paramount, the Empress of Hindostan.

WE understand that Colonel Norman's scheme for buying out the surplus officers in the Staff Corps is already on its way back to India, bearing the needful endorsement of the India Office. The reticence of the home authorities on this and some other questions affecting the services, seems to us absurdly out of keeping with all the tendencies of the day. What is the use of so much mystery about matters which must eventually become known? Why should India be more favoured than England? In the present case there are many officers at home whom an early knowledge of the Indian Secretary's decision would have relieved from sickening suspense, and even from much pecuniary loss. The late Government, we believe, was in favour of using the London Gazette as a vehicle of information on all official matters of which the public at large might reasonably claim to have early and correct knowledge. With regard to Indian questions of this character, we certainly think that a fair claim to the benefits of such an arrangement, to a greater extent than heretofore, might be asserted on behalf of this journal also, whose readers largely represent the Indian services in this country. Many an officer has been put to ruinous expense because instructions already despatched to India were still kept secret from the public at home.

A BOMBAY telegram informs us that the Indian Government has invited tenders for a loan of two crores of rupees (£2,000,000), in promissory notes, at 4 per cent. interest. As the tenders will not be opened till the 17th April we can form no idea at what price the loan will be taken up. If native speculators should offer to do so at anything like par, we shall be agreeably surprised.

WE have very good reasons for denying the truth of the rumour, to which the Times has given the sanction of its name, that Sir John Lawrence is to assume the title of Viscount Foyle. The late Viceroy of India will of course be raised to the peerage; but if we may venture on a prophecy, we should say that he will never exchange his name for one borrowed from any place in the world. The name which he has made illustrious by a long course of splendid services will probably be deemed by him good enough to keep company with his new title. In India his memory will be perpetuated by a statue, to which his admirers out there have already subscribed a considerable sum. A committee has also been formed in this country to collect subscriptions for the same purpose.

IN spite of all drawbacks Indian tea seems to be steadily making its way in the markets of this country. In the last three years alone the imports into England have risen from 4,300,000 to 7,320,000 pounds, an increase of a million pounds a-year. And we are assured that a like rate of increase may be expected for many years to come. In the matter of flavour English tastes seem to differ from those of Asiatics, the Central Asian traders at the Palampore Fair not having found in the later samples of Indian tea that improvement which has recommended them most to English palates. We should like to know how much of the Indian tea is drunk pure in this country, as compared with the quantity brought over for mixing with the cheaper Chinese teas. The price of high-class Kemaon and Kangra teas on the spot must interfere with their ready sale in England for some time to come. India however will some day be a large consumer of her own teas, and it is not at all unlikely that Turkistan will soon prove one of her best customers.

THE Courts Martial Commission has recommended some sensible reforms in the penal system of the army. It would substitute fines for imprisonment in cases of drunkenness. There is ample evidence to show that "constant trials and frequent imprisonments for drunkenness tend to demoralise the men," by making imprisonment too common, and entailing heavier duty on the well-behaved. Separate cells and hard labour ought to be the rule in all military prisons. If a soldier is physically unfit for hard labour, you had better, say the Commissioners, get rid of him altogether, for he is clearly unfit to be a soldier. The same plan ought, they think, to be carried out with all soldiers "who, from repeated convictions, afford grounds for believing that they are beyond the power of reformation." What indeed can be the good of keeping such reprobates in an honourable service? It is a gross injustice to the well-behaved to insist on the retention of these black sheep, and it is foolish waste of time and money's worth to go on punishing men whom no amount of punishment will turn into good soldiers.

THE granting of a medal for the Abyssinian campaign has evoked fresh demands for similar rewards from many quarters. If a medal was to be given for a campaign in which nobody was killed, ought not the troops who have fought and bled in New Zealand to get their medals also? More than five hundred were killed or wounded in the last hard struggle with the Maories. But what was that, ask the heroes of Umberla, to the Swat campaign, in which more than eight hundred were killed or wounded in thirteen sharp fights? And now "One who Served in the South Malhatta Campaign of 1844-45" makes out, in the Army and Navy Gazette, a strong case for the ten thousand men employed for nine months in a tough business crowned by the storming of Punalla, one of the strongest hill-forts in the world, a kind of Gibraltar on the Nilgherries. The capture of this stronghold is described by Major Straith as one of those feats of happy daring which are denounced as rash blunders when they fail. The troops in New Zealand are to have a medal, it seems, for their services. After that, will it be possible to turn a deaf ear to other claims at least as strong as theirs? And at what point should the issuing of such rewards stop? If the Abyssinian heroes deserve a medal, it is hard to say where the line should be drawn.

MR. ROBERT MITCHELL, of the War Office, has been transferred to the secret department of the India Office as translator of Russian documents. This looks like a timely move in the right direction. We believe that a clearer acquaintance with the written and printed evidences of Russian doings in Central Asia would dispel much of the alarm and uneasiness caused by the want of a key to the apparent mystery. Omne ignotum pro magnifico. When the two nations get a nearer look at each other, the old suspicions will gradually disappear.

THE Committee of the proposed Civil Service College have for some time past been at a standstill, in consequence of want of information as to the result of the canvas instituted on behalf of this undertaking amongst Civil servants of the Crown abroad, and especially in India. Within the last few days however, very gratifying communications have been received, and it appears that both in India and the Colonies the project has been recognised as likely to supply a want much and generally felt amongst servants of the Crown abroad. The Committee have been given to understand that from India especially a very large sum may be expected. It is the wish of the Committee to make temporary arrangements for commencing their operations as soon as a sufficient sum shall have been received to justify them in taking such a step.

ORDNANCE APPOINTMENTS.—The following promotions in the ordnance dept. are made from Feb. 18 last, in succession to Shore, pensioned:—Mr. Hazelgrove, asst. comy. and hon. ensign, to be deputy comy.; Mr. Bunyer, dep. asst. comy. and hon. ensign, to be asst. comy.; Mr. Blair, conductor, to be dep. asst. comy.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Captain Osborn's second letter came a day too late for insertion in the present number. Perhaps, after reading Dr. Goldstücker's reply to his former letter, Capt. Osborn will see the wisdom of withdrawing the other.—Ed. A. I. M.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THE SUEZ CANAL.

At eleven o'clock on the morning of Thursday, March 18, the waters of the Mediterranean were turned into the Bitter Lakes, the smaller of which lies about thirteen miles only from Suez. With the exception of one more cutting close to these Lakes, the rest of M. Lesseps' once problematical work will soon be completed. The Chalouf cutting is already far advanced, and the remaining twelve miles of the Canal will pass over a broad plain to the Red Sea; the plain itself being very little higher than the sea-level. On this last section of the work men are busily engaged already. In a few months more the waters of the Red Sea will be wedded to those of the Mediterranean, and the idea which Robert Stephenson scouted as a fond dream, and Lord Palmerston dreaded as a political danger, will then become an undeniable fact. All honour to M. Lesseps and those who have shared with him the risks and discouragements of twenty years! Now that his goal is so nearly won, we can afford to wish him full success in the future, and to smile at the jealousies which sought to hinder his earlier efforts. No one in England would now begrudge a French company whatever profit it may ultimately reap from an undertaking at once so costly and so full of hazard. It is not France that is likely in the long run to gain the most from an achievement which bids fair to dispense with the long sea voyage to India, for all steamers at any rate, if not for sailing-ships. The Suez Canal once opened, a large part of our trade with the East and the Antipodes will soon turn aside from the old road round the Cape for one half as long through Egypt. And not England only, but the whole Mediterranean seaboard will share in the advantages of this new outlet for the trade of three continents. Let us be duly thankful to the enterprise and the engineering skill which have opened out another Bosphorus for the ships of all nations. All fears of French ambition, all bogies of the kind raised up by Lord Palmerston's political susceptibilities, ought to be laid by the reflection that all Europe is interested in keeping open this new and more commodious highway to the East. In fact its very success as a commercial speculation depends on the facilities it will offer to commercial enterprise and to peaceful intercourse between many countries. As a large shareholder himself, the Viceroy of Egypt will take good care that no one foreign Power shall obtain exclusive privileges to the disadvantage of its many rivals, and to his own ultimate loss. Even in war-time it would be possible to guarantee the neutrality of the Canal, if the Great Powers will only carry out the principles laid down in the Treaty of Paris to their widest logical issues.

Even during the few years that the fresh-water canal has been open, a great increase of traffic has taken place. In that time Suez itself has grown from a dreary little town with 4,000 inhabitants to a bustling port with a population of 25,000. A long mole has been built out into the harbour, much land has been reclaimed, and a deep channel from the canal to the roads of Suez has been opened out by dredging. A dry dock offers ample room for the largest seagoing steamers. At Port Said, on the Mediterranean side, strong moles have been carried out beyond the belt of shallow water, into a sea of some depth with a firm bottom. Both here and at Suez a system of dredging will meet all the difficulties caused by silting sands. As for the sand-drifts from the desert which have alarmed so many prophets of evil, careful experiments have already proved that the danger is very much less than it looks, and is limited at the worst to about twenty miles out of the entire hundred. Along this part of the Canal the vegetation that will gradually cover the embankments will materially arrest the drifts. The effects of the wash too from passing vessels will be almost neutralised by the growth of seaweed on the more shelving banks. The amount of dredging likely to be required in aid of these processes will cost about £40,000 a-year, no very large item in the general outlay. But as the whole canal is to be opened by the 1st October, more certain data on this point will soon be forthcoming.

OUR INDIAN VAGRANTS.

THE remarks we made some weeks ago on the prevalence of Indian vagrants in this country, and the want of due means for dealing with the evil, need supplementing by facts which have since come to our knowledge. It is true that here and there some dusky outcast from his own country may still be seen shivering in our streets, the very picture of want and wretchedness, as he seeks a bakshish from the passer-by. Old Indians and others interested in the welfare of these picturesque but pitiable-looking strangers have continually seen and spoken with them, not only in London, but in many a watering-place on our Southern coasts, and in not a few inland towns. These objects of the white man's pity are always ready with some sad tale of the destitution consequent on their master's death. Some years ago the friends of the class might have told by name two hundred such in the streets of London alone, besides fifty more in the workhouses of East London. Of these a certain number were always drifting into our hospitals and jails, whence they emerged to revel in a strange mixture of Eastern and European vice, corrupting others as they had been corrupted themselves, and gambling away their spare pence at the old Indian game of Pachasi in some low opium smoking-room.

Of late however a clearance has been made among these poor wretches. In the course of twelve years the Strangers' Home at Limehouse has taken 940 Asiatic and African vagrants off the streets, given them free board and lodging, found employment for them, and shipped them off to their native country. It was through the Christian zeal of this noble institution, which deserves from the public more support than it now receives, that eleven out of the twenty Indians brought over two years ago to England by the brothers Hanlon were finally sent back to Calcutta at the sole charge of the India Office. Of the vagrants now remaining in this country there is hardly one not personally known to the officers of the Strangers' Home or their correspondents. So successful have been the efforts of those officers to reduce the number of these "Waifs and Strays" that, instead of hundreds, they may now be counted by tens. In our hospitals and workhouses there is now, we hear, not one. The few that remain in our streets remain of their own accord. The Home would gladly take them in, but to the Home they will not go. As a rule, they are not the servants of masters who have died or broken their agreements; they are mostly Lascars who have deserted from their ships or been illegally discharged. Of course their usual tale to confiding strangers is very different.

It was the death of their masters that brought them into their present strait, and the unwary are further misled by the written or printed papers they carry about with them. But those who know more about the habits of their class are quick at detecting so transparent a dodge. One of these counterfeiters told the usual tale, backed by the usual papers, to a gentleman who at once recognised a Lascar from the Mary Anne. On being taxed with the falsehood, "What shall I do, Sahib? I must live"—was the ready answer. Another fellow at Liverpool gave the same account of his master's death, and even expressed a strong desire to return home. But the offer of means to gratify his wish was met by the question—"But what shall I do, Sahib, with my wife and children?"

For vagrants of this class, most of whom came over during the time when masters were compelled to deposit £50 as surety for their servants' return home, it is not easy to suggest a remedy. Some of them are married to English wives, and all or nearly all of them have deliberately rejected offers of help from the Strangers' Home. We can hardly deport them if they do not choose to go. The police and the magistrates may safely be left to deal with them according to English law. With regard to the actual victims of their masters' knavery or misfortune, we repeat that their number is very small. It would be well in their case to revive the dormant rule of a £50 deposit, in addition to any measures for the punishment of a breach of contract on either side; for masters may need protecting as well as servants. In the case of the Natbars mentioned above Sir S. Northcote followed up his act of timely charity by calling the attention of the Local Governments to the need of legislating against the recurrence of evils such as those endured by the victims of Messrs. Hanlon's failure to keep their word. For all such unfortunates however the shelter of the Home is meanwhile open. Its officers are always ready with advice or help for all who may need it, and no one really seeking for the latter has ever been turned away from their doors.

Correspondence.

DR. FITZ-EDWARD HALL.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In your last issue of the 17th March, Captain Robert Osborn has come forward as a champion of Dr. F. E. Hall, and has taken it upon himself to deny the truth of some of the evidence which, in regard to the recent conduct of the Librarian to the India Office, Dr. Hall, had been supplied to me by several well-known gentlemen, and which I had made public in the Athenæum of the 13th and 27th February last.

The denials of this defender of Dr. Hall are unfortunately so poor, both in quality and quantity, that, even if they had any value so far as they go, they would scarcely be of any use to his client. But as the long space of time which has elapsed since my communications to the Athenæum appeared in print, seems to have had the effect of weakening the memory of Captain Osborn in reference to the facts of the whole case, I request your permission to remind him briefly of these facts.

On the 21st November, 1868, there appeared in the Athenæum a letter signed "Master of Arts," which, after having referred to a passage in Mr. Hunter's "Annals of Rural Bengal," asked this question—"Is it possible that the MSS. [viz., the MSS. which Mr. Bryan H. Hodgson had presented to the India Office Library] have been given to him [viz., to Mr. Hunter] as worthless, or sold to him for a small sum [viz., by Dr. Hall]?" This was, as every one can see, by implication a most serious charge against the Librarian; and it was not surprising, therefore, that in the next number of the Athenæum, of the 28th November, Dr. Hall, after having dwelt on the services which he considered himself to have rendered to Mr. Hunter, with the consciousness of a deeply injured, but truly innocent man, endeavoured to refute the charge, and then indignantly exclaimed, "I have found myself inquired about publicly, and—provided the specious implications mooted against me had not turned out to be baseless—on grounds prejudicial to me both personally and officially."

As it had reached my ears that the "Master of Arts" letter, containing that serious charge against the Librarian had been imputed by him to me, and in terms reflecting on my character, I felt compelled to lay before the public the knowledge I had obtained regarding the authorship of this letter and its history. This I did first in a letter to the Athenæum of the 13th February, and afterwards in another letter, containing additional evidence published in the same journal of the 27th February last. The facts, then, resulting from the evidence adduced by me, are these:—

1. From a letter of Mr. F. J. Furnivall, of the 4th February, addressed to me, it became clear that the letter signed "Master of Arts," had been written by Mr. Furnivall, and that it had been written not only at the special request of Dr. Hall himself, but on the basis of a letter which this same Dr. Hall had composed and asked Mr. Furnivall to forward to the Athenæum. Hence it was in reality Dr. Hall himself who had made against himself the serious charge contained in the "M.A." letter; and he knew, therefore, that he was the intellectual author, and Mr. Furnivall the writer of this letter. Of this manoeuvre, which I need not qualify, Captain Osborn says—"It is true that Dr. Hall asked Mr. Furnivall to ask him certain questions in the Athenæum—a perfectly justifiable request" [the italics are mine]—"but," he adds, "it is not true that he was the intellectual author of the letter signed 'M.A.' The letter was widely different from what Dr. Hall either suggested or desired." In what this difference consisted Captain Osborn does not tell us, nor does he support the little he asserts by as much as a particle of proof; nor does he show that Dr. Hall up to this moment ever has disclaimed any participation in the charge brought against him in the "M.A." letter, and so triumphantly repelled by him in his letter of the 28th November. Captain Osborn fully admits, however, as we see, that Dr. Hall knew who was the writer and author, and also who was the instigator of the "M.A." letter.

2. In spite of this knowledge, admitted by Captain Osborn, we find that Dr. Hall, after having "shown up" (as he at least probably thinks) Mr. Hunter, wrote in the Athenæum of the 28th November, 1868—"If this letter is his [viz., Mr. Hunter's] Nemesis, it is not of my [viz., Dr. Hall's] evoking." Captain Osborn is completely silent on this interesting exclamation of his "intimate friend."

3. In spite of this knowledge, admitted by Captain Osborn, we further find that Dr. Hall distinctly denied to several persons having any knowledge as to who the writer or author of the "M.A." letter was. I named one of those persons on his written evidence, Mr. Beames, a distinguished member of the Civil Service of India; and, if necessary, I could have named another distinguished gentleman, formerly belonging to the same service, to whom, likewise, Dr. Hall made the same denial. On this interesting point, too, Captain Osborn maintains the most perfect silence.

4. But we find, besides, that, in a conversation with Mr. Trübner, Dr. Hall imputed the authorship of the "M.A." letter to me. In reference to this point we have Mr. Trübner writing, on the 8th February, as follows:—"I assured Dr. Hall that he and his friends" [who, as Dr. Hall asserted, surmised that I was the author of that letter] "were mistaken; but, so far as I can remember, I left him at the time with the impression that I had not succeeded in convincing him." Personally Mr. Trübner had told me, moreover, that Dr. Hall had even severely abused me for being the author of that letter; and Mr. Furnivall, in his printed letter of the 4th February, stated—"A friend of all three of us" [by these words Mr. Trübner is meant] "has told me that Hall abused you for it."

To all this evidence Captain Osborn remarks:—"When questioned on the subject by Mr. Trübner and Mr. Beames, he evaded giving any opinion of his own by mentioning instead a surmise that he had heard from third parties." This defence, even if it were based on truth, is of a character not to require any comment; but even its truth Captain Osborn has not proved by a particle of evidence. Nor does he tell us who those "third parties" are, and, if they are really in existence, whether they spontaneously made any such surmise; and, if so, whether, with the knowledge he possessed, Dr. Hall at once distinctly assured them that they were wrong, or whether he studiously contrived to leave them under their wrong impression. I have asked these very questions already in the Athenæum of the 13th February; but, instead of answering them—and this "intimate friend" of Dr. Hall seems to know so much of him—he merely tells us that Dr. Hall "evaded" the question by an equivocation. Perhaps he considers this, likewise, as "perfectly justifiable."

5. We further find that, in a letter which Dr. Hall in November, 1868, wrote to Mr. Bryan H. Hodgson, he distinctly imputed the authorship of the "M.A." letter to a "disappointed rival of his in the candidature for the Librarianship," thus implying that the writing of it was an act proceeding from the basest motives, though he perfectly well knew that Mr. Furnivall had never been a rival of his in that candidature. This letter had been seen, when it arrived, by an intimate friend of Mr. Hodgson; and this gentleman, known by Dr. Hall, stated what he saw to Dr. Rost, to myself, and to others, and he has since informed me that Mr. Hodgson affirms the accuracy of the impression which the perusal of the said letter left on his mind. Dr. Hall perfectly well knows to whom I allude; that this gentleman is a man of position and the very highest character, and that merely from self-imposed reticence I have hitherto refrained from mentioning his name in print. Also on this important point Captain Osborn maintains the completest silence.

6. To Mr. Furnivall, we further find, Dr. Hall, in a letter of his own of the 6th February, published by me in the Athenæum of the 13th February, denied ever having written that November letter to Mr. Hodgson in which this false charge occurred. Also on this point Captain Osborn is completely silent.

7. And lastly, we find, on the evidence of a letter of Mr. Beames to me of the 13th February, published in the Athenæum of the 27th February, that Dr. Hall first stated to this gentleman that "he did not know" who had written the "M.A." letter, and then "that he had become an object of dislike to certain persons on account of his having obtained the librarianship, and he supposed it was one of those persons who had written it." And Mr. Beames adds—"I was too new to English affairs to understand the allusion, but I now see that it was pointed against you." On this evidence, as well as on that of Mr. Trübner quoted before, Captain Osborn merely observes—"The statements of Mr. Trübner and Mr. Beames are 'glosses' [!], so to speak [!], exactly [!] of the kind which almost always [!] unconsciously creep into reports of conversation which were not actually written down from the lips of the speaker." [!]

And now I have first to ask Captain Osborn on what authority he has ventured to impeach, at least in some respect, the veracity of three honourable and independent witnesses, whose truthfulness has never been impeached before—of Mr. Furnivall, Mr. Trübner, and Mr. Beames? It is true that some of the evidence published by me—and that evidence of the most important kind, as we have seen—has not even been alluded to, much less contradicted, by him, and that this part of my evidence alone would amply suffice to enlighten the public on the conduct of Dr. Hall. But, nevertheless, I must repeat my question: On what authority does Captain Osborn gainsay evidence of which he has no personal knowledge whatsoever, and of which he can have none, since he was not present at any of the interviews, in this affair, between Dr. Hall and any of the three gentlemen named? Are we, then, to understand that he has come forward spontaneously, and that he speaks on his own authority alone? In this case I should have merely to observe that his testimony is worthless. Or, are we to infer that he has been instigated by Dr. Hall to state that of which he has, and can have, no personal knowledge? Then I have simply to ask—Why does Dr. Hall not come forward himself to justify his conduct, and of course with something more valuable than bare denials without proof? He who on the 28th November, 1868, so readily answered the fictional charge made in the "M.A." letter of the 21st November; he who then so indignantly exclaimed:—"Such things do not refute themselves; and silence on my part would have been interpreted to my disadvantage," strangely enough, this same Dr. Hall has not only hitherto left "such things" as I have been compelled to make public, unrefuted; but from the 13th February up to this day he has not even uttered a sound to show that there is somewhere a mistake, or a circumstance which might militate in his favour. But I have another question to address to Captain Osborn. In his letter to you, of the 9th March, he writes:—"This [viz., the statements made by him, and quoted by me before] Dr. Hall shows, on indisputable evidence, in a reply which he has prepared." Where is this reply? Where was it on the 9th of March? It is not in any number of the Athenæum up to its last issue; it has not reached me, nor any one else I know of; nor have I been able to discover its existence anywhere, though I took pains to that effect. Yet I consider it impossible that Captain Osborn should publicly impeach the truthfulness of three honourable gentlemen, and publicly make statements claiming belief—however little their value be as a defence of Dr. Hall—unless the "reply" of Dr. Hall, which he alleges as the voucher of his good faith, was likewise public already on the 9th March, and that already then it admitted of public scrutiny. I trust that Captain Osborn will give a satisfactory answer to this question.

One word more, and I take leave of him. He calls my "personal explanation" in the Athenæum "accusations" brought by me against Dr. Hall, without, in the slightest manner, qualifying this expression of his. This representation of my "explanation," to say the least of it, is certainly very unfair on the part of a gentleman who must have known that what he calls "accusations" was nothing but a self-defence, forced on me, against a serious charge made against me, according to the evidence produced by me, by Dr. Hall, directly and indirectly. Captain Osborn must therefore have also known that, if in consequence of this self-defence, I had to bring matters to light which are not to the liking of Dr. Hall, the latter alone has to thank himself for it. But when Captain Osborn, besides, expresses the belief that "such a proceeding, [viz., as that of Dr. Hall exposed in the columns of the Athenæum] when thus nakedly stated, is so absurd and irrational as to refute itself;" I can assure him that there are many persons who, not looking upon such a proceeding as merely absurd or irrational, think quite otherwise.—I am, Sir, &c., TH. GOLDSTÜCKER.

Notices of Books.

English Homes in India. Part 1—The Three Loves. Part 2—The Wrong Turning. 2 Vols. London: W. H. Allen and Co. 1869.

Two readable, nicely written stories, illustrating various phases of Anglo-Indian life, by a lady who has evidently seen or experienced much of what she describes. Her name is not on the title page, but we can make a shrewd guess at it, as a name not unfamiliar to Anglo-Indian ears. The two volumes before us may be characterised as thoughtful studies of life and character, presented in the shape of stories, with India for their common background. Their main object is to give a truthful picture of English Homes in India, as seen "in different parts of the country, under various social and professional aspects." And from this point of view we think that the writer has been fairly successful. Without dealing in the Hindustani lingo dear to some writers of similar books, she enables us to look closely at Anglo-Indian scenes in the days before the Mutiny through the medium of a clear, easy, ladylike English style. Her romance is reserved for the incidents of the story; in respect of local colouring she keeps sternly true to facts, as she and most of her fellow-exiles read them. Her descriptions take nearly all the gilt off the gingerbread. One leading moral of the book is that life in India shows a great deal more of its seamy side to those who try it than their countrymen at home can readily understand. The luxury is all at best a savage luxury, necessitated by the horrible climate and other circumstances, and counting for nothing beside the comforts of an ordinary English home. Twenty native servants do the work of two English here at greater cost. House-rent is comparatively dear, and such houses! Food and other necessities of native origin are, or rather were before the Mutiny, cheap enough; but everything English—and how many things English are downright necessities!—costs double and treble what it would at home. The first thing you do in India, unless you are very rich, is to fall into debt as it were perforce. Cheating servants and smooth-tongued shopkeepers combine to hang about your neck a load of which it may take years to rid you. Each servant will only do his own work, and as little of that as he can help, and your ayah treats you as her slave. These and similar touches, which come out incidentally here and there, serve at any rate to show how far the iron of exile has entered into the writer's soul. One great curse of life in India she has somehow overlooked; we mean that early separation of parents from children, which almost necessarily leads to a transfer of the children's best affections from the far-off parent to the guardian acting in her place.

In her sketches of English character, on the other hand, the author deals more kindly with her fellow-exiles than some writers have done. Her sympathies are evidently on their side, even when she has to hint a fault or expose an injustice. The struggle between her head and her heart, or, if you like, between Anglo-Indian ethics and home propinities, shows itself in the excess of horror which John O'Connor's pardonable assault upon a native inspires in Mary's breast. In her desire to vindicate a good general principle, the duty of keeping one's hands off all men alike, the writer is a little unjust to the noble-hearted Irishman, and makes Mary unjust also to a man who had saved her from gross insult, and proved himself to her knowledge the kindest and most forbearing of masters. With this exception however, O'Connor is drawn in the most taking colours. His early death, for which we can hardly forgive his literary parent, serves to illustrate the quick work of an Indian fever, and to bring another type of Anglo-Indian on the stage, Sir Ralph Everard, a high official of unblemished character and wide renown. The Indian ladies in both stories have little in common with those that figure in the stereotyped satires of Anglo-Indian morals. They are hardly distinguishable from the better-behaved samples of feminine life at home. Next to the native villain of the story, the author's aversion is reserved for Mr. Le Normand, the philanthropist who has nothing good to say of his own countrymen, who paints all natives with the same bright brush, and proves an arrant coward in time of danger. That last touch is surely a feminine revenge for a disagreeable difference of opinion.

Of the two stories in the book the first has perhaps more character, and the second the better-conceived plot. Mary is interesting for her heroic patience and self-denial. John O'Connor deserved not to die so soon. Sir Ralph is rather dim to our eyes, and Harry, if more lifelike, is too weak to interest us long. Lotty is quite a lay figure. In the second story Mrs. Breadalbane is the only personage one cares to remember. Both plots are rather melodramatic. But it is evident that these tales must be read by the light of their author's main purpose. To that end incidents and characters are useful mainly as vehicles for the description of local scenes and manners. From this point of view we may commend these volumes as a pleasing and pretty truthful picture of the life they set before us. Only in pleading for her own countrymen, the author might have done more justice to the natives themselves.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES COMMITTEE.

The Indian Daily News remarks that the most important points in the Committee's conclusions are its rejection of the supposition that the French system will eventually supersede the long-established English proportions, and its preference for binary subdivisions. We do not observe it to have been advanced, but we believe that the rapid system of mental arithmetic in which many natives excel is binary and not decimal; and as a question of natural instinct, we possess the opinion of the Astronomer Royal, Sir George Airy, quoted in the report, who says that if he had a new nation to create with a new system of weights and measures, he would give them the binary scale throughout as the nearest to perfection—no power on earth, for instance, could make a rustic demand three-tenths of a quart of beer, although he might readily ask for half or a quarter of that measure. But apart from scientific opinion, it does not appear to the Committee that the metric will ever supersede the English system, and it is estimated more desirable to adopt the standards of our own than a foreign land. It has accordingly recommended the yard, the acre, the seer, and the quart; the first already familiar throughout the country, the second for all Government transactions, and the seer at two pounds with decimal multiples up to a ton of 1,000 seers. Two of the members, Messrs. Apar and Graham, have also suggested a representation to the Secretary of State as to altering the present English cwt. and ton to a 100 and to 2,000 lbs. Mr. Shaw Stewart has partly dissented, inasmuch as he disapproves of a seer of two pounds as a unit, and differs from the committee's views regarding the gradual introduction of the reform. Colonel Strachey, with whom Mr. E. F. Harrison and Colonel Hyde concur, has adhered to the metric system, and Mr. Strachey in Council and Mr. Maine have advocated the same, the Commander-in-Chief, Mr. Noble Taylor, and Sir Richard Temple favouring it with regard to weights only, and the latter with respect to measures of solidity and capacity also. These members of Government appear to think that weights only might be dealt with for the present.

APATHY OF NATIVE RULERS.

The Times of India observes that scarcely one of the native chiefs has during the present distress bestirred himself in works of amelioration. In deference to the desire of Government, as conveyed by the various political officers, most of the independent Sovereigns have certainly agreed to forego grain duties. This however appears to be almost the "head and front" of their action. They have been content to see the people depart from the country, carrying off as much of both live and other property as possible. They have been content to see the residue suffer, or even die. But, with one or two honourable exceptions, they have "made no sign." In every case in the native States, where anything in the way of relief has been attempted, we think we are correct in stating that its origination has been due to British officers. Nothing indeed could more distinctly display the difference between British and native rule than the energy of action for the relief of the poor under the former compared with the perfect apathy characteristic of the majority of the latter. In British Mhairwarra, for instance, the public money is being almost lavishly expended. Thanks to the promptitude of Colonel Keatinge, the first week of certainty of famine was marked by the opening of works in the Burr Pass, on which several thousands have since found daily sustenance, while contributing to the formation of a road, the absence of which has long been severely felt. The extension of the Neemuch and Nusseerabad road, the Ajmere and Jeypoor road, the Pokur Pass, and the supply of water for the Nusseerabad cantonment, have all afforded employment for the famine-stricken of the surrounding country. But if we turn to neighbouring native States, to Marwar, to Sirohi, to Meywar, in many parts of which assistance was as urgently required as in Mhairwarra and ask what has been initiated in the way of famine works, the answer is—nothing! The native chiefs, have, as a rule, ignored their liabilities up to the present time. We have now, however, pointed out a method by which they may avert much and continued distress. It remains for the only Power capable of ordering results to exert its prerogative.

THE SINDE AND PUNJAB RAILWAY SYSTEM.

The Sindian declares that the plans proposed by Mr. Anjrew are gradually being carried out in their entirety, and their completion will, we feel confident, realise the most sanguine hopes entertained by the most enthusiastic of their promoters. The present "hiatus" must not be allowed to check enterprise in this direction; for, writing on the spot, and cognisant of all the facts, we are bound to say that there is evidently a bright future in store yet for all concerned in the prosperity of this line. Our readers need scarcely be told what is the object of these combined undertakings. It is, generally, the establishment and maintenance of speedy and efficient means of communication between the port of Kurrachee and the Punjab, and the connection of Lahore and the north-west frontier with Calcutta on the one side, and the western coast on the other. Great as are the public works executed in India by British enterprise, there are none greater than this; for, while opening a great part of the interior of the country to the beneficial influences of rapid and economical intercommunication, it constitutes one of the strongest securities for the permanence of British dominion in India. Kurrachee, on the western coast, is the nearest port to England; and its natural and improved capabilities place all the military resources of England within easy reach in case of aggression from the North-West; while these lines more than any other combine the interests of the great cities of India. It was only a perfect knowledge of the wants and the claims of India that could have devised such a system, and it was only the most indomitable perseverance and energy that could have carried it into successful execution. These combined undertakings are four in number—namely, the Scinde Railway, the Punjab Railway, the Delhi Railway, and the Indus Steam Flotilla. Though under one direction these undertakings are separate and distinct. They have different capitals, and each has an independent guarantee from the Indian Government. Having a common object such as we have endeavoured to describe, and the same supreme management, nothing can be more certain than that some time or other it will be for the public advantage, as well as for the advantage of the shareholders, that they should be really amalgamated. The time, indeed, has now almost arrived for this transaction, seeing that the purposes which, in the first instance, rendered a division unavoidable, have been all but accomplished. British railway proprietors need not be told how combination promotes economy and efficiency where the nature of the undertaking suggests it, and what is true in England in these respects is true in India.

DEPOT BATTALIONS.

The Bombay Gazette would say a few words on the subject of depots. It is reported that the depot battalions are about to be abolished, and we hail the rumour with delight. Depot battalions are not only very costly institutions, but work positive harm. How many privates and non-commissioned officers, who have conducted themselves invariably well when with their regiments, get into trouble as soon as they join a depot battalion! Again, the colonel, major, adjutant, musketry instructor, and sergeant-major are all strangers, and consequently carry out their duties at a disadvantage. There is no kindly feeling, no bond of union, no esprit de corps at a depot battalion, consequently everything is effected by the iron hand of discipline alone—moral influences being dormant for the time. The same may be said of the young officers. They belong to no one, no one feels himself responsible for or interested in their conduct away from the parade ground and the mess table, and the wholesome influence of a score of young men not very much older than themselves which in a regiment does so much is at a depot battalion wanting. The only people at all inclined to interest themselves in a youngster's conduct and able to influence him are the two captains and perhaps one subaltern; the others are all youngsters like himself. The captains and subalterns of the other regiments of the depot do not trouble themselves about him. Now of the two captains and one subaltern of his own regiment—one, perhaps two are married, and the other is a part of the time on leave. It is evident, therefore, that so long as a youngster does not violate some express regulation he may do pretty much as he likes. It would be much better were all officers—except during a campaign—to join the head-quarters of their regiments at once; while as for the rank and file, whenever the regiment is at home, it would be far better to leave to the regimental authorities both the obtaining and the instruction of their recruits. Greater trouble would be taken in getting a good class of men, the recruits would be trained from the first as they are intended to go on, and they would further reap all the advantages of the example of the best of the old soldiers, and the kindly supervision of the captain, who would take an interest in the men because he would know that there was no chance of sending them off in a draft—as in a depot battalion—and never seeing them again under his command. For emergencies as well as for regiments abroad it would of course be necessary to have general depots as well as general recruiting establishments. The combination of regimental and general recruiting and training would be very effective, far pleasanter to the men than the depot battalion system; and, finally, it would result in an enormous saving to the country.

TROOPS IN THE HILLS.—The following return shows the probable numbers of British troops of all arms in the Bengal Presidency to be stationed in the Hills, either in cantonments, at depots, or on working parties, during the hot season of 1869. Cantonments.—Darjeeling—1st battery 25th brigade Royal Artillery, 3 officers, 97 men. Dugshai—1st battalion 3rd Foot, 35 officers, 892 men. Subathoo—41st Foot, 29 officers, 895 men. Jutogh—A battery 22nd brigade Royal Artillery, 4 officers, 75 men. Kangra—detachment 1st battalion 5th Foot, 4 officers, 73 men. Abbottabad (temporarily in huts on Murr-road)—5th battery 25th brigade Royal Artillery, 5 officers, 87 men. Total, 80 officers, 2,101 men. Sanitaria.—Darjeeling—Selected details, 7 officers, 120 single men, 14 married. Nynce Tal—Selected details, 14 officers, 328 single men, 28 married. Landour—Selected details, 9 officers, 187 single men, 23 married. Kussowlie—Selected details, 6 officers, 370 single men, 26 married. Bhugsoo—Selected details, 6 officers, 110 single men. Murree—Selected details, 17 officers, 250 single men, 120 married. Total, 69 officers, 1,365 single men, 311 married. Single and married total, 1,676. Working Parties.—Raneekhet—2nd battalion 25th Foot, 7 officers, 200 men. Chukrata—55th Foot, 32 officers, 172 men. Chumba Hill-roads—38th Foot, 7 officers, 175 men; 85th Foot, 7 officers, 150 men; 92nd Foot, 7 officers, 170 men. Murree and Abbottabad-road—1st battalion 6th Regt., 10 officers, 225 men; 1st battalion 19th Regt., 10 officers, 225 men; 88th Regt., 4 officers, 100 men. Total, 84 officers, 2,120 men. Grand total, 233 officers, 5,897 men. Including officers, the number will be somewhat over 6,000. Here are the figures:—

	Officers.	Men.
Cantonments ...	80	2,101
Sanitaria ...	69	1,676
Working Parties ...	84	2,120
Total ...	233	5,897

Bengal.

COLONEL KEYES.—The Pioneer believes that Colonel Keyes, C.B., will obtain the command of the Guides.

COLONEL BROWNE.—It is said that Colonel S. Browne, C.B., V.C., has been appointed Commandant of the Central India Horse.

CLAY FOR PORCELAIN.—A bed of peculiar clay, said to be valuable for pottery and porcelain, has been discovered in the Delhi district.

INDIAN FREEMASONS.—We learn from the Indian Daily News that Lord Mayo has consented to be the Patron of the Order of Freemasonry in India.

SIR G. COUPER.—The Pioneer confirms the report that there is a likelihood of Sir George Couper returning to the province where he has already done so much good service.

AMATEUR EXPLORERS.—Colonel Longden, Adjutant-General of the Army, and Colonel Dickens, Secretary to the Government of India in the D.P.W., were to leave India in company in March, and make for England via China, Japan, and North America.

NEWS OF MR. COOPER.—Mr. Cooper, the China overland traveller, is in Calcutta at present, and proposes endeavouring to make Western China from India, via the route through the Abor country adjacent to the north-eastern extremity of Upper Assam.

MEDICAL SERVICE UNIFORM.—It is stated that the "black strap" worn to distinguish medical from combatant officers of the army is to be rendered of a more ornamental character by the addition of a border of gold lace on the pouch and sword belt.—Delhi Gazette.

PRINCE FREDERIC OF SCHLESWIG-HOLSTEIN.—It appears from a paragraph in the Moffusilite that his Serene Highness Prince Frederic of Schleswig-Holstein is to proceed to Europe via Calcutta and Madras, and not by Bombay, as was stated by the Lahore paper.

SIMLAH.—We hear from Simlah that there has been a very plentiful fall of snow, which lasted from the 6th to the 8th February, followed by abundant rain on the 10th. Arrangements are being made to render Peterhoff fit for the reception of Earl Mayo during the hot season.

ILLNESS OF CAPTAIN SLADEN.—Captain Sladen, we are sorry to hear, has been prevented by illness from laying before the Government of India the report of his journey to the Panthay country. The Friend of India says that if Captain Sladen is forced to take leave, Captain Strover is likely to succeed him as political agent at Mandalay.

SIR DINKUR RAO.—According to the Friend of India there is no truth in the accusations, born of intrigue, which have recently been made against Rajah Sir Dinkur Rao. The worst charge against him is that his purity is a pride which prevents him from working with filthy tools. But even this is wrong. He is a Brahmin and a Maharratta, and therefore knows the native world.

CHOLERA IN ASSAM.—We learn that cholera has broken out in the neighbourhood of Gowalparah, in Assam, and there has already been considerable mortality among the lower classes of the population, to whom, however, the mortality is said to be entirely confined. The Civil Surgeon of Gowalparah has despatched native surgeons to the localities where the disease is most severe.—Englishman, Feb. 20.

UNCOVENANTED SERVICE PENSION RULES.—It is asserted that the committee to whom the Uncovenanted Service Pension Rules, as returned by the Secretary of State, have been referred, do not see their way to the alterations in them the Home Government desire. The committee's report will probably be explicative of the ground on which the rules were framed. These grounds are held to be good and strong; but if the Secretary of State cannot be made to see this, they will have to be altered.

RELIEF WORKS IN THE PUNJAB.—The sums already sanctioned for the employment of the poor on relief works in the Punjab amount to Rs. 1,90,000, divided amongst the following works:—Repairs to the Grand Trunk Road between Delhi and Umballa, Rs. 52,000; repairs to the Lahore and Peshawar Road, Rs. 40,000; construction of the Delhi and Muttra Road, Rs. 20,000; and improvement of the Delhi and Goorgaon Road, Rs. 40,000; together with Rs. 30,000 sanctioned in the annual budget.

NEW POLICE POST IN BRITISH BURMAH.—The Chief Commissioner of British Burmah has asked the Government to sanction the establishment, from January to June, of a new police post of fifty-two men on the north-east frontier of Tenasserim. This will involve an expense of 776 rupees per mensem. It appears that the working of the forests on the east bank of the Salween, beyond British territory, has been interrupted by a quarrel which has broken out between the Chiefs of Zimmay and Eastern Karennee, as to the ownership of the forests. The camps of the Foresters are of course on the British side of the stream, but in order to deter them from prosecuting their working, bands of dacoits have, in no less than seven or eight cases, crossed the river and threatened the camps. The country on this frontier is not only wild but most sparsely peopled, and the police posts appear to be about four days' march from each other. Hence the disturbance is beyond the reach of timely reinforcement, and hence arises the necessity for the additional post.—Englishman.

CHURCH OF SCOTLAND MISSION.—The Rev. C. M. Grant, B.D., has lately arrived in Calcutta in connection with the mission of the Church of Scotland, and is to give his attention to a sphere of labour which attracted the special notice of Dr. Norman McLeod during his late visit, viz., work among that large class of natives who already know something about the facts of Christianity, and may not be averse to know something about it as a power. Mr. Grant will lecture every Sunday evening at seven o'clock, in the General Assembly's Institution.

THE BERARS.—The Hyderabad correspondent of the Englishman writes that Mr. Saunders has promulgated a most important rule. Land in the Berars is to be subject to sale by decrees of Civil Courts, with the exemption of ancestral land or property. A question has been raised whether this rule is legal, considering that the Berars belong to the Nizam, and are only administered by the British. Another order directs that assistant-superintendents of police must pass a prescribed examination before they can be regarded as fit for promotion.

WAHABEES AT DINAPORE.—The following is from Dinapore:—"There is a great talk going on in the Bazaar; every shop is full of it, and customers delay to depart when they have bought what they want. The house of an old Wahabee, the late Cheda Khan, has been searched, and his books and papers taken to the Commissioner. No one knows what has been discovered, but there is a general suspicion that it is an important case. The durzees, and beesties, and butchers are very much excited, and the suspicion that they are interested parties is not unnatural."

ACCIDENT TO MR. REILY.—Mr. J. H. Reily, Deputy Inspector-General of Police, Calcutta, who is just now on deputation duty at Delhi, connected with the Wahabee conspiracy, has met with an accident through the discharge of his revolving pistol. Mr. Reily's bearer carelessly allowed the weapon to fall, and one of the chambers exploding struck the floor and thus impeded the force of the bullet, which just cut the nerve of Mr. Reily's foot and fortunately only slightly injured him. Had the barrel instead of the chamber but exploded, or had the muzzle been directed upwards instead of down, the consequences would probably have been attended with more serious results.—Moffusilite.

LORD MAYO ON DUTY.—On the 18th Feb. Lord Mayo and a party of gentlemen went up to Kooshtea, and from thence by steamboat to the bridge building over the Gorai on the line of rail to Dacca. The cylinders for this bridge are nearly all placed in situ, by Mr. Leslie, the engineer, on a new principle, which promises to be very successful. Lord Mayo was, the Englishman states, much pleased with all he saw, and expressed himself gratified with the result of Mr. Leslie's ingenuity. The party enjoyed themselves much, "the day was cool, the sail on the river pleasant, and the luncheon on the most magnificent scale. The return was enlivened by the abundance of the champagne accompanied by sodas and ice."

EFFECTS OF THE EARTHQUAKE AT SILCHAR.—The gaol at Silchar seems to have suffered in a special manner from the earthquake of the 18th January. The brick-wall enclosing the prison was levelled with the ground, and all the wards rendered uninhabitable but one. The floor of the hospital was cracked, water oozing through the cracks. The gaol yard is described as having been torn up; large quantities of water and blue sand have been ejected from the fissures, completely flooding the yard. The prisoners were so paralysed with terror that only two attempted to escape. These, after a week's absence, returned to the gaol of their own accord. The prisoners have been accommodated for the present in a neighbouring tea garden, and the Inspector-General of Gaols has been asked to report on the whole subject of a new jail for Cachar.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY received his Highness the Nawab Nazim of Bengal, on the 15th inst., at Government-house. His Highness was accompanied by four of his sons and Colonel Layard. The Nawab will embark this morning for England, his eldest son and one of his younger sons, with his secretary, Mr. Fox, accompanying him. The Government have placed the services of Colonel F. P. Layard at his Highness's disposal. The Government have most liberally placed the sum of Rs. 400,000 to his credit for the journey. Rs. 100,000 have been paid in India to enable him to secure passages and to make needful preparations; the remaining Rs. 300,000 will be paid his Highness through the office of the Secretary of State for India. The passage money via Marseilles is said to have amounted, for the Nawab and his suite, to Rs. 30,000.—Englishman, Feb. 16.

OFFICIAL.—The following changes, we understand, will immediately take place:—Mr. Melvill, Commissioner of Rawul Pindee, will act as Financial Commissioner for Mr. R. Egerton. Major Cracroft goes to Rawul Pindee, vice Mr. Melvill, and Colonel Cox, Commissioner of Lahore, takes Major Cracroft's place as Additional Commissioner of Peshawar. Colonel Farrington will succeed Colonel Cox in the Commissionership of Lahore. Lahore society is probably as sorry to lose so amiable and hospitable a member as Colonel Cox as it is glad to acquire one of the social qualifications of Colonel Farrington. We hope that all this indicates the absence of any intention on the part of Government to bring Mr. Cooper back to Lahore. That officer, we understand, will succeed Mr. Naesmyth, who goes home in April next, in the Commissionership of Hissar.—Indian Public Opinion.

BRITISH BURMAH.—We learn from the Rangoon papers that a force of about three hundred Shans, supposed to be Dacoits, had threatened to attack the village of Pahpoo, on the Yoonzal-en. The Assistant Commissioner had applied for one hundred epoys and 150 police to protect the village, and some of the latter had already been despatched, whilst more were to follow. A report has reached Rangoon that Moung Bah, one of the pupils of the Rev. Mr. Mark's school at Mandalay, had been beheaded by the King's order for going into one of the monasteries with his shoes on. A shock of earthquake was felt at Prome on the 1st inst.—Englishman, Feb. 16.

MEMORIAL CHANCEL.—At a committee meeting held in the vestry of St. John's Church, Peshawur, on Saturday, Nov. 28, it was unanimously resolved to apply a fund of upwards of Rs. 1,000 derived from the sale of some of the materials of the late Christ Church, Peshawur, to the erection of a chancel in St. John's Church, in memory of the many gallant and worthy officers, civil and military, who have fallen in the valley by sword or pestilence. The committee feel that the present opportunity calls for the united and generous assistance of all those who have marked with interest and sympathy the progress of events in the valley.

OUTLAW CAPTURED.—The capture of another outlaw, a member of Rughoonath Sing's gang in Central India, has been reported; he was one of the most daring, and was arrested by Mr. W. Clifford, Assistant District Superintendent of Police, near a Jeitpore village, called Passanabad. The outlaws saw the police approach and fled, when Mr. Clifford gave chase, and himself seized Mudree. Two others escaped in the darkness. Mr. Clifford has been highly commended by Government for his energy and dexterity. The stringent measures adopted by the Government of the North-Western Provinces and the adjoining Native States, will soon rid the country of these outlaws.

THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.—Two reports of Select Committees were presented to the Legislative Council at its weekly meeting yesterday—the final report of the Select Committee on the Articles of War Bill by the Commander-in-Chief, and that on the Emigration of Coolies Bill by Mr. Gordon Forbes. Sir George Couper moved that the Select Committee's Report on the Village Police Bill, N.W. Provinces, be taken into consideration. The objects of the measure have been expounded in its earlier stages, and the emendations proposed in Committee were not significant. Sir Richard Temple moved for leave to introduce a Police Superannuation Funds Bill. He said that the various police forces in India had certain deductions made from the pay of the men, who became thereby entitled to a certain scale of pensions. This arrangement had been found, however, to give an immense deal of trouble in the framing of the accounts of every man, and was otherwise inconvenient. It was now proposed to abolish these funds, and to guarantee on behalf of the Government the pensions which the men would otherwise have received; they would obtain greater security for their pensions, and would regard the measure as quite satisfactory; and, on the other hand, the financial convenience of the Police Department would be consulted. The pay of the men would have to be revised, so as to bring out approximately an amount equal to the net sum which they now receive after the present deductions. He had, therefore, with the full concurrence of his colleague in charge of the Home Department, Mr. Strachey, brought in this Bill. This was the only new measure introduced, and the Council adjourned to Friday next.—Indian Daily News, Feb. 23.

MILITARY ITEMS.—It is supposed that the command of the Governor-General's body-guard is being kept vacant for Col. D. M. Probyn, C.B., V.C., whose furlough expires on the 12th March. We learn from Indore that Colonel S. Browne, C.B., V.C., Commandant Guide Corps, succeeds to the command of the Central India Horse and Western Malwa Agency, in succession to Colonel Hughes, who has left for the Punjab to command the Frontier force. We hear from Lucknow that the 55th Regiment were to leave that station for Cawnpore on the 1st March, en route to Chukrata. The regiment would march as far as Cawnpore, and proceed thence by rail to Meerut or Moznuffernuggur, resuming its march via Roorkee and Dehra. Sir William Manfield was to leave Calcutta about the 15th March, on a tour of military inspection, visiting Lucknow, Seetapore, Shahjehanpore, Bareilly, Rancekhet (the proposed new sanitarium near Nynce Tal), Moradabad, Chukrata (the proposed new sanitarium near Mussoorie), and from Chukrata he would proceed straight to Simla. We learn from Jacobabad that Major-General Sir George Malcolm, K.C.B., has concluded his inspection of the Frontier Field Force, which is in a highly satisfactory state of discipline and efficiency, a fact most creditable to Colonel Phayre and the officers under his command. We learn that Lieutenant-Colonel H. W. H. Cox has been appointed Commandant of the 1st Punjab Rifle Corps and Punjab Light Horse (Volunteers), in succession to the late Mr. A. A. Roberts, C.B., C.S.I. The first detachment of her Majesty's 62nd Regiment, en route from England to Lucknow, arrived at Jubbulpore at 4 A.M. on Monday, the 15th Feb. The Jubbulpore Chronicle says that the officers and men were thoroughly disgusted with their trip in the military bullock train from Nagpore to Jubbulpore. It is said that owing to the breaking down of carts, and the absence of a proper number of bullocks at some of the chowkees, the number of men stowed in the carts was about double what it should have been. Who's to blame? asks our contemporary.

THE RAID OF THE BEZOOTES.—In our issue of Monday last we published a Lahore telegram announcing that the Bezootes had again been disturbing the peace of the border. Whilst not questioning the fact that one policeman had got knocked on the head and one or two others carried off, we then expressed our conviction that the foray did not portend anything like what might be called frontier disturbances. Fuller intelligence confirms us in that opinion. The Indian Public Opinion says that about two o'clock on the morning of the 13th inst. "a party of twelve or thirteen Ootmaukeyl Dowlutzaies (Orukzais) surprised the guard in the tower at the foot of the Kohat Kothul. The guard were asleep; the night was dark and rainy; and the marauders contrived to make a ladder and ascend the tower unobserved, and without disturbing the sleeping inmates. The surprise was complete; the policeman who resisted was killed, and the rest were carried off to the hills. Subsequently one policeman managed to effect his escape. How far this will involve us in hostilities with the Orukzais remains to be seen; but it may be assumed that this unprovoked attack on our guard cannot be permitted to remain unnoticed." A correspondent of the same paper, writing from Kohat on the 15th instant, gives the following:—"For months past the Jirgahs of the Bezootes have been inunulating the station, nominally waiting on the Deputy-Commissioner to know the terms of the British Government for their scandalous behaviour last year, but actually to fritter away time and avert the sword of Damocles hanging over their heads for last March's affair. The heads of the Jirgahs, as I have above stated, are in here. About a week ago, during the absence of the Deputy-Commissioner on affairs 'Pollockal' the tribe came down and fired on a tower held by militia, and no notice was taken thereof. Three nights ago a party of the same tribe came down on the same tower, attacked and took it; one militiaman was killed and two carried away into captivity. Last night again (no notice of the last indignity having been taken), having become bolder, a party came and attacked one of the out-works of the station, firing several shots at a tower about 150 yards in advance of the lines of the 4th Punjab Cavalry. In a night or two we may fairly expect an attack on one or more of the bungalows of the residents."—Times of India, Feb. 26.

Madras.

NORTON'S TUBE WELLS.—We observe that the Madras Government have directed the Board of Revenue to forward, for transmission to the Secretary of State for India, a full report on the results of working Norton's tube wells at the several places to which they were sent, including the results of the trials at the model farm at Sydapet.

AMMUNITION FOR SNIDER RIFLES.—The Derwentwater has landed at Madras a portion of the machinery for making Boxer ammunition for Snider cartridges; the remaining portion is shortly expected. The building to contain the machinery has not yet begun, but the Mount has been approved of as the best locality for the cartridge and bullet factories.

BANK OF MADRAS.—A branch of the Bank of Madras is about to be opened at Gunttoor, a large cotton mart in the Kistna district. This makes the fiftieth branch, and another is already in contemplation for Mangalore. The present branches are at Alleppy, Bangalore, Bellary, Berhampore, Bimlipatam, Calicut, Coconada, Cochin, Colombo, Kandy, Negapatam, Ootacamund, Trichinopoly, and Tuticorin.

MR. McDONELL'S MONUMENT.—The monument which is being erected in memory of the late Mr. McDonell, at Trichinopoly, has almost attained completion. This monument, says a local paper, is tastefully built of polished granite, and occupies a very prominent site. It was planned by Colonel Greenaway while he was executive engineer, and has been in course of erection during the last six months or more. It is intended to enclose the monument with iron railings which is all that is now necessary to complete the work. The following is the inscription which the monument bears, being engraved both in English and Tamil:—To the Memory of Aeneas Ranald McDonell, Esq., for many years Collector and finally Judge of Trichinopoly. This monument is erected by the Native community of the district in grateful remembrance of his kindness, generosity, and earnest desire, for their welfare. Born 19th October, 1824. Died 2nd February, 1867.

GOSSIP.—A Madras paper says that a dashing Cavalry captain, well-known on the Indian Turf, is about to retire from the service by the sale of his commission, preparatory to entering the Church and occupying a living in the gift of his family.

MR. T. JONES.—The Pioneer hears that Mr. Thomas Jones, Assistant Secretary to the Bengal Government, having completed the purpose of his mission to Madras with success, is about to proceed to Europe on furlough.

DEPARTURE OF THE "GOSFORTH."—The Gosforth left Madras for England on Monday evening, February 15, taking with her the following passengers:—Mrs. Colonel Young, 3 Misses Young, and 3 boys, Mr. and Mrs. Carnient and 4 children, Mr. and Mrs. B. Cardozo, and 1 child, A. R. Hutchins, Esq., M.C.S., Dr. Wilson and 2 children, Captain and Mrs. O'Rielly, 2 children and 1 servant, Mr. Cruickshank, Mr. Rostron, and Master Dickie Bradshaw and servant.

BULLOCKS FOR CEYLON.—The Ceylon Government, being desirous of improving the breed of stock in that colony, has, the Madras Mail states, commissioned Dr. Hunter, the Superintendent of the Madras School of Arts, to purchase some of the best specimens of draft bullocks in the Presidency for shipment to Ceylon. Dr. Hunter will make arrangements for procuring some of the prize cattle at the Nellore show, as also some good specimens from Mysore. The experiments that have been made in crossing the Nellore and Mysore breeds have proved very successful.

RETURN OF GENERAL WILDE.—General J. Wilde, lately in command of the frontier force, left Lahore on the 9th of February, en route to Madras, to take up his appointment of Military Secretary to the Madras Government. The General would shortly on promotion have been compelled to give up the force, and is to be congratulated on having obtained so pleasant an appointment elsewhere; yet, says Indian Public Opinion, we cannot but consider his departure a loss to the Punjab. His services have been many and distinguished, and the present fine condition of the frontier force and his great personal popularity prove how well he was fitted for its command.

SOLDIERS' INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION.—It is under consideration, we learn from the Madras Mail, to establish in the Madras Presidency a Soldiers' Industrial Exhibition. This proposal will be carried out during the early part of next year. The measure would have taken effect earlier, but that the authorities wish ample time to be given to those who are desirous of being contributors. We also learn that an application is to be made to the railway and steam-boat companies to allow a free passage for three men from each corps to the Presidency and back, and to charge these men half price for the articles brought by them to the Exhibition. In this Presidency similar indulgences were allowed as regards the passage, &c., on the occasion of the Exhibition held at Poona in 1867. An Exhibition like this will be the first of its kind organised in Madras, and his Excellency Lieutenant-general McCleverty, who we hear is the prime mover in this undertaking, will no doubt see it carried out with true military regularity.

HOMEWARD BOUND.—The Renown left Madras for London on Saturday, February 20, with passengers and a large and valuable cargo of produce. The following is a list of the passengers:—Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. Foulis, Mrs. Harris, 10 children, and 2 European servants, Mrs. Surplice, and 2 children, Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Davidson, and 3 children, Mr. H. Beddek, 3 children, and native servant, Mrs. C. Douglas, and 4 children, Mrs. E. Bowden, Mrs. Symons, Mrs. Dibb, and 4 children, Miss Clarke, and European servant, Misses Cherry (3), Misses Vansomeran (3), Misses O'Connell (3), and native servant, Mrs. Chambers. Major A. J. D. H. Harris, Captain H. R. W. Smith, Captain A. A. Davidson, Rev. S. E. Symons, Rev. A. Dibb, Mr. Hinson, Rev. J. O. Newport's child and servant, Mr. R. C. Dobb's two children and servant, Mr. Breithaupt's two children, Mr. Heelis's child, and ayah, Masters G. A. and A. Vansomeran, Master Cherry. The following officers have command of the troops proceeding home:—Capt. R. N. Surplice, H.M. 2-24th Foot, Capt. H. B. Hayward, H.M. 45th Foot, Lieutenant E. Erskine, 2-24th Foot. The troops consist of 108 men, 10 women, and 20 children of H.M. Royal Artillery, 16th Lancers, 2-19th, 21st and 24th Foot, 3-60th Rifles, 76th and 91st Regiments, one insane patient and one military convict.

MADRAS LEGISLATION.—A meeting of the Legislative Council took place on Friday, the 19th Feb. At a meeting previous to this the Hon. Mr. Loch had moved that the Bill to amend Act IV. of 1842 (for the better management of boats and catamarans in the Madras roads) be taken into consideration, but as it was held that time should be given to those who were immediately affected by the Bill to express their opinions regarding it, the consideration of the Bill was postponed. Two petitions were sent in to the Council—one by a single boat-owner who set his face quite against the Bill, being of opinion that it was opposed to the principles of free trade; and the other from thirty-seven other boat-owners, who did not seem to object to the Bill, but suggested a scale according to which they wished the boat-rates to be fixed. As the Bill had not met with general opposition from the boat-owners, and the Council not considering it in any way contrary to the principles of free trade, it was, on the motion of the Hon. Mr. Loch, passed. The Hon. Mr. Clarke also presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to enable Government to levy a duty by way of excise on salt manufacture. A long debate ensued with regard to the tribunal by which the compensation to be granted under the Bill should be decided. The majority in the Council, including his Excellency the President, held that an Arbitration Court would be preferable. The next question which called for discussion was as to the course which should be adopted with regard to having an arbitration clause in the Bill, as a Bill having similar arbitration clauses had once already been vetoed by the Supreme Government. The discussion of this point is to be renewed at the next meeting.

Bombay.

BERAR.—It is notified in the last Gazette of India that the Rev. James Aitken is appointed temporarily to be an Inspector of Schools in Berar.

OFFICIAL CHANGES IN PROSPECT.—We understand that when Mr. Lushington goes home in April, on furlough, Mr. Charles E. Chapman, Bengal Civil Service, will succeed him as Accountant-general and Accountant to the High Court. Mr. Chapman, it will be remembered, acted for Mr. Lushington during his recent absence from Bombay.

DUTIES ON WOOL AND COTTON.—We are glad to learn, says the Sindian, that the Government of India have abolished municipal dues on all cotton and wool exported from Kurrachee. The municipal commissioners here are preparing a new schedule of duties, wherein they have been requested to exclude the items of cotton and wool.

KURRACHEE HARBOUR.—The Sindh News says that about a month ago Government ordered the immediate prosecution of the Kurrachee harbour works, for which purpose the sum of rupees seventeen lakhs had been sanctioned. Quarterly reports of expenditure, as well as of the effects of the works as they progress, are to be submitted to Government.

THE BHORE GHAUT ACCIDENT COMMISSION.—The Commission appointed by Government to inquire into the recent fatal accident on the Bhore Ghaut incline was to commence its sittings on Monday, March 1. We are glad to learn that the name of Mr. Dossaboy Franjee has been added to the Commission, the previous absence of any native gentleman having caused great dissatisfaction in the native community.

MHOW.—On the recommendation of Lord Napier, we hear that Government has sanctioned the supply of oil for the purpose of lighting the gymnasium of H.M.'s 2nd Dragoon Guards at Mhow. It was urged that Cavalry men have much less time at their own disposal than Infantry, and anything therefore which contributes to their amusement and at the same time their physical and moral advantage is to be advocated.—Sindh News, Feb. 15.

PASSENGERS FROM BOMBAY.—The following is the list of passengers per steamer Nceera, Captain Hauscom, which sailed for Aden and Suez on the 25th February:—Capt. and Mrs. Lyon and two children, Miss Murray, Mrs. Robinson and three children, Colonel and Mrs. Taylor and four children, Mrs. Packe, Miss Fuller, Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Owen, Colonels Waddington, Travers, and Shuldham, Major Brereton, Capt. and Mrs. Balfour and three children, Capt. Wells, Rev. W. Scholbred, Lieuts. Waudby and Hay, Messrs. Wright, Walters, Mosey, Gimblet, N. Addiss, U. Addiss, and Signor Desire.

COTTON.—The cotton shipped from Bombay during the month of January last amounted to 18,026,354 lbs., valued at Rs. 60,14,247.

MILITARY.—We hear that the 59th Foot was to proceed to Bombay from Ceylon in March, instead of the 39th Foot from England. Owing to cholera having again broken out among the workmen employed on the road between Khandeish and Mhow, the head quarters and a battery of the 6th Brigade Royal Artillery, lately arrived from England under orders for that station, have been ordered to remain at Deolalee for the present. A few cases have ended fatally in the station of Mhow among the native camp followers. Major-General Adams, C.B., and staff, arrived at Neemuch on the 15th inst., and are expected to return to Mhow some time next week.

LONDON AND BOMBAY BANK.—At a meeting of the shareholders of the London and Bombay Bank and General Financial Company, held in the premises of the Royal Bank of India, Meadow-street, on February 28th, the following resolutions were passed:—"That a new subscription, at the rate of half a rupee per share, be raised for resisting the calls and bringing to justice all persons who have been guilty of fraudulent transactions in connection with the above bank." (2.) "That a committee of the following persons—viz., Messrs. Limjee Jamsetjee, Sudanund Balcrisna, Nusserwanjee Snapoorjee Paruck, Najurdass Purmanundass, and Furdoonjee Merwanjee—be appointed to look after the interests of the shareholders and to take steps for that purpose."

SIR JOSEPH ARNOULD.—The Hon. Sir Joseph Arnould, who retires from the Bench at the end of the present term, has so well kept pace with the work of his Court, that he will not leave a single case set down for hearing before him in arrears. The learned Judge's punctuality and his close attention to work have always been highly appreciated by suitors whose cases have come before him. At the sitting of the High Court yesterday Mr. Scoble took occasion to compliment his Lordship on the fact that when his Lordship retired he would have the satisfaction of knowing that he left no case in arrears, a circumstance which, so far as he (the learned counsel) was aware, was without precedent in an Indian Court. As against this satisfactory state of things truth compels us to add that in one of the division courts it often happens that the business is only just beginning when the other Courts have got through half a day's work.

THE ESPLANADE.—A petition is now being signed for presentation to his Excellency the Governor, praying that he will use his influence towards having the extension of the Baroda Railway removed from the Esplanade, and the site of the terminus fixed at some less objectionable spot than Colaba. The reasons advanced in support of the petition are, we consider, such as no Government can refuse to attach great weight to. At any rate, they are such as should be urged by the public with respectful but firm determination, showing that the community is sensible of the magnitude of the spoliation the railway threatens to entail upon it, and that it is resolved to prevent it if possible. Already the nuisance caused by engines emitting dense volumes of smoke along the foreshore is felt to be almost intolerable; and as new buildings spring up and the traffic increases, that nuisance will be increased a hundred-fold. The Colaba extension ought to be stopped forthwith, and in order to bring about that desirable end, every one in Bombay should sign the petition to which we invite attention. The case of the city is far from hopeless, for we know that the Viceroy has stated to the Secretary of State his conviction that the Colaba extension is a terrible mistake, and that the Government of Bombay has consequently ordered the suspension of all permanent works connected therewith, pending the decision of the Duke of Argyll on the subject.

THE BOMBAY BANK COMMISSION.—The Madras Athenæum anticipates the tenor of the Commissioners' Report. "The latest news from home regarding this Commission is (says our contemporary) of a very cheering nature, so far as the shareholders are concerned. The report had, we hear, been completed, and was ready for presentation to the Duke of Argyll, whom it is expected to surprise. The prosecutions against directors of bubble companies show the popular feeling at home with regard to defaulting directors. The failure of the Bombay Bank was due to a neglect of duty on the part of the Government directors. Those directors were the representatives of the Government, and their neglect and the consequences of it must fall on the Government. We believe that the Commissioners have spoken very clearly on this point, and have used language of a strength suitable to the evidence brought before them. The Duke of Argyll will be in a difficulty, and it is expected that to gain time he will refer the subject to the authorities in India, who are, of course, most conversant with the matter, being on the spot, notwithstanding that Sir John Lawrence and Sir Bartle Frere will both be at home before the despatch can reach their successors, who ought not to be troubled with it. The question is a difficult one for a new minister to decide upon, but he can come to a decision as easily with the evidence before him in England as he can after referring the matter to Lord Mayo. Government must do something to recoup the shareholders for the losses sustained by the negligence of the agents of Government, whose presence on the directorate of the Bombay Bank was regarded as a guarantee against a misapplication of the money in the hands of the bank."

CENTRAL BANK OF WESTERN INDIA.—At the High Court, before Mr. Justice Westropp in Chambers, Mr. Peile, on behalf of Mr. Muncherjee Framjee Colah, applied for an order for an inspection of the books and papers of the Central Bank of Western India, now in liquidation, for the years 1864-68, the applicant being a registered shareholder. Mr. Pigot, on behalf of Mr. Dunlop and other liquidators, stated that an inspection had been allowed to the applicant, and that Mr. Dunlop had done all that a business man could do to assist in the inspection, which, however, had to be stopped eventually in consequence of the annoyance caused by the applicant to the employees of the bank. Mr. Peile read the affidavit made by his client, and stated the liquidators had filed no balance-sheet for 1867 and 1868, and that the shareholders had therefore had no opportunity of knowing the real state of affairs; and this circumstance was to account for the application not having been made long ere this. The applicant had reason to believe that the directors of the bank had been guilty of misconduct; and the application was made with the object of finding out what they had done with the capital of this company, of which he (applicant) was an unfortunate shareholder, having lost a considerable sum of money. Mr. Pigot said the bank was in voluntary liquidation, and expressed a doubt whether the Court had power to make any order in the matter. Mr. Peile referred to section 154 of the Joint-Stock Company's Act, to show that even where a company is winding up voluntarily the Court might be applied to to determine any question relating to the company, as if it was winding up under the Court. His Lordship made an order that the applicant and his son be allowed to inspect the books and papers of the bank, the power to be revoked in the event of their causing annoyance; each party to pay his own costs of the application.

FAREWELL ADDRESS TO DR. ARNOTT.—An address from the Warrant Medical Officers serving in Bombay was presented to Dr. Arnott, Inspector-general of Hospitals, at his office in the Town Hall, on the afternoon of Wednesday, the 24th inst., on the eve of his retirement from the Indian Medical Service of this Presidency. Dr. Arnott replied as follows:—"Mr. Burn, and Gentlemen,—The great honour you have conferred upon me, in presenting this address, I assure you I duly appreciate and cordially thank you for. To me nothing could have been more gratifying than to find that those with whom I had served and worked for the greater part of my life had deemed me worthy of the high distinction you and this deputation have now awarded me. With the utmost gratitude I accept the expression of your kind feelings towards me. In your address you give me credit for more than I deserve, but I have failed to benefit the department to the extent I wished, for more from want of ability than from any lack of desire to do so; far from the day when my first services began in the hospital of my old brave regiment the Bombay Fusiliers, I learned to appreciate the zeal, the ability, and the high standing of the department of which you are members, and whenever an opportunity has offered I have not failed to advocate its claims. For years, however, it remained most unfairly and unwisely depressed, but I hope better days have at last come, and that the late order of the Government of India will now render the department worthy of the services of such men as I now see before me, for I repeat that the department contains an admirable body of men, whose intelligence and ability would do credit to any service. The Warrant Medical Officers serving with me I always regarded as friends and coadjutors influenced by the same motives as myself, and I have never been deceived in them, for I uniformly found them as interested in the welfare of the sick and in the proper discharge of all hospital duties as I was. In future years I shall have a pleasing recollection of my services in India, crowned as they now are by the approval of so many well calculated to form a proper estimation of them. Again, Mr. Burn and gentlemen, I tender my heartfelt thanks for the honour you have done me, and wishing each and all of you every success in your professional career, I bid you farewell."

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

THE HAZARA CAMPAIGN.—COMPLIMENTARY LETTER FROM THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA.

No. 168.—H.E. the Governor gen. in Council has much satisfaction in publishing for general information the following military letter from the Rt. Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 6, dated Jan. 13, 1869 :—

Military.—No. 6.

India Office, London, Feb. 13, 1869.

To his Excellency the Right Hon. the Governor general of India in Council.

Sir,—I have received and considered in Council your military letters [Nos. 365 of Sept. 19, 378 of Sept. 26, 386 of Oct. 3, 395 of Oct. 10, 406 of Oct. 17, 417 of Oct. 24, 428 of Oct. 31, 445 of Nov. 7, 1868], on the subject of the operations of the Hazara field force.

2. I have also received and perused with much interest and satisfaction your despatch No. 447, dated Nov. 7, and its enclosures, from which I learn that the operations have been brought to a successful termination, and in which you express your approbation of the manner in which the expedition has been conducted by Major gen. A. T. Wilde, C.B., S.I., and the officer and troops under his orders.

3. I shall cause the general order which you have issued on this occasion, together with the several despatches to which it refers, to be published in the London Gazette, and I avail myself of this occasion to express to your Excellency in Council the high sense which her Majesty's Government entertain of the energy and judgment displayed throughout these proceedings by the Government of India and by his Excellency the C. in C.

4. Her Majesty's Government entirely concur also in the opinions which your Government have recorded regarding the conduct of Major gen. Wilde and the officers, political and military, concerned in this brief and successful expedition. That the force should have had to encounter comparatively slight resistance in the course of its operations in a country presenting natural difficulties of a most formidable character is, I cannot doubt, mainly due to the admirable manner in which the force was organised and equipped, and the skill and determination with which its operations were conducted, no less than the excellent spirit displayed by the troops themselves. His Royal Highness the Field Marshal C. in C. has expressed to me his concurrence in these sentiments.—I have, &c., ARGYLL.

OFFICERS' LETTERS.—POSTAL DEPARTMENT.

No. 21.—The following Post-office Notification, printed in the Gazette of India, No. 3 of 1869, is published in continuation of G.O. No. 391 of 1868:—

Post-office Notification, dated Calcutta, Jan. 12.—Referring to the regulations respecting the correspondence of commissioned officers of the army conveyed to or from the United Kingdom by British packet, published under dates Aug. 5 and Nov. 30 last, it is hereby notified for general information that the definition of the term "civil employ," given in paragraph 4 of the notice of Aug. 5, has been superseded by a ruling of the Government of India, military department, whereby officers of the following classes are declared to be entitled to the privilege rates, viz.:—

(1.) Officers serving with regiments or corps, whether under the orders of the C. in C. or Civil Governments, as well as officers on the staff of those forces.

(2.) Officers serving in departments under the C. in C., as well as those serving in the following departments, which are under the Government of India and the Government of Madras and Bombay, viz.:—Ordnance army commissariat, military account, clothing, stud, medical, except medical officers holding civil charges.

(3.) Personal staff officers, whether of a military or civil functionary.

The following clause has been added to para. 3 of the same rules, viz.:—

"A commanding officer or head of a department when sending a letter is recommended to sign it twice, i.e., once as sender, and again (cross-ways) as commanding officer or head of a department. Where it may be quite clear from the address that the officer who signs it is both the sender and the commanding officer or head of department, no surcharge will be made, but it is safer for the officer in all cases to sign it twice as above recommended, so as to leave nothing to conjecture."

RETIREMENT COMMISSIONS.

Head Qrs., Calcutta, Jan. 25.—No. 24.—The following letter from the military sec., Horse Guards, dated Oct. 31, 1868, to the C. in C. in India, is published in continuation of G.O. Nos. 118 and 394 of 1868:—

"In reply to your letter dated July 7 last, I am directed by the Field Marshal C. in C. to acquaint you that his Royal Highness, with the concurrence of the Sec. of State for India in Council, approves of the retirement from the service of Captain . . . of the . . . foot, who will receive the sum which the rules of the service entitle him to, viz., £1,575.

"His Royal Highness observes that Captain . . . has applied, in common with some other officers of the non-purchase regiments, to retire from the army, under the provisions of the Royal Warrant dated Feb. 3, 1866. I am accordingly to explain that this Warrant is not applicable to officers who entered the new line regiments from the Indian army as regards their receiving from the Indian revenues the value of their commissions on retirement from the service, and that their applications to retire under the Warrant are irregular.

"These officers, under the conditions of Horse Guards' G.O. No. 48 of 1868, are permitted, subject to the approval of the Sec. of State for India and the Field Marshal C. in C., to receive on retirement a sum of money as the value of their commissions, provided they are not entitled, under Indian regulations, to either full or half-pay."

THE 59TH FOOT.—Intimation has been received that the 59th foot will proceed to Bombay from Ceylon in March next, instead of 39th foot from England.

RETIREMENTS.—Major gen. C. Prior, Bengal infantry, is permitted to reside in India and draw his pay from the Sirhind Circle. The retirement from the service, by the sale of his commission, of Ensign S. E. Underwood, 82nd foot, has been accepted by the Commander-in-Chief. Dated Jan. 21.

ARRIVALS FROM EUROPE.—The undermentioned officers have reported their return from England (February):—Major gen. J. Travers, v.c., of infantry, and Assistant surg. C. Hatchell, of the medical department, date of arrival at Bombay, Jan. 30; Lieut. R. C. Beavan, of the Bengal staff corps, date of arrival at Fort William, Feb. 5.

THE TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.—The undermentioned gentlemen, appointed by H.M.'s Secretary of State for India as assistant superintendents of the 4th grade in the telegraph department, with effect from the dates specified opposite their names, reported their arrival at Calcutta on Feb. 3:—W. E. Ayrton, F. G. Maclean, and C. T. Smyth, Sept. 1, 1868; G. J. Hare, J. G. Pope, and E. C. Bird, Nov. 26, 1868.

HOSPITAL SERGEANTS.—In order to assimilate the remuneration given to hospital sergeants of British corps serving in India with that which they receive in England, the Right. Hon. the Governor General in Council is pleased to direct that hospital sergeants shall for the future receive free rations, and that those who have served seven years shall receive Rs. 7-8 instead of, as at present, Rs. 7 a month.

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—The undermentioned officers have been reported by the board of examiners at Fort William to have passed a successful examination on Jan. 6, agreeably to G.G.O. No. 734 of 1864:—Lieut. C. E. Hunter, guide corps, high proficiency in Oordoo; Ensign G. F. Young, 79th foot, and Lieut. R. H. A. Quinet, 2nd wing subaltern 12th N.I., on probation, 101st foot, higher standard in Hindoostanee. Mr. J. Heinig, asst. engr. with Cawnpore div., public works, has passed the lower standard examination in Hindoostanee.

PENSIONS TO WIDOWS OF MEDICAL WARRANT OFFICERS.—No. 180.—With reference to para. 27 of G.G.O. No. 550, dated June 5 last, and under authority of the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, it is hereby notified that the grant of pensions to widows of medical warrant officers is subject to the usual declaration that their husband did not die possessed of property to the following amounts:—Hon. asst. surgs., Rs. 10,000; other grades, Rs. 7,500.

RATIONS TO THE TROOPS.—The Right Hon. the Governor General in Council is pleased to extend the provisions of Government General Orders No. 454 of May 27, and No. 869 of Nov. 7, 1864, to all native local troops, and likewise to all permanent military establishments, departmental as well as regimental, who are in receipt of less than ten rupees per mensem, and to sanction compensation for dearness of provisions being passed to the local troops at the scale laid down for 1st class or fighting men, and to the public establishments at the 2nd class or followers' rate, whenever the aggregate cost of their respective rations exceeds the assigned amounts.

MAGISTERIAL.—The following officers are invested with the powers of a moonsiff in the districts to which they are severally attached:—Lieut. Rutherford, assistant commissioner, Durrang. Mr. MacDonnell, assistant commissioner of Burhee, in Hazareebaugh. Mr. Walker, deputy magistrate and deputy collector, Julpigoorce. Mr. Webster, officiating assistant commissioner, Lohardugga. Thomson, staff corps, assistant superintendent, 1st class, Mysore commission, arrived at Bombay on Feb. 7. Mr. Marshall, staff corps, Capt. A. Mears, staff corps, and Capt. R. D. Thorpe, staff corps, deputy assistant quarter master general, Ceded districts, arrived at Madras on Feb. 12.

REMOVALS AND POSTINGS.—The following removals and appointments are ordered (Feb. 5):—Lieut. Lawder (Europe), from att. 7th N.I., to att. 8th N.I.; Capt. Swanston, from 2nd wing subaltern, 8th N.I., to 1st wing subaltern 8th N.I.; Capt. Ellis, from 1st wing subaltern, 8th N.I., to 2nd wing subaltern 8th N.I.; Capt. Barnett, from att. 26th N.I., to 1st wing subaltern, 26th N.I.; Lieut. Macneill, from att. 41st N.I., to offic. adjt. 41st N.I.

REGIMENTAL COMMANDS.—Under instructions from the Secretary of State for India the Right. Hon. the Governor in Council is pleased to notify that, as in the Bengal and Bombay armies, all appointments to regimental commands will henceforth be made at the discretion of H.E. the Commander in Chief, seniority, service, claims, &c., being held in view with due fitness for the exercise of command. Field officers, whether lieut. cols. or majors, will distinctly understand that those who may be found unfit will not be placed in command of regiments, whatever their seniority may be, whether in army, cadre, or staff corps rank.

EXAMINATIONS.—The undermentioned officers, &c., have passed the Lower Standard examination in the Hindustani language:—Capt. Williams, staff corps, attached 2nd N.I., Waltham, Jan. 18. Lieut. Keith, 1st battalion 1st foot, Madras, Jan. 7. Cornet Scott, 16th lancers, Bangalore, Jan. 20. Ensign Hornsby, 2nd battalion 19th foot, Bangalore, Jan. 20. Asst. surg. The undermentioned officer has passed the Higher Standard Examination in the Hindustani language:—Major Farrer, staff corps. The undermentioned officer has been examined in the Tamil language:—Capt. F. D. Plowden, attached to the 17th N.I., Madras, passed the elementary test on Feb. 2.

MILITARY FURLONGS AND LEAVES OF ABSENCE.—The undermentioned officers are permitted to proceed to Europe, under new rules, on m.c.:—Capt. Hicks, staff corps, a prob. supt. of police, Bellary, on furl., m.c., for 20 months, and to embark from Madras. Surg. Wilson, zillah surg. and supt. of the jail of Tinnevely, on furl. for two years, and to embark from Madras. Col. Russell, of the staff corps, paymaster Mysore Circle, is granted leave of absence from the date of expiration of his privilege leave, and until June 30. Major Wilson, dep. judge adv. gen. Nagpore force, from Feb. 2, or date of departure, for one month—Bombay, to appear before a medical board. Lieut. col. Forde, R.A., will proceed to England and report himself at the Horse Guards, his exchange with Lieut. col. Nuthall having been cancelled by the promotion of the latter officer.

CIVIL LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The following gentlemen obtained furlough and leave of absence in February, on m.c., under the last new rules:—The privilege leave granted to Capt. C. J. Richards, cantonment magistrate at Wellington, in the Fort St. George Gazette dated Dec. 1 last, is cancelled, and subsidiary leave is granted instead from the date on which he delivered over charge of his office to the date of his embarkation from Madras on m.c. to England. The undermentioned gentlemen have obtained leave of absence from their stations:—Mr. R. Sewell, assistant to the coll. and mag. of North Arcot, six months' special, to Europe; Mr. W. H. Glenn, assistant to the coll. and mag. of Malabar, three months' cumulative; Capt. Porteous, supt. of police, Tinnevely, thirty days, prep. to m.c. to Europe; Rev. A. Taylor, chaplain of Kamptee, two years' furlough to Europe.

TRANSFERS IN THE ROYAL ARTILLERY.—His Royal Highness the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief has been pleased to order the following transfers of officers affecting the Royal Artillery in this Presidency:—Capt. W. C. Nangle, from the 5th to the 12th brigade; Capt. and brevet Lieut. col. H. Irvine, from the 10th to the 5th brigade, and ordered to India. His Royal Highness the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief has approved of Lieut. H. M. Williams, 21st foot, being posted on his recent promotion to the 2nd battalion of his regiment. The following removals and appointments are ordered:—Lieut. F. J. Lawder (Europe), from attached 7th N.I. to attached 8th N.I.; Capt. N. Swanston, from 2nd wing subaltern 8th N.I. to 1st wing subaltern 8th N.I.; Capt. J. A. Ellis, from 1st wing subaltern 8th N.I. to 2nd wing subaltern 8th N.I.; Capt. H. C. B. ## Home.

LORD STRATHNAIRN.—General the Right Hon. Hugh H. Lord Strathnairn, G.C.B., G.C.S.I., from 92nd Foot, to be Colonel of the Royal Regiment of Horse Guards, v. Field Marshall Hugh Viscount Gough, G.C.B., K.P., G.C.S.I., dec.; March 3.

THE SUEZ CANAL.—The Times publishes a telegram from its special correspondent in Egypt, which says that the waters of the Mediterranean were admitted into the Bitter Lakes at eleven o'clock on Thursday morning last, with complete success, in the presence of the Viceroy. Another despatch says that his Highness repeatedly expressed to M. de Lesseps his admiration and satisfaction at the progress of the canal.

AGRA BANK.—It has been resolved by the Board of the Agra Bank to recommend to the shareholders, for declaration at the ensuing annual meeting, a dividend for the past year to the A shareholders of 9 per cent., making, with the interim distribution of 4 per cent. in September last, 13 per cent. for the year 1868, and, with the 7 per cent. declared for the year 1867, the full preferential dividend amounting to them of 20 per cent. for the last two years.

LORD NAPIER'S SALARY.—The Bill which has been introduced in the House of Commons to enable Lord Napier of Magdala to receive his salary as member of Council at Bombay, or as holding any other office in India, notwithstanding his being in receipt of an annuity of £2,000, simply provides that his lordship's salary is to be paid in full, notwithstanding the provisions of the Act of 1833, which directs that the salary of certain high officials in India, who may be in the receipt of a pension from the Crown, is to be reduced by the amount of such pension.

THE LATE LORD GOUGH.—The extreme simplicity of Lord Gough's funeral greatly surprised the public; but it is now understood that it was carried out in every way in express agreement with his own desire, made known to his family long previous to his death. A movement is already on foot for the erection of a monument to the memory of the gallant old soldier. One proposition is that it shall be placed in St. Patrick's Cathedral, at Dublin; but another, and the more popular of the two, is that it shall be placed in one of the principal thoroughfares of that city. A large sum will be easily raised for either purpose.

DRILL AS IT SHOULD BE.—The communicating of the orders for brigade movements by means of signals was tried last Saturday at Chatham by the Royal Engineers, instead of doing their ordinary drill. One battalion, commanded by Captain Maitland, advanced from Gillingham and attacked and dislodged a defending battalion under Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel Pritchard, which was drawn up on the field work ground with outposts thrown out. The attack was made in two columns covered by skirmishers. The whole of the words of command were sent by signal, and the system was found to answer admirably, although the numbers of men were not sufficiently large to show how much greater the advantages of so working them would have been had they consisted of large masses instead of a few hundred men on each side. As this is the first time the experiment has been tried, and the signallers had had no practice at similar work, the result was considered extremely satisfactory.

THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.—The officers of the Indian medical service are loudly complaining of what they consider an act of great injustice and hardship in being deprived of the advantages granted by the new furlough rules. It appears that the Secretary to the Government of India, in a communication to the Inspector-General of Hospitals of the Indian Medical Service, Lower Provinces, dated 29th of December last, which has since been published for general information, states that he has been directed to acquaint him that regimental medical charges are not considered appointments in the sense of clauses 2, 7, 13, and 16 of the Government General Order No. 1,064 of 1868. This, we are informed, was Sir John Lawrence's parting order to the medical service. Why should the medical be the only officers in the Indian army who are supposed to hold no appointments? If this order be carried out, the instructions of the Secretary of State will have been altogether set aside; and, as nearly all the medical officers hold regimental medical charges, they will be excluded from reaping any benefit from the new furlough regulations.—The Lancet.

APPEALS TO THE PRIVY COUNCIL.—On March 15 their lordships gave judgment in the case of "Nee-kisto Deb Barmono v. Beer-chunder Thakoor." The appellant claimed the Raj of Tipperah on the hills, with the vast estates, amounting to between £60,000 and £70,000. The respondent was the elder brother, and claimed to be the Rajah. The late Rajah had made the younger brother his successor. The appeal was dismissed with costs. Lord Justice Selwyn terminated the sittings of the committee on March 15 by giving judgment in the case of "The Bank of Hindustan, China, and Japan v. the Eastern Financial Association." It was an appeal from a decree of the judges of the High Court of Bombay, which affirmed a decree of a single judge as to a compromise accepted from a bank in liquidation. The points were—whether the court below had power to sanction a compromise so as to bind all the contributories, and, further, whether the compromise was of a character to be accepted. It was held that the Court at Bombay had jurisdiction to sanction a compromise of the nature entered into, and that it was a proper one to be embraced by the parties in litigation. Her Majesty would, therefore, be advised that this appeal should be dismissed with costs.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.—The will of Admiral John Rivett-Carnac, R.N., late of Seymour-street, Portman-square, was proved in London, on the 10th instant, by Sir John Rivett-Carnac, Bart., his nephew; Mrs. Rivett-Carnac, the relict; Mr. Francis E. Guise, Middle Temple; and Mr. Alexander F. Twedie, Ely-place, the executors and trustee. The personality was sworn under £14,000. The will was executed in 1853, and a codicil in 1858. He leaves to his wife, beyond all other bequests, a life interest in one-third of his property, with power of disposal over her share; but in default thereof the same is left amongst all his children. The remaining two-thirds he leaves amongst his three daughters, but stipulated as to the amount to each, regard being had so as to assimilate their share with that under settlement.—The will of Colonel William Henry Stopford-Blair, Royal Artillery, late of Penningham, Wigton, N.B., and of Portman-square, was proved in London, on the 22nd ult., by Mr. James Stopford-Blair, his son, and Mr. Stewart Macnaughten, the personality being sworn under £140,000. His will bears date 1848, and a codicil 1866. He has bequeathed to his only daughter, Elizabeth Ellen Maxwell, on the decease of his two sisters, Catherine and Jane, two sums of £10,000 each, in addition to her fortune; and, after making a few bequests, he appoints his only son, James Stopford-Blair, his residuary legatee.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, March 16.—INDIAN PRIZE MONEY.—Mr. T. CHAMBERS asked the Under Secretary of State for India when the Jhansi prize money (second instalment) would be paid; and whether there would be any prize money for Gwalior, Calpee, and other places in Central India captured by Sir Hugh R. se.—Mr. G. DUFF said nearly the whole of the Jhansi prize money had been paid away in the first distribution. About £10,000 was retained with a view to meet prospective claims; but the greater part of that sum had been paid, and if there should be any further distribution it would be but trifling.

THE KIRWEE PRIZE MONEY.—Colonel NORTH asked the Under Secretary of State for India why the papers relative to the Banda and Kirwee prize property, which were moved for and promised at the end of July, 1866, and again in 1867, had not yet been produced; and whether the booty realised by the Government of India from the seizure of the funded property of the captured chiefs of Kirwee was to be distributed to the troops.—Mr. G. DUFF said the papers had been delayed because the Government had not been able to obtain the whole series. He should think that, now that the whole of the property had been distributed, the papers must have lost their interest. With regard to the second question, he believed it was not the intention of the Government to grant the prayer of the petition.

THE EAST INDIA IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY'S BILL.—This Bill, which was recommitted, went through committee, and was read the third time on Thursday.

HOUSE OF LORDS, THURSDAY, March 18.—The Duke of ARGYLL laid on the table a letter which he had received from Lord Napier of Magdala, in reference to statements by Mr. Rassam, as to some transactions of the Abyssinian expedition which he believed to be inaccurate.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, March 18.—RIFLES FOR INDIA.—Mr. DIXON asked the Secretary of State for War whether an order for rifles had been received from the Indian authorities, and, if so, for how many; supposing such an order had been received, whether it was the intention of the War-office to allow the rifles to be made at the Government factory at Enfield or by the gun trade of the country; and if guns made at Enfield for the colonies and India were charged at the actual cost price, or whether a percentage was put on.—Mr. CARDWELL was understood to say that the Government intended to order 10,000 Sniders and 1,200 arms of other descriptions for India, to be made at the gun factories of London and Birmingham.

MILITARY APPOINTMENTS IN INDIA.—Mr. O'REILLY asked the Under Secretary of State for India whether he would have any objection to lay upon the table copies of the memoranda or other official documents which specify and describe the respective rights and functions with regard to military appointments in India of the Governor-general, the Governor in Council, the Commander or Commanders in Chief, and other authorities.—Mr. GRANT DUFF was understood to say that he knew of no such memoranda or other official documents as the hon. gentleman alluded to. The distribution of military appointments among the various authorities in India was formerly regulated by custom and usage, which custom and usage has been expressly recognised by the 21st and 22nd of Victoria, cap. 105.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, March 19.—Mr. BAINES called for a return of the names of the Council of India, with dates of appointment according to seniority; stating also their ages last birthday, whether previously a director of the East India Company, and if so, from and to what dates; whether having served or resided at any time in India, and if in the service, in what branch, and from and to what dates; the annual amount of any pay, pension, civil fund, or other allowance now received for such Indian service; and the salary and allowances, if any, received as member of the Council; and similar return of the six Secretaries of Departments, and of the Accountant-general, the Auditor, and the Director-general of Stores.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

SIR JOHN LAWRENCE.

The Times asks what would have become of financial equilibrium or of domestic peace, if Sir John Lawrence had been aggressive, or even indiscreet, in his dealings with Afghanistan? Had he attempted to re-occupy that country, there would have been, to begin with, a desperate struggle with a patriotic and warlike race, and for consequences perhaps a second mutiny in India, perhaps a European war. Yet to have resolutely put aside all ideas of such a project was, we do not hesitate to say, a high merit. The inducements were very strong; there was that which to some persons in his position would be irresistible—the temptation of military ambition; a policy of advance would in India have been very popular with both services, the civil and the military alike, and even in England it would, under the circumstances, have been plausible and in many quarters not unacceptable. But it would, we are convinced, have been a fatal error, and we must not forget that what saved Great Britain from committing it was that we had in the Governor-general of India a man who had no idea of self-seeking, and who, when his mind was once made up, had courage enough to resist all the social and political pressure that might be brought to bear upon him. Whatever may be the duty of the Home Government with respect to the Central Asian question, it is certain that Sir John Lawrence has done his, and that he surrenders to his country her Indian Empire in the most favourable condition to meet its future destinies. It would be wrong, however, to fix our attention too exclusively on the closing and most eminent phase of Sir John Lawrence's political life in India. His conduct throughout his whole career commands our respect and admiration. His success has not been due to chance, or interest, or calculating policy, or brilliant strokes, but simply to sterling virtue and an energy regularly productive, yet capable when called upon of prodigious efforts. He duly served his apprenticeship, and his gradual promotion from minor posts to the charge of a central district long accustomed to British rule, and thence to the settlement of a great territory recently conquered and still disordered, and finally, to the culminating position of Viceroy of India, was won, every step of it, the last no less than the first, by merit alone. His conduct in the highest place was of a piece with all his former life. Energetic, vigilant, practical, straightforward, such had he been in the Punjab, and such he showed himself as Governor-general of India; not careful of his words in his manifestoes and despatches so long as business was expedited and justice administered; not casting about how to please this man or that man, one party or another party, or even the general public, but moving straight to his mark, resolved that his duty should be thoroughly discharged, and careless of anything beyond. In honouring Sir John Lawrence, we feel we are honouring the whole body of Anglo-Indian civilians from which he sprang, and of which he is the natural and most illustrious representative. Indian public servants are apt, not without reason, to complain that their services are insufficiently appreciated and acknowledged in this country. The fact is it is impossible for the general public to do justice to Indian question in detail. They have never seen India or its inhabitants; their home experience helps them but little to realise the relations towards a people living in a different climate, and quite alien in race, religion, and civilisation; they receive news from India only at intervals, often long after the event; and it is vain, therefore, to expect that they should make themselves acquainted with the functions of the various officers, still less with the excellences of individual collectors, magistrates, commissioners, and councillors. But the viceroy stands on different ground. Of necessity he is a great figure in the political world; to the public mind he sums up in his single person the entire administration; and the general features of that administration, the finances, the military, the trade, and the foreign relations of India, as a whole, are familiar as Parliamentary topics and matters of Imperial concern. Sir John Lawrence will, we believe, be immediately raised to the peerage. To the House of Lords it will be an honour to admit a statesman who has had a wider personal experience of Government than can be obtained in this country, who has laboured his life long for the good of the people, and who has shown that he can exercise the largest powers with wisdom, resolution, and disinterestedness.

THE SUEZ CANAL.

The Times says that by the admission of the waters of the Mediterranean into the Bitter Lakes with perfect success one of the chief mechanical difficulties of the Suez Canal undertaking has been surmounted, and there can be no doubt that in a short time the canal will be open, at least for vessels of a certain tonnage, the whole length from Port Said to Suez. The Times has doubts, however, as to its capacity to admit the large-sized vessels in which the commerce of the world tends more and more to be carried on. We have already in the Mediterranean traders of much greater tonnage than the largest which visited its ports in the days when the canal was planned, and there can be little doubt that the distant trade with India and Australia will in future years employ vessels of 4,000 and 5,000 or more tons burden. What is the capacity of the harbours and the canal of the company for admitting these enormous vessels? However, when so much has been done we need not despair of finding the work improved from time to time, and brought up to the requirements of the age.

The Daily Telegraph remarks that when the waters of the Mediterranean flowed on Thursday last into the Bitter Lakes the last real difficulty of M. de Lesseps was overcome, and there is no longer any reason to doubt that the two seas will be united in the course of the present year. Such intelligence no longer awakens in the mind of the English public any feeling of jealousy or incredulity. Whatever was said or thought in past years, no people know better how to recognise the brave spirit which declines to admit the existence of "impossibilities," and none can more honestly applaud a piece of grand engineering, accomplished in the general interest of humanity. If in times past we have been slow to employ the language of sympathy and admiration towards the daring entrepreneurs of the Isthmus Canal, we can only say that most really great undertakings, conducted by English hands, fare no better while they are in progress. On the whole, the public desire is, that the commercial result may equal the engineering success of M. de Lesseps' grand labour; and the Telegraph awaits its completion with good wishes and cordial admiration.

MAILS TO INDIA, ETC.

The Mails to all parts of India, via Southampton, are now made up at the General Post Office, London, every Saturday at 8 A.M., and those via Marseilles every Friday, at 6 P.M.

For Ceylon, China, Straits Settlements, &c., the dates of despatch up to the end of March will be as follows, viz. —

Via Southampton, at 8 A.M., on the Saturdays, February 20th, and March 6th and 20th.

Via Marseilles, at 6 P.M., on the Fridays, February 13th and 27th, and March 13th and 27th.

SALARIES.—It is an established rule of the administration that when an officer carries on the duties of more than one office, his entire salary, including acting allowances, must in no case exceed the salary of the most highly paid of the offices which he fills. The object of this rule is obvious—the Government does not desire to encourage the appointment of officers to fulfil the duties of more than one office. Instances have, however, occurred which lead H.E. in Council to think that the rule has either been forgotten, or is supposed to have been affected by the recent reorganisation of acting allowances.

ENGLISH HOMES IN INDIA.

PART I.—THE THREE LOVES.

PART II.—THE WRONG TURNING.

PUBLISHERS' NOTICE.

The writer of these volumes—an accomplished member of a family whose name is conspicuous in Indian story—being now resident in India, they have not had the benefit of her final corrections. It is hoped, however, that this inevitable drawback will detract but little from the pleasure to be afforded by the perusal of the tales, which are, indeed, what they profess to be, stories of English Homes in India, represented as such homes are in different parts of the country and under various social and professional aspects. They endeavour fairly and without exaggeration to illustrate Anglo-Indian life as it is, in its many varying phases, and to bring upon the scene, in their everyday costume, many kinds of Anglo-Indian workmen, from the Resident at a Native Court, to the subaltern officer and the railway employé; and it is believed that all who have visited the countries described will recognise the truth of the portraiture.

THE TEXTILE MANUFACTURES AND THE COSTUMES OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA

Prepared under the Authority of the Secretary of State for India in Council.

By J. FORBES WATSON, Reporter on the Products of India.

Imperial quarto, morocco back, cloth, with numerous coloured Photographs. £3. 5s.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

THE TIMES.—"On no point, perhaps, in regard to India, has greater ignorance prevailed in England than in respect to the clothing of her vast population. Late as it is, and for the first time within the last hundred years of our Indian domination, the work just completed by Dr. Forbes Watson supplies this great and almost unaccountable want of information, and supplies it, too, in a most complete and intelligible manner. It would be impossible to follow Dr. Watson's work in detail; but, whether to the manufacturer or to the general reader, the interest throughout will continue unbroken. His book is written in a clear and thoroughly intelligible style throughout; it is handsomely got up, and embellished by numerous coloured photographs, from which the various styles of costumes and portions of clothing, male & female, will be more readily understood than from mere descriptions."

THE ATHENÆUM.—"We may safely say that a more important work on the manufactures of India has never been given to the public, than the Industrial Museum, and this Commentary by Dr. Forbes Watson. Advantages are sometimes slow to follow, even when the channel for them has been skilfully made and clearly marked out, but we certainly do anticipate very great results from this work, and that before long its author will be acknowledged to deserve a place amongst the real benefactors of India."

THE EDINBURGH REVIEW.—"It is a matter of national importance to study and ascertain what the traditions of India in respect to dress really are. This task has been most ably performed by Dr. Forbes Watson in the volume before us. We call attention to the work and to the subject, not as a matter of mere curiosity, but as an inquiry of direct interest to the manufacturing industry of Europe. Dr. Watson has evidently brought his personal Indian experience to bear upon a mass of materials which, in less skilled hands, would most likely have proved wearisome and unintelligible. As he has arranged his details, they are as entertaining to the general reader as they are full of information and instruction to the manufacturer."

THE MORNING POST.—"The conception of this splendid work reflects the highest credit upon the wisdom of the department to which we are indebted for its publication; and the manner in which it has been executed by its author. No one can fully appreciate the value of this work without seeing it, because neither analysis nor extracts can give any idea of the immense mass of minute facts which it contains, and the admirable manner in which they are grouped and made subservient to the practical requirements of the manufacturer and the merchant, and the cravings of the student of ornamental art. The illustrations are as magnificent as they are appropriate. In fact, as mere productions of beauty and taste, they give the work the air of a book of art luxury, and we have no doubt that from this feature it will find many admirers and purchasers beyond the ranks of trade and commerce."

THE ART JOURNAL.—"The work, indeed, is as well fitted, as far as embellishment is concerned, for the drawing-room table as it is for the study; and its contents will be found far more interesting to the general reader than its mere designation would lead to a supposition that it might be. The motive and purpose of its publication is highly creditable to the present Home Government of India."

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

ILL-CONDITIONED STOMACH.—Few persons, save those who have long endured the hydra-headed disease called dyspepsia, can form any notion of the great expense chronic indigestion entails on muscle, nerve, mind, and temper. In the early stages of this protean malady, the purifying, regulating, and aperient Pills, invented by Professor Holloway, exert the most wholesome power by accurately adjusting the functions of the stomach, liver, bowels, and the minor organs subserving the solutions of man's food. In confirmed debility of digestion Holloway's Pills are likewise reliable remedies, which may be confidently resorted to in all stomachic, hepatic, renal, and alvine derangements without the slightest doubt of their ability to release the sufferer from almost insupportable misery.

LIEBIG COMPANY'S EXTRACT OF MEAT.—PARIS and HAVRE EXHIBITION GOLD MEDALS.—CAUTION.—None genuine without Baron Liebig, the inventor's signature being on every jar, accompanied by full printed directions. About seventy pints of excellent beef tea for 11s., the present reduced retail price per pound. Finest, most convenient, and by far the cheapest meat-flavouring ingredient for soups, made dishes, and sauces. Sold by all Italian Warehousemen, Chemists, Grocers, Ship Chandlers, and Provision-dealers.

DYSENTERY, CHOLERA, FEVER, AGUE, COLDS, &c.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful.—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colic, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Nervotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1861.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not supply a want and fill a place."

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that "108 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

WHITMORE'S COMPOUND LINI-MENT OF ARNICA.

A SPECIFIC for the CURE OF RHEUMA-TISM, LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, SPRAINS, CON-
TUSIONS, WEAKNESS OF THE JOINTS, CHILBLAINS,
&c. It is also an excellent remedy as a stimulating application to the surface of the chest and back in bronchitis, inflammation of the lungs, pulmonary consumption, and whooping cough. When the liver is inactive, rubbed over it, its stimulating properties have a beneficial effect, and in all cases where counter irritation is desirable, it will be found invaluable.

In bottles, small, medium, and large.

WILKINSON'S BRONCHIO-THORACIC LOZENGES.

Prepared from the receipt of an eminent Physician, and experience has fully justified their recommendation as the most speedy remedy in irritation of the throat, catarrhal coughs, bronchitis, incipient consumption, spitting of blood, &c., &c. To public speakers and vocalists they will be found invaluable, as they impart a clear and beautiful tone to the voice. Free from any preparation of opium, and of an agreeable taste, they are applicable to all.

In bottles of one uniform size.

WHITMORE'S STOMACHIC DINNER PILLS.

No Pill is so efficacious in promoting digestion, strengthening the stomach, correcting acidity, preventing or removing headache, giddiness, &c., arising from a costive habit, debilitated stomach, or torpid liver.

They require no change of diet, and those of the most delicate constitution may take them with safety.

Taken as an adjunct with WILKINSON'S SARSAPA-RILLA with the greatest success.

In bottles, small, medium, and large.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED
STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No
chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our
own ability to endure the anguish of the body. . . .
It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation
of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent
Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guaranteed
not to turn black, or make the Teeth look unsightly.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell.
Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. Webb's residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free
by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great
Exhibition of 1861, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.;
postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Postoffice, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,

&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness
and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c.
It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, March 6; Agra and Calcutta, March 2; Madras, March 1.

The event of the week in India was the death of the Nizam, the bare announcement of which was all that reached us in the previous telegram. Afzul-ood-Dowlah died on the 26th February of heart disease and hydrocele, in the forty-fourth year of his age, after a reign of less than twelve years. The excitement of the Mutiny once over, he took but little outward share in the government of his country, giving himself up with the usual readiness of Eastern princes to a life of indolent seclusion. His heir, a boy of three, was at once proclaimed by the Resident, Mr. Saunders, under instructions from Calcutta. The next point to consider was, who should be Regent. A strong party, hostile to Sir Salar Jung, supported the claims of the late Nizam's nephew, Shums-ool-rao, to the guardianship for which his dying uncle is said to have named him. But the Resident, in concert with the Prime Minister, fixed his choice on the dead king's brother, Mejljee Meean. The disturbances which at first were deemed imminent have not taken place; and under the able leadership of Sir Salar Jung, supported by the tact and prudent counsels of Mr. Saunders, we may assume that all is going on as smoothly as we could wish.

THE long-expected meeting between Shere Ali and the Viceroy of India has come off at last. Entering Peshawar on the 4th of March under a Royal salute and an escort of two British regiments, the Ameer of Kabul marched thence to Lahore, where a grand durbar was to be held in his honour by Sir Donald Macleod. Of his reception at the old Sikh capital no particulars have yet come to hand; but the latest telegrams inform us of his arrival at Umballa on the 24th of March, of Lord Mayo's arrival at the same place three days later, and of the meeting of the two potentates in grand durbar on the 28th. It is worth noting that Lord Mayo has not gone out of his way to meet the Afghan ruler, who has come so far out of his way to exchange friendly assurances with his powerful neighbour. We may be sure however that nothing was wanting on Lord Mayo's side to make the Ameer's reception as agreeable as it was stately. Eight thousand troops of all arms had been massed together in Umballa for the occasion; and along the Ameer's line of march from Lahore fifty wells were dug to supply water for his camp. Lord Mayo welcomed his princely guest in her Majesty's name, and expressed a hope that from that interview would date a new era of mutual confidence. The Ameer is said to have been greatly pleased with his reception, not the less perhaps that the presents bestowed on him by the Indian Government are valued at ten thousand pounds. It was a graceful act of Lord Mayo's to present him with his own sword.

THIS meeting seems at any rate to prove how little danger to the restored monarch was involved in the partial rekindling of the flames of revolt in Turkistan. Two sons of Azim Khan have really occupied Tukta Pool, and the Ameer's lieutenant was waiting for troops from Kabul before he would venture to move against the rebels. Abdurrahman Khan has also disappeared from his place of asylum in Bunnoo, with a view to join his cousins. But the ex-Ameer himself has not stirred, and Shere Ali must by this time be too strong to fear the issue of a local rising in a corner of his dominions. Much of course will depend on the promptitude with which his officers can quell the new revolt.

OUR news from the Kohat Valley is limited to a brief account of Colonel Keyes' march against the Bazotie raiders. On the night of February 24, that officer, with four hundred men of the Kohat garrison and the Acting Deputy Commissioner, set off in quest of vengeance, "surprised" the nearest village in the hills, carried off some cattle, and "well punished" the enemy. We hope he did, for his own loss, two sepoys killed and thirty-one wounded, was not small.

FROM the opposite corner of the great Bengal Presidency we learn that the infantry of the western column with half of the Eurasian battery were encamped at Jalnacheria on February 21, under Brigadier-general Nuthall. The eastern column, with the other half of the battery, was to march from Cachar on the 21st February under Major Stephenson, of the 7th Native Infantry. Colonel Nelson remains in command at Cachar.

THE Indian papers publish the Secretary of State's letter concurring in the measures suggested by Mr. Howell, and recommended by the Viceroy, for defraying the cost of primary education among the agricultural classes in Bengal and Madras out of local cesses. This is only assimilating the fiscal usage of those Presidencies to that of Bombay, where local cesses exist in company with a higher land-rent than that of Bengal.

THE programme of Sir R. Temple's Budget as sketched beforehand by some of the Indian journals contains some scheme for enlarging the fiscal powers of the local governments, and one for advancing loans of public money to landholders for agricultural improvements.

SHOULD the Suez Canal be opened in November, one of the first vessels passing through it will be the Messageries Impériales steamer Donnai, of 3,000 tons burden. The passage of so large a steamer would settle the question of the canal's capacity for large ships. But as ships of that size would take two or three days perhaps in reaching Port Said, it is proposed, we hear, to transfer passengers, mails, and small parcels, at Suez from the P. and O. Company's steamers into swift steamers of light draught which would do the distance to Port Said in eight or nine hours. The heavy cargo would come on in the Bombay steamer. For many passengers this will be a great boon, especially for the sick and weakly. The highest toll to be levied by the Canal Company will be ten francs a ton on goods, and the same on every passenger, a rate which would certainly give the canal an advantage over the railway.

A WEEKLY contemporary seems inclined to quarrel with the India Office for being "as jealous of the use of their troops as possible." We for our part are glad to hear of this jealousy, as a good sign. It has often been asserted that India pays for the troops which England uses. It is comforting therefore to find that the India Office can sometimes enforce its rights at the expense of the English Government. If a general at Malta wants to take up an appointment at Aldershot, by all means let him come home in the Crocodile if he or the Government will only pay his passage.

DR. BUTLER, of Harrow, has done wisely in forming a "modern department" at Harrow School for the training of candidates for the civil and military services. If the heads of other public schools would only follow his example, some of the worst features in the present system of cramming youths for admission into those services would soon be mitigated, if not done away. Intending candidates would then be able to carry on their special studies under the best conditions for developing all their faculties of mind and body. All that was good in the old Haileybury and Addiscombe training might thus be reproduced by a process combining special preparation for an active career with all the moral benefits of education in a high-class public school. Instead of being untimely withdrawn from the healthier atmosphere of such schools, in order to be crammed by a private tutor with a given amount of technical knowledge in the shortest space of time, our English youths would find due provision made for their special destinies under the same roof where they had already been imbibing lessons of manliness and moral discipline hardly to be gained elsewhere.

THE full effect however of such a move will never be seen, so long as the system of examination for the public services remains unaltered. Competition is good under right conditions; but the existing rules of election into the Indian Civil Service, for example, are open to serious objections. The writer of a letter to a contemporary complains with reason of the low level of fitness practically laid down by the rule which rejects any candidate who, in his final examination, falls below a given standard in any one subject out of the seven or eight prescribed. Let him gain as many marks as he pleases for every other subject, still his deficient knowledge of that particular one ensures his final exclusion from the goal which many a less competent rival succeeds in creeping through. It is a good thing, no doubt, to have a fair knowledge of many subjects, and it is right to insist on a certain proficiency in some three or four of those required for the final examination. But if a candidate has passed with special credit in law or languages, it is surely hard to ruin his prospects at twenty-two, "because some zealous examiner, whom nobody knows, has puzzled him in the positions of Indian towns or rivers, the exploits of a freebooter, or in a passage of some foolish Oriental story." High excellence in one branch of study ought to be fairly weighed against failure in another. Under the present system a scholar like Mr. Hunter might be shut out through his imperfect conversance, let us say, with geography or mathematics, from a career to which scores of mediocrities, crammed sufficiently for the occasion, would have easy access. Last year, according to the writer in question, a former prizeman was rejected in this very way.

HIS HIGHNESS MAHARAJAH DHULEEP SINGH has at length completed his education. It is many years ago since we first heard of his eating beef like any Englishman. The next stage in the metamorphosis was his appearance as a professed Christian. After that he came over to England, was duly received at Court, and introduced into the best English society. A few weeks ago his name figured in the papers in connection with some poachers who had made free with the game on his Suffolk estate. And now we are told that the dispossessed heir of Runjit Singh has qualified himself to serve as a justice of the peace in his adopted county. The transformation from the semi-barbaric ruler of a great kingdom to a modern English squire dispensing justice at the Quarter Sessions may now be regarded as complete. We hope that his Highness accepts his far from unenviable lot with the cheerfulness of a true philosopher, and has long since learned to forgive his adopted country for relieving him of the heavier if more splendid burdens involved in the possession of the Koh-i-noor. Some foreigner has said that the position of a wealthy English squire is about the happiest on earth. May we therefore congratulate Dhuleep Singh on the change of fortune which has brought him to the same comfortable level with the families of two or three other retired sovereigns?

WE were right in predicting that Sir John Lawrence, on his promotion to the peerage, would keep the old name which many years of distinguished service had long since rendered illustrious. He will henceforth be known among us as Baron Lawrence of the Punjab and of Grately in Hampshire. The honour comes to him rather late in the day. It was really his due ever since the Mutiny, which he more than anyone else contributed to put down. Had it been bestowed on him when he last went out to India his influence as a ruler would have been all the greater with the many to whom any sort of title conveys an impression of its wearer's superior worth or social eminence. In many ways the late Viceroy would have been far more popular, and therefore more powerful, as Lord Lawrence than as mere Sir John.

AT the Mansion-house banquet on Monday night Sir John Lawrence was the hero of the evening. In the course of his reply to the Lord Mayor's toast he dwelt on "the difficulty of governing India, filled as it is by antagonistic races, of reconciling the people to a foreign rule, of raising sufficient revenue in the country, of maintaining our power, and at the same time making the people satisfied and contented with their lot. The task was one from which any man, however remarkable, might shrink without disgrace, and the statesman might be forgiven who did not surmount all its difficulties."

CAPTAIN OSBORN'S reply to Dr. Goldstücker seems to us so far beside the mark, that, even were it shorter, we should be compelled to decline inserting it. It is no answer, for instance, to a grave charge to say that Dr. Hall's denial of it settles the matter, seeing how many witnesses are arrayed against him. When Dr. Hall's own statement comes before us, we shall be better able to judge the validity of his friend's defence. At present it seems to us weaker than none.

NORMAL TRAINING SCHOOLS FOR WOMEN.

THE first attempt at a Normal Training School for Female Teachers, on the Bengal side, is now making under the auspices of Lieutenant-governor Gray. As far back as the beginning of 1867, Miss Carpenter urged Sir C. Beadon to try and establish such a seminary in "the noble buildings of the Bethune School." Last year, after much correspondence all round, the Supreme Government declared its willingness to let each of the Presidency Governments spend Rs. 12,000 a-year for five years in starting a normal school at the Presidency capital. But the Bethune School Committee threw very cold water on the entire scheme. They opined that Miss Carpenter's projected reform began at the wrong end, that "the wives and mothers of educated zemindars and gentlemen" must first set the example to those below, that meanwhile no native lady of any social standing would voluntarily quit the zenana for the publicity of a training school, nor would such a one think of admitting low-caste teachers or female converts behind the purdah for the instruction of her little girls. In short, as they summed up, "a class does not exist, and cannot at present be called into existence, out of which the admitted want of trained native female teachers can be supplied." Moreover, if even the time were ripe for the experiment which the Government desired to make, the Committee were "clear and unanimous" in protesting against any attempt to engraft a training school on the Bethune Institution, because in the present state of native society "the means for teaching the young, and the means for training those who are to teach the young, should be separately provided for, and kept apart." Not satisfied with this view of the matter, the Lieutenant-governor took counsel with Messrs. Atkinson and Woodrow, of the Public Instruction Department. Both these gentlemen agreed in recommending the union of a Normal School for Hindoo women with the Bethune School under one head, as a measure which combined cheapness with efficiency. In accordance with their opinion the Bengal Government has finally given its sanction to a scheme for working the two institutions under one superintendent. If the experiment should belie the predictions of the Bethune Committee, we may hope to see its working extended, as Mr. Woodrow suggests, to Kishnaghur.

THE TIBETAN HIMALAYAS.

LITTLE by little we are beginning to make way in new fields of geographical knowledge, or, it may rather be, to unearth long-buried treasures of the knowledge that our ancestors won and lost. Under which of these heads should be classed the researches which Captain Montgomerie's Pundits lately pushed far into the highlands of Tibet, we are not prepared to say; but we hope that the fruits of their intelligent labours will live for centuries to come in print, and that further researches in the same direction will soon widen the boundaries of the knowledge for which we are indebted to those labours.

Captain Montgomerie's report of the work done by the three Pundits, whom he had trained especially for the purpose of exploring regions inaccessible to Europeans, is full of interest. Leaving Mussoorie on the 2nd May, 1867, they reached the Tibetan Frontier on the 3rd June. At the Mana Pass they had to wait for some time before the authorities would let them through. No traveller can enter Tibet until strict inquiry has been made into the sanitary and political condition of the country whence he comes. The inquiry in this case proving satisfactory, the travellers made their way over a pass 18,500 feet above the sea, spending their first night in one of those monasteries which Buddhism has sown so thickly over the land. At Totling, one of their halting places, they were lodged in a huge monastery a mile round, inhabited by only fifty or sixty monks. On their way thence to Gartok they crossed some vast plains, the haunts of antelopes, and came upon the Sutlej and the Indus water-shed. The former river was spanned by a suspension-bridge seventy-six feet across, made of strong iron links a foot long, and kept in excellent repair by frequent moistening with ghee. On the banks of the Indus they halted at a height of 16,650 feet above the sea, at a place named Phahala. Here the strangers were viewed with so much suspicion, that they had some difficulty in getting away. The gold-fields of Thok-Jalung next arrested their steps. At 16,330 feet above the sea level they found large camps of diggers, with their tents pitched in pits seven or eight feet below the surface of the ground. Over each field ruled a chief, subject in his turn to a common head, a commissioner who reported to the Lhasa authorities. The diggers smoke and drink tea all day long, consume any amount of butter and butter-milk, and sleep in the oddest posture imaginable, resting on their knees and elbows, the knees drawn towards the head, which supports itself on a kind of raised pillow, while all the clothing is piled upon the back. Such a position ought to "murder sleep," if habit were not indeed a second nature.

In spite of the piercing cold, the diggers prefer working in winter, on account of the advantage gained from the hard frozen ground. They extract the gold by washing away the excavated soil. One of the nuggets thus obtained before the Pundit's eyes weighed as much as seventy-five tolahs, or two pounds. These gold-fields stretch belt-like for miles along the northern water-shed of the Brahmapootra, and the gold is valued in the camps at something less than £3 an ounce. The diggings are jealously guarded by the Lhasa officials, who levy from each digger a yearly tax of two-fifths of an ounce of gold, and allow none but natives to engage in the work.

Under the guise of peaceful merchants laden with goods for sale, our travellers managed, often under great difficulties, increased by the greed of Tibetan officials, to carry out the main end of their mission. Observations taken by stealth at seventy-five different places enabled them, in the course of a journey of 850 miles, to map out some 18,000 square miles of country, to fix the position of eighty heights in the great Himalayan range, and to solve many questions connected with the great rivers that wander thence over the plains of Upper India. The course of the Upper Sutlej has been traced almost from its source to the British-Indian frontier. The eastern branch of the Upper Indus has been traced to its junction with the other from a point very near its source, and shown to have the best title to be called the parent stream of the river that flows past Attok and Hyderabad. They have also discovered for us new groups of mountains, one of which, towering eighty miles off in a long wall of snow, may be set down, thinks Captain Montgomerie, at twenty-four thousand feet high. Of the many passes traversed on the road two are reckoned at more than nineteen thousand feet above the sea level. The country explored by them is for the most part wild and thinly peopled, nearly destitute of good water, and affording nothing but pasturage for numerous flocks and herds.

THE NEW BISHOP OF BOMBAY.

ON the arrival at Bombay of a new Bishop in Dr. Douglas, we venture some remarks concerning the dioceses of India and their former representatives. If we except two or three notable examples of able Anglo-Indian bishops—such as Heber, Wilson, and Cotton—our Presidential episcopates have not been filled with the efficiency that might have been expected; and certainly neither Bombay nor Madras has enjoyed the services of the brightest ornaments of the Church. When the see of Calcutta was deprived by a lamentable accident of an excellent and amiable ministrant in Dr. Cotton, the nomination of Dr. Harding to the see met, we know, with considerable animadversion. The Indian Daily News observed, with reference to it:—"With the recollection of Dr. Cotton's admirable administration of the duties of his office, we could wish for a successor with more favourable antecedents than 'John of Bombay.' Such a successor, if permanent, would render the loss of Dr. Cotton doubly deplorable." The tenure of office of Dr. Harding proved only temporary; his lordship soon returned home to his Bombay diocese, and in October, 1866, retired from the latter bishopric, after having held it for about seventeen years.

The Bombay Presidency was not fortunate in its Episcopate; in parting with Dr. Harding it severed itself, as has been remarked, from a divine, who, however personally respected, was thought Pharisaical in the performance of his duties; at least we gather this from the animadversions of the Bombay press at the time of Dr. Harding's withdrawal from the See. His lordship is charged with an over-indulgence for a bishop in home-keeping tendencies and somewhat Sybaritic tastes. It is said that "John of Bombay," during his seventeen years' ministry in India, never did anything in the way of his duties to try a naturally robust constitution either by arduous "visitations" or excessive episcopal labour. He was certainly not addicted to going about preaching the Gospel in out-of-the-way places. The present Archbishop of Canterbury, when Bishop of London, was wont occasionally to gather his congregations around him in the open air before the portals of an East-end church; and the present Bishop has adopted the liberal practice of his predecessor. The late Bishop of Bombay never, we believe, evinced any such Evangelical turn of mind. Of course there is the excuse of the dessicating effects of an Indian clime on the European constitution to make on behalf of the latter. But the ex-Bishop is reputed to have avoided as much as possible the exposure of his frame to climatic extremes. It seems that he made a study of the art of taking care of oneself, and succeeded admirably in perfecting his knowledge of the Hygeian rules. He had a residence at the Mahabeshwur Sanitarium; and in his palatial abode at Mount Charlotte spent regularly the whole of the "hot season." The mean temperature at Mount Charlotte is about 76 degs. of Fahrenheit. He had a house at Poona in which his right reverence lived out the monsoon, the mean temperature here being about 70 deg. The "cold season" he divided between a visitation tour in the provinces and residence in Bombay, and the mean temperature of Bombay in the cold season is about 72 deg. Having then "existed" for seventeen years in a temperature more equable than, and quite as agreeable to the human frame as that of Italy, it is not wonderful that the right reverend gentleman should have been able to return home the perfect paragon of health he showed himself, notwithstanding his experiences had been those of an "old Indian."

But we have not yet quite finished our sketch of an Anglo-Indian bishop. An apposite illustration of our subject's easy-minded indifference to the affairs of his diocese is to be found in the state of education for European children at Bombay under the Episcopate. About a year before the departure of "John of Bombay" from the Cambayan shores, the community of the Presidency was shocked by the assertion that the only private schools for European children at Bombay were Roman Catholic schools; and that these schools were actually filled with Protestant children. Inquiry showed that this statement was literally true. The Bishop had been peregrinating for so many years among sanatoria and in nursing his bodily health, he had forgotten the spiritual welfare of the little children that he should have invited to come unto him in the plains below. However, to the honour and credit of the clergy of the diocese generally, he it stated that, ashamed at the lax condition of things ecclesiastical at Bombay, they proceeded to stir up their inactive and phlegmatic diocesan to a due comprehension of his shortcomings. Two or three miserable attempts to establish Christian schools in Bombay have since been made by the clergy and two or three so-called schools actually established. But when compared with the Roman Catholic schools already flourishing, they are found in every respect vastly inferior. For all practical purposes Protestant education in Bombay remains still a desideratum.

We draw the moral of the above story for the benefit of the new Bishop, if he thinks proper to accept it. "Muscular Christians" are out of favour in the Bombay diocese. Dr. Douglas is probably not such a person. The new Bishop, if he be capable of maintaining an outward deportment as respectable and externally agreeable as his predecessors, may on that account find admirers; but if with the suaviter in modo he possess not the fortiter in re, and the disposition to work at his ministry with some evangelical zeal and earnestness, he will not win the love and the respect of his Anglo-Indian flock. The remark applies, and we hope it may be taken in good part by several other new Bishops lately sent out to various of our Indian dependencies. We close with an extract from an article on the Indian Ecclesiastical Establishment, which appears in the Madras Times, and bears upon the Madras Establishment:—

The critical inquiry into the utility of sermons which has given our London contemporaries something to write about during the "illy" season, has served to remind the Anglo-Indian public of the painful shortcomings of their pastors. What the chaplains in the other Presidencies may be it is not in our power to decide, but it often seems to us that Madras is too frequently favoured with the "bad bargains" of the Indian Ecclesiastical Department. It is not too much to say that while all other branches of the Indian public service have in a greater or less degree marched with the times the Ecclesiastical has stood still if not retrograded. The salaries of the chaplains are on a liberal scale, their duties are absurdly light, their leave and pension rules are abundantly liberal. The feeling that the chaplains as a body stand in need of freshening up is almost general.

THE SOUTH MAHRATTA CAMPAIGN.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—It is never too late to perform an act of justice, otherwise I would not ask you to bring to notice, through your influential journal, the claims which the Field Force employed in the Southern Mahratta country in 1844-45 have for a medal. The troops serving in New Zealand since 1845 are about to have a medal issued to them, but the operations in which they took part were, in a military point of view, utterly insignificant when compared with those in which the troops were engaged in the Southern Mahratta country.

In addition to the fighting in the jungles and in the capture of stockades (planned with consummate skill by the Concan Mahrattas), the Force undertook several sieges of hill forts. In addition to the Siege Train, there were seven troops and batteries of Field Artillery engaged, besides a large force of infantry and cavalry, amounting in all to about twelve thousand men. The campaign lasted nine months, and the exposure and hardships encountered entailed a great mortality, in addition to the loss by the enemy.—Yours truly,

AN OFFICER.

Notices of Books.

A Dictionary of the Pushto or Afghan Language, &c. By Major H. G. Raverty. Second Edition, enlarged. Williams and Norgate. 1867.

A Grammar of the Pushto Language. Third Edition. By the same.

Selections from the Poetry of the Afghans, from the Sixteenth to the Nineteenth Century, literally Translated from the Original Pushto. By the same. New and Cheaper Edition.

Thesaurus of English and Hindustani Technical Terms. New and Cheaper Edition. By the same.

We are glad to see that Major Raverty's useful and well-digested works on the language of the Afghans have passed through more than one edition in eight years. The author had to overcome all the difficulties implied in the bringing out of these works at his own cost, unaided by public or private patronage, after many years of preliminary research carried on in the intervals of his professional labours. The Grammar and Dictionary, whose excellence is attested by such authorities as Dr. Sprenger, Dr. Bernhard Dorn, M. de Khanikoff, and other men of repute, ought to be of great service to all officers who have to deal with the Afghan and Pathan tribes of the North-West. Their value as acquisitions to modern philology is admitted by all who have any conversance with the subject. The Introduction to the Grammar seems full and carefully done, and goes far, we think, to settle the question of the Semitic origin of the Pushto. That the Afghans are essentially a Semitic race, of near kin to the Jew and the Arab, can hardly be doubted by any one who has noted their physical aspect; and their language, unless they had acquired a new one, ought therefore to belong to the same type. Whatever mixture it may contain of Aryan or Turanian words, its staple, we venture to believe, is purely Semitic. Of the Selections from Afghan Poetry Dr. Sprenger has spoken as being "so full that we may say it is the harvest of Afghan literature."

MOUNT ABOO AS A SANITARIUM.

The Friend of India cannot agree in the conclusion arrived at by the Bombay Government touching the removal of troops from Deesa to Mount Abou. It deprives us of the estimable advantage of having our Europeans quartered at a place beyond the reach of the hot winds, beyond the sultry climate of the monsoon, and heretofore beyond the range of the scourge of cholera. To what extent does malaria prevail at Abou? On referring to the reports of Dr. Moore, formerly in charge of the sanitarium, we find that the troops were quartered in barracks described as being situated in a "low valley overhung by hills, communicating with the lake by two ravines, through which the fog and miasma engendered by the water must be rolled by the frequently prevailing westerly wind, the ground beneath damp and marshy, and free perfilation from all sides impossible." Under such unfavourable circumstances, in five years, from 1857 to 1861, the ratio of admissions from fever during eight months of the year—i.e. from February to September—averaged 55 per thousand. The ratio for the months of January was 102 per thousand, and for the remaining three months more than double that again. The fever was not however of a dangerous type, for the ratio of deaths to fever admissions was only 1.5 to the thousand, whilst the mortality from all diseases was 20 per thousand of strength. From these statistics it seems clear that, by removing the troops from Abou for the winter months, we should secure one of the most healthy stations in India. The troops might without difficulty move into a standing camp on any suitable site about twelve miles from the foot of the hill. What is more invigorating than an Indian winter under canvas? The native troops from Deesa and Erinpore might also join the camp with advantage, so as to allow of brigade exercises. Indeed, the question would then fairly arise as to whether the two stations of Deesa and Erinpore might not be abolished, a central station for both garrisons being selected within one march of Abou. From a military point of view there can be no doubt as to the desirability of concentrating our forces, and there is no political consideration demanding the retention of Deesa and Erinpore. In suggesting, however, the removal of the troops from Abou during the winter—there being many reasons in favour of such a course—we do not wish it to be inferred that Abou cannot be rendered a healthy quarter for that period. Let the barracks be constructed on the outer slopes or crest of the hill, instead of in the crater, or at all events on elevated sites; let drainage be attended to, and we are confident that the malaria, if it can be so called, will disappear. The other objections raised against Abou—except that regarding beef which, however, a few years will remedy—may be urged with equal force against almost all other hill sanitarium, and are comparatively of a minor character.

NATIVE FEELING TOWARDS THE ENGLISH.

The Som Prakash maintains that it does not stand to reason that 90,000 Europeans could cope against twenty crores of Indians if they were of one will. No, the British rule does not rest on the strength of its Military resources; it is chiefly the nobleness and open-mindedness of the English which is their support. Is it not to the interest of the Natives that they should uphold such a Government? Whatever faults might be ascribed to the English, the Natives still believe them to be the most noble and just nation in the world. Should all the troops in India, both European and Native, rise in mutiny supported by Russia with four hundred thousand troops, yet India could not be wrested from the British power. Her subjects would rise with one mind and defend its rights or die in its cause. Since such is the state of the native mind, why still linger in doubt and suspicion? Let proper arms be placed in their hands and efficient Military leaders at their head, and in time of trouble their efficacy will be proved. There is one point, however, which must be borne in mind; the lowest caste does not always make the best soldier.

The Saptahik Sumbaud asserts that the feeling of the Bengalee is very unfavourable towards the English. It is owing solely to the faults of a few Indigo planters, wavering Government officials, and some of the lower classes of Europeans. These faults have not been simply noticed by native editors, but exaggerated and spread far and wide. This has only added fuel to the fire which burns in the heart of the Bengalee, who, thinking himself despised and ill-treated, permits bitter feelings against a whole race for the faults of a small fraction. Is this not a great piece of ingratitude against that Power which released them from the oppression of the Mahomedan, which has all along, and is at present, employing every means to improve their condition, both moral and intellectual? The editor therefore beseeches his brethren and contemporaries to cast aside this prejudice, and rather dwell upon the kindness and affection displayed by the multitude than magnify the defects of individuals.

HINDOO ENGLISH.

The Madras Times thinks that when we teach a native English of the sixteenth century we cut him off from the opportunities of improvement he would have enjoyed had we taught him English of the present day. We fail to introduce him to the great teachers of languages, current literature, and living conversation. The consequence is that he makes but little progress after leaving school. He finds that the English they taught him at school is not the English used by the people around him, and the chances are that he falls back more frequently than he would have done upon his native tongue. Our own experience shows us how seriously this evil operates. Day after day we receive letters from native correspondents couched in such English that it is almost impossible to discover their meaning, although the writers seem to have something worth saying. They are the strangest medleys of all the styles of English phraseology except the present. If one of the guests at the fancy-dress ball the other night had appeared in a suit of chain armour, with an Elizabethan ruff, a cavalier hat, and a Georgian pigtail, he would exactly have represented the kind of English that we teach the natives. As we have said, this is done by using old-fashioned text-books. The Spectator, that has been selected for the next examination of the Madras University, is not so far from the present style of language as that of some others that are used; but still the idioms of the English language have changed considerably since the days of Addison. We know that it is "a well of English pure and undefiled," but we must remember that in teaching natives we are not merely correcting the too familiar colloquialisms of the play-ground or the nursery. We are actually teaching the language to be used every day, and we know perfectly well that, however much we may admire Addison, we should not like our own sons and daughters to be unable to converse in the English of the present day. There can be no doubt that the practice of using the Bible in many schools as an English text-book is responsible for much of the old world tone of native English. In a large class of schools the pupils are drilled for an hour a day in the language of the Bible, and this forms their principal lesson in the use of the English tongue. The question has properly no religious aspect. We are simply inquiring for the best mode of teaching the natives the use of nineteenth century English, and certainly the use of a text-book written in the sixteenth and revised in the seventeenth century does not seem to supply it.

ZANZIBAR AND BAHREIN.

The Times of India finds it difficult to conceive a more chaotic state of things than that which prevails in the Persian Gulf. The policy which the Foreign-office desires to maintain is generally different from that which the India-office is disposed to favour. Take, for example, the Zanzibar case, or rather what should be called

HIS HIGHNESS THE NIZAM.

A brief telegram to hand yesterday announces an important political event—the decease of His Highness Afzal-ood-Dowlah, the Nizam of the Hyderabad State. This event occurred on the 26th ult. The deceased Sovereign, who ascended the musnud in May, 1857, was only about forty-four years of age, and it is much to be feared that the close seclusion and comparative inaction in which he has lived of late years have had something to do with shortening the days of one whose personal appearance and physical characteristics gave promise of the average three score and ten. At the time of his accession he was described as “Six feet two or three in height; stout and strong in proportion. He rides well, is fond of out-door amusement, shooting, &c.” The reign of his father, the Nizam Nasir-oo-Dowlah, extended over nearly thirty years. How far the luxurious retirement in which the late Nizam has lived since the second or third year of his short reign was induced by the temptations to passive indulgence that often beset Mussulman Sovereigns, and how far his withdrawal from active affairs was excused to himself by the consciousness of the financial and political injustice by which the alliance of the Hyderabad State with the British Government has been clogged, are questions that need not be discussed until fuller information is forthcoming. Happily a change has gradually come over our relationship with the Nizam, and for two years past the public accounts have acknowledged that the whole “surplus” revenues of that State are not predestined to be thrown into the cauldron of Calcutta patronage.

At a critical moment like this the Indian Empire will receive the full benefit of such just and enlightened policy, and there should be full acknowledgment of the services rendered by the late Nizam at an incomparably more perilous period than the present. At the very moment when he was installed as Sovereign the excitable and warlike population of his kingdom were receiving exaggerated reports of the dire peril to which the British Sircar was exposed in Hindostan, while the fact that Delhi had fallen again to the ancient Moghul line of which the Nizams were originally but the Soubadars or deputies, was sufficient to have shaken the fidelity of many men far above the Rohilla and Arab mob leaders. But there was never, that we have heard, the slightest doubt of the Nizam's firm attachment to our alliance throughout all the anxious months of May 1857 to July 1858. Doubtless this descendant of the Tartar conquerors was upheld in this wise policy by his sagacious Arabian counsellor, Sir Salar Jung; but the Nizam, as absolute sovereign, could have set that Minister aside, and had he raised the Crescent the tide of blood-red war would have rolled over the whole of Southern India. It was, by no means, a matter of course that the Nizam remained firm at that time, for his personal faithfulness was exposed to severe trial. That excellent man, the late Colonel Davidson, then Resident, though he cherished confidence in the sovereign of Hyderabad, and encouraged him by showing that confidence, took precautionary measures for his assurance and that of Government. He wrote in reply to the Supreme Government:—“I have caused the Nizam to be narrowly watched from quarters and in ways he little suspected, and although emissaries (from the mutineers) have come to him, he has, after listening to their stories, refused complicity in any movement against the British Government.” The Supreme Government promptly acknowledged the services of the Nizam; in a formal letter dated February, 1869, the Governor-General thanked him for “the zeal and constancy with which he had adhered to the long-established friendship between the two Governments.” In July, 1860, the Viceroy presented His Highness with British manufactures to the value of one lakh of rupees; the lapsed principality of Shikarpore was made over to the Hyderabad State, and the Nizam's own districts of Raichore and Daraseo were restored to him, besides fifty lakhs of the accumulating debit on account of the Contingent, &c., were cancelled. The Order of the Star of India was constituted in June, 1861, and in July His Highness received a khureeta from the Viceroy with a grant under her Majesty's sign manual, signifying his admission into the first rank of the “Most Exalted Order;” his installation in full durbar being carried out by the Resident in the November following amidst much pomp and many lively assurances by the Nizam of his appreciation of the honour.—Times of India, March 6.

STATION TALK.

MOOLTAN, Feb. 20.—Colonel Cripps, our Commissioner, leaves with his family for England on the 26th of this month, but the name of his successor has not transpired as yet. A farewell dinner was given to him by the civil officers a few days since, to which some of the military were also invited. Speeches were made and healths were drunk, and all vied in doing honour to the guest of the evening. Captain Beadon, who has been Cantonment Magistrate here for the last four years, has been removed to Kussowlie as Assistant Commissioner of the First Class. His duties are now being performed by Captain A. J. Birch, of the 15th Bengal Cavalry, and a very popular and energetic cantonment magistrate he makes too. This officer has repeatedly officiated in this post, and it was supposed that he would now have been permanently appointed as Captain Beadon's successor; but I hear that he is again likely to be disappointed, as Captain Ramsay is expected to arrive and take up the Cantonment Magistracy in the course of a few weeks. If he gives as much satisfaction as the present officiating incumbent, we shall indeed be fortunate. Certainly the change for the better with everything connected with the Sudder Bazaar which has come over it since Captain Birch assumed charge is very remarkable. We have been blessed with gentle refreshing showers off and on during the last fortnight, and the price of grain is lessening daily. Numbers of emigrants from Bikaner are however being still daily fed and supported by the charity of the European residents, but chiefly women and children.

“The case of the Zanzibar subsidy,” regarding which, at the end of last year, there was an Arab mission in London. The Sultan was very desirous to get rid of the awkward necessity of paying the 40,000 dollars, due by him annually to Muscat, in accordance with the terms of the British arbitration. Of course the good faith of the Government of India was concerned in the upholding of this award. But the Foreign-office cared nothing about this; that department cared only about the slave trade; and the Sultan of Zanzibar said that he could not forego the revenue derived from that traffic, whilst he was compelled to pay the subsidy to Muscat. “If that be so,” said F. O., “let us release him from the subsidy.” “How can we,” said I. O., “when the good faith of the Indian Government which made the award is at stake?” “But the slave trade is a very important business!” says F. O., “the people of England desire its suppression.” “Then,” says I. O., “let the people of England pay for its suppression.” “Oh!” returns F. O., “the Lords of the Treasury will see you ——— first.” This, in unofficial language, is very much the state of the case. It happens that at present, the Agent and Consul at Zanzibar, is a Foreign-office man, who has slipped, by an exchange with Colonel Playfair, into an office which has hitherto been held only by Indian officers, and so he is more disposed to advocate the views of the Imperial than of the Indian Government. Coming from the Consular service, he is not likely to understand the Indian view of the question or to have very much respect for the views of the Indian authorities. So here, of course, there is difficulty. The slave trade goes on as of old, and at every change at the head of the Government of Muscat there is a fresh protest from Zanzibar against the payment of the subsidy. Then, to take another instance, of the conflicts with which our Governments have ever to contend. Colonel Pelly and Mr. Alison are continually coming into collision. Not long ago there was some trouble about Bunder Abbas, and now the eternal Bahrein question is cropping up again. Colonel Pelly, under sufficient provocation lets fly at the Bahrein chief, and Persia is beyond measure indignant. The Government of the Shah protest against the proceedings to Mr. Alison; Mr. Alison protests to the Foreign-office; and we may be pretty sure that the Persian Minister at home also protests on behalf of his master at Teheran. With extraordinary tenacity, Persia clings to the belief, or at least to the assertion, that Bahrein is a dependency of her own. England has never acknowledged this, and, therefore, treats the misdeeds of the chief without any reference to the Government of the Shah. The chief himself, when he gets into trouble, is fain to hoist the Persian flag; but as soon as he is out of trouble he pulls it down, and by no means admits (when not convenient to him) that he is a Persian subject. But the Shah claims his rights and privileges, and is offended if we take the law into our own hands. The Foreign-office, of course, wishes to keep things quiet. The Bahrein question is a standing difficulty, and there is always a strong desire that nothing should happen to bring it “to the fore.” The Indian Government approves Colonel Pelly's proceedings, and the India-office is naturally disposed to support the Bombay Government and the Governor-general, and so, as generally happens in such cases, nothing is done to declare a definite policy and to prevent the recurrence of similar complications. The Bahrein question remains where it was. Now, we see no remedy for all this, except a determination on the part of her Majesty's Government to place the entire management of all the affairs of these outlying parts with which India must necessarily have some connection, under one undivided authority; that is to say, let all the officers employed in Persia, in Turkish Arabia, in the Gulf, or at Zanzibar, be under one central authority. Let the Foreign-office take the whole business in hand, or let the India-office have the undivided responsibility. Our own opinion is that the Indian Governments, and those at home who have been connected with the Indian Governments, must be much better judges of what is best to be done in an emergency than the secretaries and senior clerks of the Foreign office, who are saturated with European ideas. Are there any three men who knew more about these things than Sir Henry Rawlinson, Sir George Clerk, and Sir Bartle Frere? What can Lord Clarendon, Mr. Hammond, and Mr. Otway know in comparison with such experienced authorities as these?

OFFICERS LATE WITH THE HAZARA FIELD FORCE.—The undermentioned public officers joined the Hazara field force and returned to departmental duty on the dates specified below:—Lieut. Holmes, executive engineer, 2nd grade, Punjab, joined Aug. 14, 1868, returned Oct. 27, 1868. Lieut. Rowcroft, executive engineer, 4th grade, Punjab, joined Sept. 1, 1868, returned Oct. 15, 1868. Lieut. Broadfoot, executive engineer, 4th grade, Punjab, joined Aug. 18, 1868, returned Oct. 22, 1868. Lieut. Armstrong, assistant engineer, 1st grade, Punjab, joined Aug. 13, 1868, returned Nov. 4, 1868.

ADJUTANTS OF NATIVE REGIMENTS.—In order to prevent any misapprehension as to the intention of the Government of India and the Right Hon. the Secretary of State as expressed in G.G.O. No. 897, dated Oct. 25, 1866, the Right Hon. the Governor-general in Council is pleased to notify that, as the main object in view in permitting an adjutant of a native regiment to retain that appointment after his promotion to the rank of captain, if specially recommended, was to secure to the corps the continued benefit of his experience and knowledge of the men, the appointment must be vacated by an officer so situated if he proceeds on furlough, whether in or out of India.

DINAPORE, Feb. 20.—A domiciliary visit was paid last week to one of our principal shopkeepers in the Sudder Bazaar suspected of holding treasonable intercourse with the Patna Wahabees. I saw a posse of police posted outside the house, while another gang was overhauling the premises; but whether anything in the shape of papers connected with these Mahomedan propagandists, or likely to throw a light upon their recent doings was discovered, I am at present unable to say. The house of a faithful follower of the Prophet was subjected to a similar process at the time the trials in connection with the great Wahabee conspiracy took place, for which one of the fraternity paid with his life on the gallows, when, if report speaks true, his career as a dealer in Rodgers's penknives, China-ware, overland paper, Windsor soap, ladies' stockings, and bandoline would have been for ever cut short, had not an unusually large supply of palm oil just then in store enabled him to grease the hands of the myrmidons of the law, who, softened by that grateful emollient let, it is said, slip through their fingers any papers that might have compromised their owner, seizing only such as were strictly en regle, or referred to business matters. Amongst official changes I have to mention the transfer of our deservedly popular Commissariat officer, Lieutenant-Colonel Wroughton, who leaves to-morrow for Gwalior, being relieved by Major Taylor from Kussowlie, and the departure for Europe of Major Cochrane, v.c., Major of Brigade. The former officer, during a term of office extending over more than three years, through his urbanity and kindness of manner, has won for himself the esteem and respect of all classes of the community with whom, either officially or socially, he came in connection. Major Cochrane's term of service on the Staff having expired he goes home on furlough, carrying with him the best wishes of his many friends and acquaintances, who hope to see him soon filling an important position in his regiment, the 7th Royal Fusiliers. I cannot say who will succeed Major Cochrane as Brigade Major. Lady Mansfield, first in the flight, passed through here yesterday, on her way to Simla, partaking of tiffin in the traffic manager's office. Her ladyship was waited upon by Major-General Bouchier, commanding at Dinapore. Weather getting warmer every day, and solar topees coming again to the fore.

ALLAHABAD, Feb. 22.—The office of the Controller of Accounts, Public Works Department, is positively to be shifted to Allahabad next month, much to the disgust of those concerned. The change is a matter of pecuniary loss to the employes of the office; but bad as that is it is not the worst. The question is, where are they to find shelter when they do go to Allahabad? And this is a most serious question, and one well worthy the attention of the Government, who insists on the office being moved so prematurely. Many of the clerks in the office will have to put up with any accommodation they may be fortunate enough to secure, and some of them will probably have to pass the hot weather in tents, which is likely to cause illness, if not death; and who's to blame? Is it absolutely necessary that the office should at once go to Allahabad, or is the removal merely the whim of an official who cannot feel any inconvenience by it, and who will gain but little, indeed nothing, compared with the great inconvenience and loss which others suffer?—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

HYDERABAD, DECCAN, Feb. 28.—The telegraph will have conveyed to you the melancholy intelligence of the death of his Highness the Nizam of Hyderabad. Afzool-ood-Dowlah expired on Friday morning last, at about ten o'clock A.M., and was buried that night at eleven P.M. Considerable excitement prevailed for a while; but the formal recognition by the British resident of the heir to the throne, Meer Myboot Ally Khan, quieted all parties, and in due course the arrival of the official note from the Resident, conveying an intimation to the above effect, was proclaimed by beat of tom tom throughout the city bazaars. On Saturday the Minister, accompanied by the head of the Shums-ool-Oomrah family, the Ameer Kubbeer, and the son-in-law (Koorshud Jah) of the late Nizam, went to the Residency, remaining there upwards of three hours, in conference with the Resident, who had assembled the whole of his staff on the occasion. The next day the Resident paid a visit of condolence to the young Prince, who is only two and a-half years old, and the party were all loud in their praises of the personal beauty of the boy. I must inform you that the Resident on the occasion sat on a chair, and kept his shoes on, as also did the staff, and therefore I presume that the humiliating and objectionable practice of former years will now for ever be discontinued. Mr. Saunders is much to be congratulated on having effected this measure. Of the general arrangements for conducting the administration during a long minority I am not in a position to tell you fully at present, but rumour says that Sir Salar Jung and the Ameer Kubbeer will be at the head of the Government, while the former will carry on the executive duties as before. This measure I consider to be highly advantageous for this Government, and I should think that at Calcutta the authorities will be well pleased at the policy to be pursued here under this arrangement as regards the Ministry; it has proved successful hitherto, and, with God's blessing, I trust it may do so hereafter.

MARCH 1.—I missed the post last night, and I therefore open my letter again to give you the particulars attending the installation of the youthful Nizam. This day a party of twenty-four assembled at the Residency, and accompanied Mr. Saunders to the Minister's, where they left their carriages and mounted on elephants, and thus proceeded in procession to the palace, where, on dismounting, they were met by an official from the Nizam's durbar. In the interior court the Minister and other nobles met Mr. Saunders, who, after the usual salutations, passed into the palace. Then the Resident was met by his Highness the Nizam, borne in the arms of one of the Royal nurses, and taking the little fellow's hand he led him forward to the musnud, upon which he placed him, while such of the gentlemen as could secure seats deposited themselves upon them. The confusion and noise were great. The Resident, however, congratulated the boy on his accession, and expressed a hope that the friendship which had existed between the two Governments might long continue. The Minister returned thanks much to the same purpose, and after the customary distribution of utter and pawn, the Resident and Staff returned to the Residency. The demeanour of the crowd was perfectly respectful, and I have no apprehension of any further excitement here.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

DIVORCE BILL.—The Indian Divorce Bill was passed on Friday, the 26th February, and becomes law on the 1st April.

PESHAWUR RAILWAY.—The railway from Lahore to Peshawur is to be styled the Punjab Northern (State) Railway.

GENERAL A. BECHER.—It is stated that General A. Becher will leave Umballa on the 10th of March, and sail from Bombay for England in the steamer of the 3rd of April.

ART SHOW AT SIMLAH.—So successful was the Fine Arts Exhibition at Simlah last year that the promoters of it feel encouraged to hold one annually. A like Exhibition will be held in September next.

APPOINTMENTS.—Major J. Bristow, Deputy-Commissioner of Jhelum, will be Resident in Kashmir during next hot season.—Mr. Alonzo Money, c.b., of the Board of Revenue, has been appointed a member of the Legislative Council of Bengal.

ARCHITECTURAL.—A small party of Sappers have been placed at the disposal of the Punjab Government, for the purpose of making excavations in search of architectural remains in the Eusufzai country.

1ST PUNJAB RIFLES.—Lieutenant-Colonel H. W. H. Coxé has been appointed Commandant of the 1st Punjab Rifle Corps and Punjab Light Horse (Volunteers), in succession to the late Mr. A. A. Roberts, c.b., c.s.i.

PROPOSED DURBAR.—It is said that the present intention of the Governor-General is to hold a grand durbar at Agra in November, in honour of H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh. General Neville Chamberlain will accompany his Royal Highness through India.

MAJOR ADEY.—We are sorry to learn that Major Adey, Commandant of the 2nd Infantry Hyderabad Contingent, is shortly to leave his fine regiment. Having been for some time past in indifferent health, he is about to leave for England on medical certificate.

INDIAN CHAPLAINS.—The Secretary of State has declined to accede to the prayer of a memorial submitted by certain chaplains on the Indian Establishment, that they may be permitted to retire on a full pension after a service of fifteen years.

THE STUD COMMITTEE.—It is stated that the sittings of the Stud Committee, of which General Colin Troup, c.b., is president, are concluded, and that its report will not be out until the middle of the hot season.

OFFICIAL.—Mr. W. J. Bramly, officiating Judge of Allygurh, has been appointed to officiate in the same capacity at Mirzapore. Mr. G. N. Cheke, Civil Surgeon of Goruckpore, has been appointed to be Civil Surgeon of Cawnpore. Mr. J. H. Prinsep is appointed to officiate at Mainpore for Mr. Colvin, gone home on leave.

REWARD FOR COURAGE.—We learn from the last Punjab Gazette that the Hon. the Lieutenant-Governor has been pleased to grant a reward of Rs. 500, together with a presentation sword, to Mr. G. R. Scott, Assistant Surveyor, attached to the North-West Frontier Revenue Survey, as an acknowledgment of his gallant conduct when attacked by a body of the Allai tribe on the Hazara border in August last.

SHERE ALI'S PROGRESS.—Among the preparations in progress at Umballa for the meeting of the Viceroy and the Ameer of Afghanistan is the digging of fifty new wells, so that there may be no lack of water for the mighty following by which both these great men will be attended.

GWALIOR.—Lieutenant-Colonel Horne, of the 103rd Foot, is engaged in taking photographs of ancient buildings in the vicinity of Gwalior. It is expected that the work will occupy two months, and Colonel Horne has been permitted to draw an allowance of Rs. 5 a day during that period.

GENERAL FORDYCE.—We (Pioneer) were somewhat premature in stating that General Fordyce would succeed General Beatson in command of the Allahabad Division on the latter officer being transferred to the Sirhind command. General Fordyce has, we understand, no wish to leave the Presidency Division, and will, therefore, not be disturbed in any transfer of command which may be made.

PESHAWUR.—Letters from Peshawur mention that the Mountain Battery there had received orders to move out against the Bezotees, the tribe with which we had to deal last year, and that has never ceased annoying us since. We may look upon this as the beginning of another "military promenade." Major-General Haly had left Peshawur, and was on a tour of inspection at Rawul Pindie, where the headquarters of his division will be located from the 1st instant. From thence he proceeds towards Jhelum and Sealkote. The former place has been created an outpost of the Sealkote Commissariat Division.

SUPERSTITION.—The Bharut Runjun states, as a fact, that whenever natives have occasion to count the members of a household, or the guests at a feast, they are always careful to add the formula, "I have been counting not men but crows." This is very little more absurd than our lingering superstition about thirteen at table. The Bharut Runjun declares that natives in Bengal are still firmly persuaded that taking a census increases the mortality of a country. This notion must make accuracy in the census operations more difficult, but, with the story of Joab and David before us, we must use forbearance in exposing it.

AN INTERESTING QUERY.—In the last volume of records, published by the Records Commission in Calcutta, appears a marriage notice to the effect that on the tenth day of a certain month in the year 1810, Richmond Thackeray, Esq., of the Hon. Company's Civil Service, was married in Calcutta to Miss Arme Becher. The Madras Mail fancies these were the parents of the great novelist, and asks, if this is the same Thackeray who assisted Munro in settling the Ceded Districts, and who was stationed for some years at Adoni, in Bellary? Perhaps some lover of Notes and Queries can say. It is worth deciding whether the author of "Vanity Fair" was or was not a Madrassee.

CANTONMENT CONSERVANCY.—In consequence of the troops at a certain station having suffered in a most unusual manner during the last rains from sickness of a bad type, owing, as appeared from an investigation, to the grossest neglect on the part of the local authorities, with reference to drainage and conservancy matters, Sir William Mansfield, we learn, has considered it necessary to request all generals of divisions and districts to pay the most careful attention to those points on their inspections, as he considers them to be of far more importance than those treated of in the ordinary regimental inspection reports. Any deficiencies in the above matters are to be immediately notified to the Commander-in-Chief, together with the names of the military and medical officers on whom rests the responsibility for such neglect.

A BHISTY'S PETITION.—Even that most necessary but humble adjunct to our comfort, the Bhistie, has got something to complain of. The following petition from one of the craft to a gentleman in Chowringhee is bona fide:—"To —, Esq. Sir,—I submission beg leave to request your honour I take great trouble for bring water from Loudon-street. For the 2 horse 4 musquitoe daily. For the washing carriage 2 do. for 3 times do. For the servants drink 2 do. water do. For the cook-room 5 do. do. For the clearing gutter 1 do. do. For the drink water for you 1 do. do. For the washing body for you and madam 4 do. do. For throw water on the ground 1 do. do. Is not support for 6 Rs. salary, I hope will you kindly increase my salary, and I hope will you kindly support me with my family.—I am, Sir, your most obedient servant, BUCKSOO, Bhisty. Calcutta, the 5th February, 1869.—Englishman."

BENGAL POLICE.—In June, 1867, the Government of India sanctioned, on the application of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, a scheme for the re-organisation of the Detective department of the Bengal police. Sanction was accorded for one year as an experimental measure, subject to report at the end of that period on the working of the system. The report was recently submitted, and, in the Lieutenant-Governor's opinion, was so satisfactory as to justify the permanent retention of the establishment on a modified scale. This the Government of India has agreed to, in consideration of the success which is shown to have attended the operations of the department in dealing with organised crime, and the expressed opinion of the Lieutenant-Governor that it should be retained as a separate branch of the service, conditionally on no increase being caused to the present total expenditure on the Bengal police.

GOLD IN SINGBHOOM.—The "Records of the Geological Survey of India" contain an article on the occurrence of gold in the Singbhoom district. It appears that a limited number of gold washers, very lazy, it is true, and working with wasteful implements, can just reckon on a bare livelihood from their vocation. The daily yield of gold per man varies from three to twelve annas, but averages little more than the smaller sum. The gold washers almost without exception are in the power of Mahajuns, for whom they work on bare subsistence allowance, being never able to free themselves from claims on account of advances.

A COMMISSION FROM THE UNITED STATES.—Such is the value attached by the United States' Government to improvements in cultivation, that they have despatched two Special Commissioners, the Hon. Charles D. Paston and Colonel Grant, to investigate the systems prevailing in the most carefully cultivated countries in the world, China and Japan, and to inspect the great irrigation works of India. These gentlemen have arrived at Calcutta, where they at once, with characteristic energy, set about gathering whatever information was likely to assist them to carry out the object they had in view. They were introduced by the Vice Consul General of the United States to the Foreign Secretary, and that gentleman at once obtained for them an interview with his Excellency the Viceroy. The Viceroy has directed that all respect and attention shall be shown to them on their tour through India, and that every facility shall be afforded them towards furthering the object of their inquiries. Letters have been written to Sir William Muir and other high officials on the subject. The Special Commissioners left Calcutta for Benares on the 21st ultimo, and intend, after visiting Roorkee and the head works of the Ganges Canal, to proceed on to Bombay.

THE FRENCH MISSIONARIES IN THIBET.—For some time past the British Government have been endeavouring to communicate with certain French Roman Catholic Missionaries in Thibet, who have experienced very harsh treatment from the local authorities there. One of the routes chosen for sending letters to these unfortunate gentlemen was through Assam. The Deputy Commissioner of Luckimpoore despatched some messengers belonging to the Mishmee tribe in December, 1867, but the men were unable to proceed beyond fifteen days' journey from Suddyah, the frontier town of Upper Assam, owing to the depth of the snow. They therefore returned without accomplishing their object. We now learn that the men again left Suddyah in the middle of last year, and penetrated as far as Jujja, a village in the Lama country, about sixteen marches distant from the border. There they were stopped by the headman, who took charge of the letter of which they were the bearers, and promised to deliver it personally at its destination. The Deputy Commissioner thinks there may be difficulties in the way of the letter reaching its destination, but intimates that the messengers are ready to retrace their steps if necessary. The Bengal Government has ordered the employment of more than one party, as better calculated to effect the object in view, and this proceeding has met with the approval of the Government of India.

DISTRESS IN THE PUNJAB.—Distress is still severely felt in some districts of the Punjab. Four deaths from starvation are reported to have occurred in the village of Assoundh, in the Kurnal district. Chumars and the poor of other castes are said "to have been living on the dead bodies of the cattle, which have been dying in great numbers." Thus reported Mr. Purser, the Assistant Commissioner, on the 16th February, and his report is borne out by the fact that 4,550 persons had to be relieved during the previous week. In Sirsa also the distress is very severe, and is certainly not decreasing, as will appear from the monthly returns of persons who have obtained gratuitous relief. These numbers stand as follows:—October, 1868, 5,798; November, 1868, 17,698; December, 1868, 33,813; January, 1869, 40,715. From the 1st to the 6th February 9,445 persons had obtained relief—a considerable increase even on the average of the preceding month. Rohtuk has the same dismal tale to tell. In December 54,334 persons sought relief, but the number swelled in January to no less than 150,102. From other districts the reports are of a more cheering nature. In Umballa "there is still some distress among the non-agricultural classes and the immigrants from Rajpootana." In Hoshiarpore relief works are declared to be quite unnecessary, and the Government contractor complains that he cannot obtain labourers at two annas a day, or even on advances—a certain proof that there can be no great distress in the district.—Pioneer.

STRANGE, IF TRUE.—A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette repeats the following story:—Rewards for the destruction of wolves in those districts in which they have proved inimical to human life are to be increased, in the hope of checking the ravages of these brutes, who seem to have a preference for women and children, as such game, to them, offer less resistance when attacked. I give you the following anecdote on the word of a shikaree. He had gone out hunting and came across a pack of wolves, apparently very busy at a certain spot in the jungles, and he crept as close as practicable to watch their doings. Coming within fair view of them, he observed a huge wolf stretched out on the ground and the others covering him with leaves, which they were filching from some bushes at a distance. After concealing the animal with these leaves some scattered to the right and some to the left of him, while another lot went off at a swinging trot windward of him, and in the course of half-an-hour was seen a deer, apparently being moved onward from fear of some danger behind, which eventually proved to be the third lot of the pack, who seemed to be urging on the deer to the spot where the leaves heaped up. Unfortunately, when the deer had got up to within a short distance of this spot, the concealed wolf must have stirred and have given the alarm to the deer, which bounded away in lead of the pack behind and passed within a few yards of the shikaree. To the astonishment of the hunter, he found that none of the wolves had given the deer chase, but on looking round he found the pack had closed on the trap-wolf from all sides, and in a short time devoured him, leaving only his head on the field. The shikaree's story may not be quite correct; but I know of wolves doing more astonishing things even in this country, while the wolves of Russia are noted for their cunning.

THE KOHAT FRONTIER.—The real facts of the late Bezootie raid are, the Pioneer avouches, substantially as follows:—The post in question is a police watch-tower, capable of affording shelter and protection to a few frontier watchmen. At the time of the "attack" there were four policemen in it on such duty. They were on its upper story, ingress to which was through an aperture in the roof. They all went to sleep, and a scout or prowler from across the border, perceiving this, brought sharply but noiselessly down on the post, and down through its roof, several stout fellows of his clan—which is one of the many branches of the numerous Ourukzye tribe—who did their work effectively, killing one policeman and bearing off the three others, in the hope doubtless of their being ransomed. The heads of the Ourukzye tribe—which while numerous and powerful, have for a long time been friendly and well-conducted—have been warned that, unless they secure and hand over to the frontier authorities the offenders in this case, they must expect us to return their visit in an unpleasant fashion. The Times of India learns that the above outrage "has been avenged by one of the most dashing affairs attempted on the frontier for many years." On the night of Feb. 24th a party of 400 men of the Kohat garrison, under command of Lieut.-Col. Keyes, accompanied by Captain Cavanagh, officiating Deputy Commissioner, made a rapid raid into the Bezootie and Ootmankheyl Hills. The nearest of the Bezootie villages was surprised, some cattle plundered, and the enemy punished. The troops returned to Kohat the next day, having sustained a loss of two killed and twenty-five wounded.

CACHAR CAMPAIGN.—A correspondent in Cachar, whose letter is dated the 21st February, sends the following to the Englishman:—"I suppose we are fairly in for the 'little war' against the Loshais. General Nuthall left Cachar on the 17th for Jalnacher, taking with him the 44th (Goorkhas). The season is very far advanced for such an expedition. I hope they may not suffer much. Cholera had been amongst them before they left Cachar, some fatal cases I have been informed. If the Goorkhas, however, display the same willing alacrity as they have hitherto done, I trust they may be enabled to get back to the hills before the excessive hot weather sets in. If they are detained in the unhealthy plains, to which they are so unaccustomed, there will be great mortality. The heat down here is already very trying." The following intelligence has been received by the Bengal Government from Cachar:—"The Infantry of the West column marched to Jalnacher, its base, on the 18th February, where it was to be joined by half of the Eurasian Battery. This column was to be under the immediate command of Brigadier-General Nuthall, who was to ride out and overtake it on the 21st February. The east column, with half of the Eurasian Battery, was to march from Cachar on the 21st. This column was to be commanded by Major Stephenson, 7th Native Infantry. Colonel Nelson remains in command at Cachar." The very latest news from the Eastern Frontier is that the troops have not yet reached the Kookie valley. They have been delayed by the Brigadier waiting for artillery, though that artillery should be actually needed in an expedition against naked, half-armed savages seems a wonder. In the meantime, the party of police who started independently to make a feint have, as the police did during the Bhootan campaign, far outstripped the military, and have been heard of within a few marches of the villages of the chief Sookpelall, who is at the bottom of the raids. Other chiefs have sent in envoys with presents, and declared their innocence in the matter of the raids.—Pioneer.

Madras.

DOVETON COLLEGE.—The Rev. Charles Cooper, M.A., the newly-appointed head master of the Doveton College, arrived by the Sindia on the 26th Feb., and took up his duties at once.

OFFICIAL.—It is said that Colonel Silver is going home from Madras on leave, and that Colonel Colin Mackenzie is likely to get the acting appointment at the Army Clothing Office.

THE REV. MR. GORTON, Garrison Chaplain at Madras, is expected shortly to proceed to England on account of ill-health, which has been accompanied by deafness.

A NEW CHURCH.—The foundation stone of a church for the native congregation worshipping at St. Andrew's, Madras, was laid on the 24th ult., by the Right Honourable the Governor on a piece of ground adjoining the Friend-in-Need Society's workshop. The church is called by a portion of the Madras press the Native Scotch Church. Who are the Native Scotch?

PURLOINING OF EXAMINATION PAPERS.—Cases of dishonestly obtaining examination papers have occurred frequently of late in different parts of India. A Madras contemporary mentions "that in order to prevent any surreptitious possession of information regarding the questions to be submitted to the candidates for the general test re-examination, which takes place to-morrow (26th Feb.) and the day after, two mounted police officers have been ordered to be on duty at the Government Gazette Press this day to use the utmost vigilance in preventing all outside communication between the printing staff and shabby candidates."

COORG.—We learn from Coorg that there have been many dangerous jungle fires lately in different parts of the province, and that some estates in the hot and dry districts have suffered from them. One property in particular is said to have been altogether destroyed. The superintendent of Coorg recently sent round a notice to all the planters informing them that two maistries, Madah and Goondah, were alleged to have been murdered between Hoonsoor and Bellikerry by a gang of thugs or professional poisoners, whose head quarters have been discovered at Mysore, and it was requested that all information regarding the estate to which they belonged and the month and date on which they left, might be furnished to the superintendent. The public were also warned that the members of the gang waylay the coolies from Coorg and from Wynad and decoy them into partaking food prepared by them, in which soporific or poisonous drugs are mixed. Proprietors and superintendents of estates were asked to be good enough to make these facts widely known amongst their coolies.—Madras Times.

SUICIDE OF A NAVAL SURGEON.—The Madras Mail of Feb. 24 says:—The Walmer Castle arrived in the Madras Roads this morning from Calcutta, and the captain reports that the surgeon of the ship, Dr. Hearl, who was engaged to proceed in medical charge of emigrants to Demerara, committed suicide four days after the ship left Calcutta. It appears that the deceased attempted first to poison himself by prussic acid, but was saved by a strong antidote. After this the captain had a strict watch kept upon Dr. Hearl's movements, who professed to be very sorry for what he had done, and declared he would never attempt suicide again. The watch was not relaxed, but about two minutes after the captain left Dr. Hearl on the morning of the 16th inst., the unfortunate man seized a surgical instrument and stabbed himself in several places. He died in a very few minutes. The Walmer Castle was obliged to come here for the purpose of procuring another doctor to proceed in charge of the emigrants. The doctor of the ship Clarence, another of Messrs. Green's vessels, was, on being recommended to Mr. Hunter Blair, protector of emigrants, ordered to take up the office. Another doctor will be engaged in his stead for the Clarence.

THE GAGGING ACT OF 1857.—The Madras Mail reprints as a legislative curiosity the "Indian Press Gagging Act" passed nearly twelve years ago, and calls up the following reminiscences of the time of its enactment:—On the 25th of June the Friend of India published a leading article headed "The Centenary of Plassey," which the Governor-general in Council considered "fraught with mischief and calculated at the present time to spread disaffection towards the British Government, both among its native subjects and among dependent and allied States," and accordingly the printers of the Friend were "warned." The Madras Athenæum was "warned," and the Bangalore Herald "suppressed" for reprinting the article (before the Government notification appeared)—and the latter journal was only allowed to reappear on condition of the editor being dismissed. On the 3rd of July, the Friend was again "warned," as was the Dacca News on the 10th of August; and on the 18th of September the Bengal Hurkaru, the oldest journal in India, was suppressed. On the 23rd of the same month the Bombay Government warned the editors of English and native newspapers against extracting an article from the London Press. The Madras Examiner was threatened on the 10th of August for reprinting a paragraph that had originally appeared in the Hurkaru to the effect that, "the Madras Government had recommended to the Supreme Government the immediate removal of Doctor Balfour from the Government Agency at Chepauk, for alleged acts of oppression." The Government stifled criticism for a time in Indian journals, but found itself powerless to cope with the criticisms from Indian pens that appeared so profusely in London papers. Thus, in the long run, the (Gagging Act notwithstanding) truth prevailed, and Indian public opinion had its say in the world.

NATIVE FEMALE EDUCATION IN MADRAS.—Native female education seems to be making considerable progress in several parts of the Madras Presidency. A school for Hindoo girls was established at Vizagapatam about two years ago, and in December last an examination took place which passed off very creditably, showing the interest the pupils and Sisters of Mercy, the teachers, took in their work, and the success attending their efforts. As, however, the girls, after attaining tolerable proficiency, were obliged to leave, having reached the age after which their parents would not allow them to attend a school occasionally visited by European and native gentlemen, the education bestowed on them was almost entirely lost. Steps have now been taken to overcome this difficulty, and several native gentlemen have determined to establish a school for adult females. The foundation-stone of the building was laid in the beginning of the present month with all due ceremony, as the importance of the undertaking deserved should be done. The advocates and promoters of advancement among the native ladies of Bombay will be interested in knowing something of what was said and done on the occasion. Mr. Minchin, the collector, laid the foundation stone. A numerous assembly was present to witness the ceremony; and the arrangements for the occasion were got up with neatness and taste. On the site of the intended school-house was pitched a tent, under which were assembled a number of the leading members of European society, both ladies and gentlemen, many East Indian ladies and gentlemen, and a large sprinkling of influential natives, not the less conspicuous of whom was the enlightened Mr. G. L. Narsing Row, the husband of the lady who has placed herself at the head of the great object of introducing female education among her countrywomen. The ceremony opened with a speech from the Principal Sudder Ameen, Mr. P. Sreenivassa Row, and what he said was to the point, encouraging his countrymen in every way to follow the good example set by Mrs. Soorlah, and now so ably carried out by her daughter. Mr. Minchin gave a capital address, and spoke in laudatory terms of the interest taken by his Highness the Maharajah of Vizianagram and Mr. G. L. Narsing Row in education; he eulogised the Sisters of Mercy for their toil and trouble in this work of love and charity, though the world generally had no means of knowing the amount of their labours. He further said they never looked forward to reports in newspapers, or other means of proclaiming their good deeds. All they did came from the heart, and what they had already done the children of the school there assembled bore ample testimony. The stone was then laid in due and ancient form.

DESTRUCTION OF THE BOMBAY POST OFFICE BY FIRE.

The largest fire that has been witnessed in Bombay for many years occurred last Monday afternoon, when the Post Office was burned to the ground. It was a few minutes after two o'clock when the fire was first observed. The Post Office—situated in Marine-street—was an extensive two-storeyed building of a quadrangular shape, having a gate in front and offices on the other three sides. On the north side of the space enclosed by the quadrangle was the receipt department, and on the south side the despatch department, while the part of the building forming the east side of the quadrangle consisted chiefly of staircases leading to the upper storey. The open enclosure was used by the mail carts, which received and discharged the bags there. It was in a staircase at the north-east corner of the building that the fire broke out. The origin of it is still unknown. The most probable account is that the disaster was caused by some sepoys who were on duty at the foot of the staircase throwing a light carelessly amongst some waste paper lying there. It was then that the fire was first seen, and the consternation that spread instantaneously throughout the establishment amongst the native employés is indescribable. Fortunately the English mails received only that morning had all been delivered in Bombay or despatched to the Mofussil and other parts of India. There were, however, many registered letters, valuable parcels, &c., in addition to the documents, cash, stamps, furniture, and other miscellaneous articles of property belonging to the office. Those who happened to be upstairs in the northern part of the building when the fire broke out found egress by the staircase impossible, but with the instinct of self preservation they were not long in fixing upon a means of escaping from the building. It was amusing enough to see the Hindoo clerks coming out of the windows sliding down the shades over the window below, and dropping to the ground—with a courage worthy of a better object. Both Mr. Stuart and his successor in the office of Postmaster General, Major Battye, were in the building at the time, and they acted in a manner for which we must accord them the highest credit. Mr. Stuart did all he could to rally his men; he reminded them that they were carrying away their keys, and tried to get them to stay and open the drawers and desks, &c., in which the articles which it was most desirable to save were locked up; but for once his commands were disregarded, and the exodus of fear-stricken Purbhoos and peons continued. There were some sturdy tars, however, outside, equal to the occasion—eager in fact to perform some deed of daring—and they were not long in scrambling in by the windows and performing in a rude but effective manner the work which the Hindoo clerks might so easily have done by means of their keys. With their aid and that of other Europeans everything that was destined for the public was secured and saved. It speaks well for the diligence and hardihood of the men who toiled inside the burning building that the offices were almost entirely emptied of their movable contents. The articles about the safety of which there was any doubt were the cash, which amounted, we believe, to about Rs. 7,000, and a number of documents, the loss of which would occasion no little inconvenience, though not intrinsically valuable.

Within twenty minutes or so from the commencement of the fire an enormous mass of dense black smoke rose from the building, which must have attracted attention for many miles around. The flames soon spread to every corner of the building, with a violence which plainly showed there was no chance of the old Post Office being saved. Intense anxiety was felt for two neighbouring buildings—one no other than the Custom House, with all its valuable stores, on the north side; the other the large building of the Bombay Hydraulic Press Company on the south. Fortunately there was between the Post Office and each of these buildings a pretty wide passage, the existence of which, we do not hesitate to say, saved them. The fire, however, took a strong hold upon the sheds connected with the Custom House at the back of the Post Office building, where large quantities of valuable goods were stored. The first fire-engines that arrived on the spot came from the dockyard; it was impossible, however, for some time to obtain a supply of water. A little while afterwards two steam fire engines reached the place, but it was not till the Post Office had been thoroughly emptied of its contents that these could be set to work. When an abundant supply of water was obtained the hose began to play upon the building with noticeable effect. The scene at the shed behind the Post Office was a most exciting one. Banians, Borahs, and natives of all sorts were to be seen performing for the nonce the duties of ordinary coolies, amid a din which was deafening. By their exertions the greater part of the goods was removed to a safe distance from the fire, but two sheds and most of the property under them were destroyed by the flames—the sheds themselves falling down. An immense amount of assistance was rendered here, and also on the other sides of the Post Office, by large bands of seamen, who had been brought ashore under the command of their officers from the men-of-war and the troop-ship at present in the harbour. The men worked with a diligence and good humour which these well disciplined crews of English seamen uniformly display on such occasions.—Abridged from the Times of India, March 6.

Miscellaneous.

HIGH COURT OF BOMBAY.—The digging of the foundations of the new buildings for the High Court of Bombay was commenced on Monday last, on the Esplanade, nearly opposite the Agra Bank.

THE BISHOP OF BOMBAY proceeded on Monday, the 1st March, to Matheran. [There was a probability of his lordship visiting Belgaum, and consecrating the new church there, in the interval between then and Easter.

POONAH.—Colonel Penn, R.A., with his battery (the "Steelpens" of Abyssinian fame) is temporarily quartered in Poonah.

MISS CARPENTER.—We regret to hear that Miss Carpenter's state of health has recently been so critical that her medical adviser has urged her to return to England.

THE BAR.—Mr. Mathew Henry Starling and Mr. Pierse Creigh have been sworn before the Chief Justice at the High Court as members of the Bombay Bar.

BOMBAY MINT.—The value of silver in the Bombay Mint at the close of last week was Rs. 1,38,72,903, of which Rs. 1,10,00,00 belonged to the Currency Department.

FETE AT INDORE.—His Highness the Maharajah Holkar gave a grand fete champetre to Colonel Meade, C.S.I., and the residents of Indore and Mhow on the night of the 1st March, the concluding day of the Holes festival. The Lal Bagh Gardens were illuminated, and there was a display of fireworks, and nautches.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY.—The Irish in Bombay have resolved to follow the example of the Scotch, and to have their Saint Patrick's Dinner as the Scotch have their Saint Andrew's. Colonel Torrens has consented to be chairman.

MAJOR R. CAMPBELL.—We hear (says the Sindh News) that Major R. Campbell, Assistant Quartermaster-General, who left this not long ago to take charge of the Quartermaster-General's Department at the Presidency, is expected back in Sindh by the end of March to resume his former appointment. Major Campbell's return to Kurrachee will be hailed with much pleasure.

TRADE WITH BHOOTAN.—Colonel Haughton has obtained permission to establish a mountain fair for the encouragement of trade with Bhootan. The new station of Fallacotta has been selected as the most central spot, both with regard to the Bhootan passes, and to Rungpore, Darjeeling, Perneah, Jilpigoree and Assam; and the Commissioner proposes opening the fair on the 15th January, 1870, establishing it as an annual event.

DISTRESS IN THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.—The degree of distress in the Central Provinces seems to be greater than has been supposed. In the Raepore district 2,000 persons are employed on relief works; "they appear to have been conquered by hunger at last," writes the Deputy Collector, "and to have overcome their prejudices to working on the road." In Belaspore, also, the distress seems increasing; about Rs. 5,000 being expended daily on minor irrigation works.

ODDH BANKING CORPORATION.—It is said that some of the shareholders of the Oudd Banking Corporation, at present in liquidation, contemplate instituting criminal proceedings against certain of the former officials of the bank. Opinions differ as to the amount shareholders and other contributories will be required to pay up towards the liquidation. As usual the margin is a very wide one; some think that fifteen rupees per share will suffice, while others believe that 100 rupees will be nearer the mark.

A NEW POST-OFFICE FOR BOMBAY.—Seeing that Bombay must have a new post-office at once, it is satisfactory to learn that the design for the building, which is estimated to cost six lakhs of rupees, has been approved by the Government of India. To provide for any future extensions which the increasing business of the department may render necessary, the single-storied portion of the building will be so constructed as to admit of the addition of an upper story hereafter. It would be interesting to know the vicissitudes through which this project has passed during these four years.

MHOW.—We hear from Mhow that Major-General Adams, C.B., and staff returned to that station from his tour of inspection to Neemuch and Nusserabad, on the morning of the 1st inst. The Major-General returned by the new Neemuch road via Rutlam, marking out the encamping grounds for troops en route. The headquarters of the 6th Brigade Royal Artillery had reached the station, under command of Colonel Longden; the battery of the same brigade, owing to the lateness of the season, and from sickness on the road, will not leave Deolalee until after the monsoon. Cholera is still prevalent on the Khundwah and Mhow-road; one case has ended fatally in the station, the schoolmaster of the Bays, Mr. McCartney, having died.

TESTIMONIAL TO SIR JOSEPH ARNOULD.—In response to an invitation from Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy, Bart., an influential meeting of the principal natives of Bombay was held on the 4th March, at Mazagon Castle, to arrange the preliminaries for the presentation of a testimonial to Sir Joseph Arnould. Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy, Bart., was called to the chair, and explained that the object of convening the meeting was to mark the sense of respect universally felt in the native community towards Sir Joseph. During a period of ten years his lordship had, by a rare combination of many excellent qualities of head and heart, gained the esteem and respect of all classes, while his kindness and courtesy, and large and liberal views, had afforded entire satisfaction to the native community. Resolutions were then adopted to the effect that, in the opinion of the meeting a testimonial from the native inhabitants be presented to his lordship, who retires from the Bench about the end of April next, and that a subscription list be opened for furthering the objects of the meeting. A committee was appointed, with Mr. Shantaram Narayan, pleader, as secretary. The amount of each subscription is limited to Rs. 200.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

DRILL AND INSTRUCTION.

No. 14.—General officers commanding divisions and brigades are reminded of the necessity of exercising the troops under their command during the cold season.

When the strength of the force will admit of such arrangements, it would be well, when the troops turn out as a division, that the cavalry and infantry should each be commanded by a brigadier for the day. Horse artillery should generally be attached to the cavalry.

It will be understood that the officer commanding the field artillery should, unless otherwise specially directed by the general officer, conform to the movements of the line of infantry.

Field artillery should not be detached with cavalry, unless it be exceptionally necessary in the absence of horse artillery.

Until the artillery practice season commences there should be weekly cavalry and infantry brigade days; the horse artillery turning out with the cavalry and the field artillery with the infantry; each force to be commanded by the senior officer. These directions, however, are not to interfere with any particular arrangements of the general officer, should he himself have leisure to direct the instruction.

At the expiration of three or four weeks, divisional field days may take place, with advantage, once a fortnight; care being taken to design the manoeuvres so as to convey a practical lesson of what might probably take place before an enemy.

In handling cavalry and horse artillery, whilst due celerity should not be omitted, the greater care must be taken that the objects of movements are explained and made clearly apparent to officers commanding regiments and batteries, and that a fair amount of precision in the direction of movements and the details of drill in the two arms may be maintained. If from rapidity or any other cause the details of a movement should not be carried out according to the intention of the commander, it should be repeated ab initio.

The commander should execute his drill according to a preconceived idea; proper explanation being afforded to commanding officers; but without any warning previous to their going on parade.

A like general rule will apply to infantry acting with field artillery.

The advance and retreat of lines should generally be covered by skirmishers; these being accompanied by detachments of guns if in very open country. Infantry should also be practised through enclosed country, when this does not interfere with the crops; the guns being directed along roads, &c., as would happen were an enemy in front; positions being seized at double time; all cover being taken advantage of by skirmishers, lines, or columns.

Bands should always accompany the regiments when moving in brigade.

LEAVE.—PAY.

No. 25.—The following letter from the Sec. to Government military department, No. 1,314, dated Dec. 31, 1868, is published for general information:—

"In reply to your letter dated 21st inst., I am directed to acquaint you that if an officer, whilst on furlough under the Rules of 1868, is transferred to another appointment, he will still continue to draw the furlough pay as before, whatever the emoluments of the new appointment may be; but the officer acting in the latter will of course be restricted to half staff salary.

"2. In the event of an officer's appointment being abolished during his absence on furlough, he would cease to have any claim to half the staff salary, and would revert to the furlough pay of his military rank; and it would rest with the department under which he might have been employed to represent the case for the special orders of Government, if the abolition should have been unexpected or the circumstances such as to deserve special consideration."

THE ANNUAL PUNJAB EXAMINATIONS.

No. 66b.—It is hereby notified for general information that the yearly examination of assistants and other such officers of Government as are required to present themselves will be held at the several divisional head quarters on Tuesday, April 6.

No. 67b.—The undermentioned gentlemen are appointed members of the Special Central Examination Committee:—

Mr. J. Inglis, member, board of revenue, N.W.P., president.
Mr. M. H. Court, comr. of the Allahabad div.
Mr. F. O. Mayne, c.B., insp. gen. of police, N.W.P.
Mr. M. Kempson, M.A., director of public instruction, N.W.P.
Mr. W. C. Plowden, sec. to the board of revenue, N.W.P.
Mr. W. Johnston, registrar gen. of assurances, and comr. of excise and stamps, N.W.P.

The officiating under sec. to Govt., N.W.P., will act as sec. to committee.

No. 68b.—The Allahabad divisional committee will consist of the following members:—President: The judge of Allahabad. Members: The magistrate or joint magistrate, and the judge of court of small causes.

HOSPITALS—EQUIPMENT—BARRACK DEPARTMENT.

In continuation of G.O. No. 53 of 1867, and under the orders of Government [No. 747, dated Fort William, Nov. 23, 1868, from Government of India, military department, to the quartermaster general], the following articles of camp furniture are sanctioned for the hospitals of batteries of royal artillery and of regiments when on the line of march:—

Batteries of royal artillery, 1 small camp table and 2 light or folding chairs.

Regiments European cavalry and infantry, 1 small camp table and 2 light or folding chairs.

Regiments Native cavalry and infantry, 1 small camp table and 1 light or folding chair.

2. These articles are to be supplied on indent through the barrack department, barrackmasters taking medical officers' receipts for the same, and then striking the articles off their stock accounts as "issues."

3. Medical officers are to include the table and chairs in the return of Government stores prepared and submitted by them.

ACTING ALLOWANCES TO CIVIL SERVANTS.

Feb. 8.—Read No. 965.—The notification of this department, No. 534, dated June 16, 1868, publishing revised rules for the grant of acting allowances to covenanted civil servants.

Resolution.—In the first of the above-mentioned rules, it is stated that the minimum of acting allowance must be two-thirds of the difference between the salary of the acting officer's substantive appointment and the salary of the appointment in which he is officiating. To explain the effect of this rule in cases where salaries are progressive, the Governor General in Council is pleased to declare that in applying the rule to such cases, the salary of the appointment in which the officer concerned is officiating shall be understood to mean the minimum salary, and the salary of his substantive appointment shall be understood to mean his substantive salary at the time.

THE MILITARY ACCOUNT DEPARTMENT.

Feb. 9.—No. 154.—With reference to paragraph 4th of the resolution of the Govt. of India in the financial dept., published in G.G.O. No. 197, dated March 7, 1864, and to the avowed object of that order, viz., the complete subordination of the whole departmental system of military account and audit to the military department of the Govt. of India, the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to announce, with the view of removing all misapprehension, that the military account department at the three Presidencies was, by the above G.O., constituted one department, and that the officers attached thereto were by such order, and are now, in direct and immediate subordination to the military department of the Govt. of India; in the account branch of which all business affecting military account will, as it heretofore has been, be administered by the controller gen. of military expenditure, who is the head of the military account department for all India.

2. For the purpose of giving more practical effect to this arrangement the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to declare that the controllers, military accountants, examiners, circle and deputy paymasters at the three Presidencies, will now be placed on one roster for departmental promotion and transfer from presidency to presidency, as the good of the public service may require.

3. All appointments to, or promotions in, the account department, whether permanent or temporary, will in future be made by the Govt. of India in the military department, which will at all times carefully consider the claims to promotion, on the grounds of standing, good service, &c., of all officers of the department. It must, however, be clearly understood that whenever it deems it expedient to do so for the greater advantage of the public service, the Govt. of India will exercise its undoubted right of selecting any one of its servants, to whatever branch of the service he may belong, to fill any vacancy that may occur in the higher grades. It will at the same time be always open to the Governments of Madras and Bombay, on the actual or expected occurrence of vacancies, to submit to the Govt. of India the names and qualifications of any officers serving in those Presidencies whom they may consider deserving of promotion in, or appointment to the Military Account Department.

4. In cases of emergency the Local Governments will make such arrangements as may appear suitable for the conduct of the duties of any of the appointments in the Military Account Department which may become suddenly vacant, subject to the further orders of the Govt. of India, to whom the circumstances should be reported without delay.

THE NEW CIVIL FURLOUGH RULES, QUALIFYING FOR PRIVILEGE LEAVE.

Financial Dept., Fort William, Feb. 7.—Read No. 908.—Letter No. 3,805, dated Dec. 29 last, to the offg. acct. gen. of the Punjab, ruling that priv. leave might be taken in continuation of the two months' leave admissible to a junior civil servant who passes a successful examination in the Oriental languages, and that the two months may be regarded as qualifying for priv. leave.

Letter No. 56, dated Jan. 19, from the acct. gen. of Madras, asking whether special leave may be taken in continuation of the two months' examination leave.

Observations.—The Gov. gen. in Council observes that the letter of Dec. 29 last conveys a wrong impression of the intention of the Govt. of India. The Govt. did not mean to authorise priv. leave to be added to and combined with the two months' examination leave, but merely to rule that this latter leave should not interrupt the reckoning for priv. leave, and indeed should be considered as service qualifying for priv. leave, so that if entitled, an officer might obtain priv. leave immediately on the expiration of the examination leave. It will in all cases be necessary for an officer to rejoin his post after the expiration of the two months' examination leave, and no leave must be taken simply in continuation of such leave.

RULES FOR ADMISSION TO THE STAFF CORPS FOR THE SURVEY DEPARTMENT.

Feb. 9.—No. 49.—The following rules have been passed by the Governor General in Council, and are published for general information:—

I. The period of probation will be one year. If in any case strong special reasons render an extension of this term expedient, application should be made through the Surveyor General, or the head of the department in which the probationer is serving, in full time to permit of orders being passed before the period of probation expires.

II. Every candidate will be required to furnish the certificates of which forms are given below, signed by his commanding officer and the surgeon of his regiment or corps respectively.

III. There will be distinct examinations, both preliminary and final, for the Topographical and Revenue Surveys, including the Topographical branch of the Trigonometrical Survey, and for the Great Trigonometrical Survey.

IV. For the Topographical and Revenue Surveys the preliminary examination will embrace the following subjects:—

1. Arithmetic, including involution and evolution, arithmetical and geometrical progression, proportion or rule-of-three, vulgar and decimal fractions, logarithmic calculations, and mensuration of surfaces.

2. Elementary geometry, first four books of Euclid.

3. Algebra, as far as quadratic equations, inclusive.

4. Elements of plane trigonometry.

5. Topographical, mechanical, or civil drawing, to be executed in the presence of examiners.

V. Artillery officers and officers holding certificates of qualification granted at the institutions of Addiscombe and Woolwich, or the Staff * Financial Resolution, No. 1031, dated 25th February, 1868.

Para. 4. The Subordinate Establishments of Controllers, Accountants, and Examiners in every part of India will remain as at present, all appointments and promotions will be made by the Government in the Military Department, and it will be the duty of the Accountant-general (now Controller-general of Military Expenditure) to advise in all matters relating to the conditions of appointment and promotion, so as to secure the highest practicable standard of qualification.

College, or Civil Engineering Colleges, or who may have passed an examination in surveying according to the army standard, will be exempted from undergoing any preliminary examination, and will, on being nominated, at once enter as probationers, and be attached to survey parties, to learn their practical duties in the field and during the recess.

VI. The final examination for the Topographical and Revenue Surveys, to be held at the close of the period of probation, will comprise:—

1. The satisfactory execution unassisted, of a small area of country, including the computation and entire mapping involved in the same.

2. Perfect use and knowledge of all the instruments employed in the department, and adjustment of the same.

3. The elements of natural astronomy, sufficient for ascertaining time, azimuth, and latitude.

4. A fair knowledge of all rules in force, for the general conduct of the survey establishments, in the department to which the probationer is attached.

Each candidate will also be required to produce a certificate of having passed an examination by the higher standard in any vernacular languages prescribed by the Government under which the probationer is employed.

VII. The examinations for the Topographical and Revenue Surveys will be conducted by the head of the department in which the probationer is serving, aided by such professional officers, to the number of two, as may be available. Whenever desirable, sealed examination questions may be transmitted, in view to their being answered by the probationer in the presence of the officer in charge of the survey party to which he is attached, in lieu of obliging him to appear at departmental head quarters for the purpose of examination.

VIII. For the geodesical branch of the Trigonometrical Survey, the preliminary examination will be theoretical only, comprising mathematics up to conic sections, and the principles of construction of instruments in common use. The final examination will be theoretical and practical, embracing analytical geometry of three dimensions, statics, dynamics, astronomy, the construction of the instruments of the Great Trigonometrical Survey, and a practical familiarity with their management. Candidates for the staff corps will also be required to produce a certificate of having passed an examination by the higher standard in any vernacular language prescribed by the Government under which the probationer is employed.

IX. The examiners will be the superintendent of the Great Trigonometrical Survey, with any two available officers of the department at his head quarters.

X. The degree of proficiency attained by candidates will be ascertained in both branches of the Survey Department by written questions, the examination papers being framed at departmental head quarters.

[Here follows form of certificate referred to in Rule II.]

COLOURED POSTAGE STAMPS.

Feb. 19.—No. 1,166.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to suspend until Jan. 1, 1869, the operation in the province of Oudh of that portion of financial notification No. 2,778, dated April 29, 1868, which prescribed the use of bi-coloured stamp paper, consisting of blue and black colours for documents enumerated in Schedule A of Act X. of 1862 other than those for which adhesive stamps have been prescribed, and to authorise the employment up to that date for the documents under Schedule A above referred to of the bi-colour stamps (red and blue) which in the notification of April last was intended solely for the documents enumerated in Schedule B of Act XXVI. of 1867.

THE NEW MILITARY FURLOUGH RULES.

Fort William, Feb. 15.—No. 181.—Addendum.—To Clause V. of G.G.O. No. 1,064, dated Nov. 10 last, publishing the New Mily. Furl. Rules, after the words "but an officer on civil employ and drawing consolidated salary will be allowed 50 per cent. of the average salary drawn by him for three years prior to his proceeding on furlough," add the words "in case of an officer who may be granted furlough on medical certificate before he has completed three years' actual service in India, the average will be taken of the salary drawn during the period of his actual service. In every case the time spent and the allowances drawn during any leave under chapter II. will be omitted in the calculation of average salary."

ACTING ALLOWANCES TO OFFICERS ON CIVIL EMPLOY.

From G. H. M. Batten, Esq., Under-Secretary to the Government of India, Financial Department.

To the Controller General of Accounts:

Fort William, Feb. 13.—No. 1,073.—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of the letter from the officiating examiner of claims, Calcutta, No. 1872-E, dated Feb. 3, and in reply to state that the rule laid down in the order of this department, No. 3,429, dated Dec. 8 last, "that when an officer holding an acting appointment is transferred to another appointment of not inferior emolument, he shall continue to draw his acting allowances during the time spent in joining the new appointment," is applicable to military officers in civil employ.

FREE PASSAGE TO CHAPLAINS.

The following resolution is published for general information:—

Read the undermentioned papers:—

Financial resolution No. 414, dated 19th ult., cancelling financial resolution No. 804, dated Feb. 25, 1866, which ruled that chaplains, like military officers in civil employ, will be allowed a free passage "when, being employed at a station beyond sea, they may be obliged to return to their presidency, in progress to a hill station on leave on m.c., and also when they join their station on return from that leave."

Letter from the Accountant-gen., Bombay, No. 3,127a, dated Feb. 8, inquiring from what date the cancellation is to take effect.

Resolution.—The cancellation of the resolution No. 804, of Feb. 26, 1866, takes effect from Jan. 19 last.

PAYMASTER'S PAY.

No. 185.—Errata.—In the statements of conditions on which the increased rates of pay are admissible to paymasters, published in G.G.O. No. 969 of Oct. 15 last, the following corrections are made:—

In condition B, for "including not less than five years as paymaster in receipt of the pay, whether in or out of India," read "including not less than five years as paymaster in receipt of the second rate of pay, whether in or out of India."

In condition C, for "after fifteen years' service as paymaster, or after twenty years' service as commissioned and non-commissioned officer on full pay, &c., &c.," read "after fifteen years' service as paymaster, or after twenty years' service as a non-commissioned officer on full pay, &c., &c."

In those cases where the higher allowance has been passed, it will be discontinued from the date of this order, but no recoveries will be made for any over-issue of pay under the original wording.

THE NEW CIVIL SERVICE RULES.

Feb. 18.—No. 1,092.—Read the following despatches:—

From the Govt. of India to the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, dated Oct. 26, 1868. (Copy.)

From the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India to the Govt. of India, No. 2, dated the 6th ult. (Copy.)

No. 287, dated Oct. 26, 1868, from the Govt. of India to the Sec. of State for India.

From an examination of the several statements which have been furnished to us regarding covenanted civil servants at present on leave in England, and of other cases brought to our notice, a hardship in the new leave rules has come to light.

2. Under the old rules one year's leave on medical certificate not only counted as service and residence for pension, but was so counted as qualifying for furlough. For instance, an officer who had served and resided for nine years, and who had also taken one year's leave on medical certificate, was credited with ten years' service and residence, and was entitled to three years' furlough. All officers, therefore, who took leave on medical certificate under the old rules did so in the full assurance that one year of such leave counted as service and residence, not only towards pension, but as qualifying for furlough.

3. Under the new rules, so far as residence for pension is concerned, compensation has been made for the abolition of the above rule, by shortening the period of residence for pension by one year. But in regard to the qualification for furlough, no such compensation has been made. Under these rules, all leave taken under medical certificate, even under the old rules, is not only not allowed to count as service and residence, but is deducted from the amount of furlough earned by the prescribed period of service. For example, an officer of nine years' actual service and residence, who has in addition taken one year's leave on medical certificate, instead of being entitled to three years' furlough, is entitled to only one year's furlough, and must serve three years more before he is entitled to two years' furlough. Similarly, an officer who had completed nine years' actual service, and had besides taken two years' leave under medical certificate, instead of being entitled, as he was under the old rules, to three years' furlough, must, under the new, serve three years more before he can get any furlough at all. There is no doubt that the new rule has caused great disappointment owing to this retrospective effect being given to it.

4. Without advocating the maintenance of the old rule, which allowed one year's leave on medical certificate to count as service and residence, both for furlough and pension, it would appear but fair to rule that, in the case of officers who have under the old rules taken leave on medical certificate, one year of such leave should not be debited against any furlough which might otherwise be due under the new rules, although it should still remain as part of the total of six years, which is the maximum amount of furlough that can be taken in the whole course of service. If this were allowed, the rule that furlough should not be renewed until three years from the termination of previous furlough of more than three months' duration, would not thereby be altered.

5. It has also been represented that some of the hardship which the new rules inflict on officers who have, by taking leave under the old rules, used up all the leave to their credit, might be mitigated by a slight alteration of the rule by which furlough is placed to credit. Instead of one year's furlough being credited after every four years' actual service, it is desired that for each period of actual service a proportionate amount of furlough at the above rate may be placed at credit; for instance, that three months' furlough may be credited after each year's actual service. The rules and restrictions under which furlough may be taken when at credit would not be altered.

6. When officers took furlough under the old rules they could not foresee what would be the effect under the new rules. For example, an officer who lately took three years' furlough under the old rules, and has no more at credit, now finds that if in the course of three years from his return he falls sick, he must lose his appointment, and be reduced to subsistence allowance, although his furlough allowances under the old rules were only £500 per annum, while under the new they might have been £1,200 per annum. Under the old rules he could have taken immediately after his return, if he had fallen sick, fifteen months' leave, extendable to twenty, on half pay up to £1,000 a-year, keeping his appointment, which leave might have been extended for three years with loss of appointment, and an allowance of £500 per annum for the past sixteen months.

7. The suggested alteration is not one of principle, and it will not give any one a day's more leave than the rules as they stand. It is a mere question of detail as to the method of bringing furlough to credit.

8. It may be noticed in regard to the first point that, in the case of military officers, whatever leave was taken under the old rules on medical certificate is not debited against furlough otherwise at credit—vide example (2) to rule XXIV. of the Military Leave Rules.

9. The second concession is not so much required by military officers, as, in addition to the leaves which civilians can get, they are able to obtain general leave under Chapter II., retaining their appointments and drawing half-pay.

10. On these grounds, we ask your sanction to the issue of the following orders:—

I.—“A Covenanted Civil Servant who has taken leave on medical certificate under leave rules prior to those of 1868, shall not be debited with such leave, up to the limit of one year, against furlough which would otherwise be at his credit. All such leave shall, however, be included in the maximum amount of six years' fixed in Rule II. of the Rules of 1868.

II.—“For Rule III. of the Leave Rules of 1868, the following rule is substituted:—

No. 2, dated Jan. 6, 1869. From the Secretary of State for India to the Government of India.

I have considered in council your financial letter dated Oct. 26 last, No. 287, requesting sanction to the issue of the following orders:—

First. “A covenanted civil servant who has taken leave on medical certificate under leave rules prior to those of 1868, shall not be debited with such leave, up to the limit of one year, against furlough which would otherwise be at his credit. All such leave shall, however, be included in the maximum amount of six years fixed in Rule II. of the Rules of 1868.

Second. “For Rule III. of the Leave Rules of 1868, the following rule is substituted:—

“Subject to the above limit, furlough shall be placed to the credit of each officer at the proportional rate of one year's furlough for every four years of actual service.”

2. The issue of the orders proposed is sanctioned.

Resolution.—The following is an illustration of the rules which have been sanctioned by the Secretary of State:—

A. has completed an actual service of 21 years 2 mo. and 10 days. He has had 15 mo. sick leave under old rules, and 3 years' furlough. A. has secured by his actual service 5 years' 3 mo. and 17 days' furlough. Against this must be debited 3 years' furlough and 3 mo. of the 15 mo. sick leave, leaving at A.'s credit 2 years and 17 days' furlough. But as this added to the 3 years' furlough and 15 mo. sick leave already taken would exceed the aggregate of 6 years by 3 mo. 17 days, the excess must be deducted, leaving at A.'s credit 1 year and 9 mo. furlough.

2. In this illustration sick leave does not include leave within Indian limits, under the Rules of May, 1843, which leave has been declared, in a resolution, No. 3,477, passed in this department on Nov. 5, 1868, to be actual service.

THE INDIA-OFFICE MSS.

A correspondent well qualified to speak on the subject has sent the following communication to the Pall Mall Gazette:—

I cannot enlighten you as to the contents of the "Beejapoor MSS." found in the library at the India-office, but if they are the MSS. formerly in the Azar Mehal at Beejapoor, the following are the facts as to the manner and time when the MSS. came into the possession of the East India Company. The books are the remains of one of the Royal libraries which existed at Beejapoor in the Deccan previous to its capture by Aurangzebe, A.D. 1686. Though "cartloads" of MSS. are said to have been taken away by him, the library to which these volumes belonged was not entirely removed by the Emperor from Beejapoor, in consequence of its having been attached to a Mahomedan shrine, in which were preserved two hairs of the Prophet's beard. A short account of this curious shrine will be found in Colonel Sykes's excellent paper on Beejapoor in the "Transactions of the Literary Society of Bombay," a book now very rarely to be met with, and also in the magnificent volume of photographs of Beejapoor, published by Mr. Murray in 1866, at the expense of a native gentleman of Bombay. The building in which the library was preserved will be found described and depicted at pages 38 and 75 of the memoirs prefixed to that volume by Captain Meadows Taylor and Mr. James Ferguson, and in plates 47 to 53. In this shrine the books remained much neglected, and were examined about 1842 by M. d'Octroa, a young scholar of Spanish origin, travelling in India by order of King Louis Philippe, to collect Sanscrit MSS. for the Royal Library at Paris.

Sir George Arthur, the then Governor of Bombay, hearing of the condition of the Beejapoor library from M. d'Octroa, moved the Rajah of Satara, in whose territory Beejapoor then was, to take better care of the books; and something was done, with this end in view, at the suggestion of Colonel Evans, the then Resident. But when the territory, with all of Colonel Evans, the then Resident. But when the territory, with all of State property, lapsed to the Government of India, the library was still much neglected and exposed to depredation and injury from the weather. In this state it was found by Captain (now Colonel) Philip Hart, of the Engineers, who was employed to repair some of the beautiful buildings which were fast going to ruin, and among others, that in which the library was deposited; and on his report, Lord Falkland, then Governor of Bombay, ordered the removal of all the books which were at all perfect, and they were ultimately sent to the library of the East India Company in Leadenhall-street, where they remained until its transfer to the Crown.

The Beejapoor library must once have been rich in books in many languages. Local tradition tells of many beautiful works in Persian, richly illuminated, which have, at different times, been abstracted from the library and clandestinely sold, and there are still many boxes of fragments of books, Persian and Arabic, which, from the beauty of the penmanship and illumination, testify to the original value of the volumes to which they belonged. There are likewise fragments of MSS. in Mah-ratta and Sanscrit, in Canarese, and other southern languages, written on paper as well as on palm leaves, and a few fragments of black-letter English and Spanish books; the English fragments evidently belonged to a black-letter Bible of the Authorised Version. But, with the exception of the Arabic volumes now in the library at the India-office, there was nothing like a perfect volume in any language forthcoming in 1847, and the existence of these Arabic volumes was accounted for by the local officers, solely on the ground of their having been unreadable by any one on the spot, and consequently unsaleable. The blame of these depredations was laid by the Brahmin officers of the Mahratta State at the door of the Mahomedan mujawirs who had charge of the shrine, while the latter retorted by accusing the Brahmin officers of the State; but of the fact that very extensive depredations had been permitted within a few years previous to the territory coming under British control there can, I fear, be no doubt.

I may mention that, besides the preservation of these MSS., we owe to Colonel Hart's professional skill and taste the beautiful architectural drawings by Mr. Cumming, photographs from which are to be found in Mr. Murray's publication above referred to; and also the extensive repairs to the old buildings at Beejapoor which he carried out about twenty years ago, and which have done much to preserve the ruins from utter decay. Until Colonel Hart took the matter in hand little or nothing effectual had been done to preserve the buildings since the repairs ordered by Captain Grant Duff, soon after the conquest of the Deccan by the British in 1817.

Miscellaneous.

The Rev. W. G. Cowie, the Rector of Stafford, has accepted the bishopric of New Zealand. He was formerly chaplain to the late Bishop of Calcutta.

THE NAWAB OF BENGAL, with his two sons, accompanied by Col. Layard, arrived on the 22nd March at Marseilles. The Nawab was to stay there several days, and afterwards come through Paris to London.

LORD STRANGFORD'S WRITINGS.—Viscountess Strangford is about to publish a selection of her husband's writings on Eastern Europe and Central Asia, subjects of which he had a special and extensive knowledge. Later in the year a further volume by the same editor will appear, prefaced by a short memoir, and containing Lord Strangford's contributions to philology, and a selection from his correspondence.

THE MAHARAJAH DHULEEP SINGH.—At the Suffolk Quarter Sessions (Western Division), on Tuesday, March 23, the Maharajah Dhuleep Singh qualified as a county magistrate. His Highness appears to be thoroughly devoting himself to the duties and avocations of a country gentleman.

CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA, AND CHINA.—The directors of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China have decided to recommend to the shareholders at the general meeting, on the 21st of April, a dividend for the half-year ended 31st of December last, at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, free of income-tax.

ARRIVAL OF TROOPS FROM INDIA.—Her Majesty's Indian relief screw troopship Serapis, Captain J. Soady, arrived off Portsmouth and steamed into harbour about 8 A.M. on March 24, from Alexandria and Malta, with officers and troops from India, and naval supernumeraries from Alexandria and Malta.

TURKEY AND PERSIA.—The dispute between Turkey and Persia about the frontier question is beginning to look threatening. Midhat Pasha, one of the ablest and most energetic of the Turkish governors, has been despatched to Bagdad with full powers and instructions to settle the difficulty by force of arms if necessary. Numerous reinforcements of troops and artillery have been sent to the frontier, and it is said that the Viceroy of Egypt has promised to assist the Sultan, in case of war, with a military contingent which would proceed to Bagdad by the Red Sea and Bassorah.

CAPTAIN YOUNG, R.N.—We have to announce the death of Captain Thomas James Young, R.N., v.c., who died a few days ago at Caen, in Normandy. The gallant officer, who was so prematurely removed, entered the navy in 1842, passed in 1848, and obtained his lieutenantcy in 1861. While holding that rank in the service he was engaged under Captain Peel with the Naval brigade at Lucknow, and obtained the Victoria Cross for his gallantry on November 16, 1857, in December the following year. He held subsequently subordinate commands, but latterly his health had given way, no doubt through his services in India.

GENERAL JOMINI.—The eminent writer on strategy, General Jomini, died on Wednesday, the 24th inst., at Passy-Paris, in the 91st year of his age. He began his military career as private secretary to Marshal Ney, and was afterwards honoured with a commission in the staff of the French army. After the victory of Bautzen he was recommended for promotion to the rank of general of division; but the Emperor, for some reason, refused, and Jomini entered the Russian service.

SIR RICHARD GLASS AND THE TELEGRAPH TO INDIA.—We have received from the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company copies of a correspondence which has taken place between Sir Daniel Gooch, the present chairman, and Sir Richard Glass, the late managing director of that company, on the subject of reports recently circulated that Sir Richard had used his influence in aid of a projected telegraph line to India not in connection with the company. In reply to a letter from Sir Daniel Gooch, under date 26th January last, calling attention to the reports, and requesting an assurance that there was no foundation for them, Sir Richard Glass gives them "the most unqualified and emphatic contradiction," and expresses the pain which the inquiry has caused him.

THE OUTWARD INDIA MAILS, &c., (SOUTHAMPTON, March 27).—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's screw steamship Tanjore, Capt. G. S. Brooks, sailed to-day for Gibraltar, Malta, and Alexandria, with the Bombay mails, a general cargo, and 28 boxes of specie, &c., value £14,320, viz., for Aden—sovereigns, £850. For Bombay—Bar gold, £5,000; sovereigns, £1,910; bar silver, £5,500; dollars, £1,060. The Tanjore takes out 11 first and 27 second-class passengers, and 10 proceed by the corresponding steamer from Marseilles, making a total of 48, among whom are Deputy-Assistant Superintendent of Stores Stratton, for Malta; Dr. Payne, for Alexandria; Captain H. Shapcott, Lieutenant Holdich, Major Lamb, Lieutenant Dumsaler, Assistant-Surgeon and Mrs. Kiernauder, and Captain Warden, for Bombay. Colonel Probyn, c.b., v.c., and Major Chesney, for Bombay, join at Suez.

SIR J. H. D'OYLY.—The death was announced on March 24 of Sir John Hadley D'Oyly, the eighth baronet. He was born in 1794, and was brought up by Warren Hastings, Governor-general of India. He was educated at Haileybury College, and entered the Civil Service of the East India Company as a writer in April, 1812. After several promotions he was officially appointed civil and session judge at Beerbhoom in 1836. In 1843 he retired on the annuity fund. He is succeeded in his baronetcy by his son, Charles Walter, who was born in 1822 and educated at Addiscombe. He entered the Indian army in 1852, became captain in 1855, was aide-de-camp to the Marquis of Dalhousie, Governor-general in India. He was deputy-superintendent of the Government studs in Bengal, became major in the Bengal staff corps, served in the Gwalior campaign, for which he has received a medal, and in the Indian mutiny, and has received the Indian medal. He is married to a daughter of Major-general George Nott.

LADY CANNING'S MONUMENT.—To the Editor of the Times.—Sir, —In your columns a few weeks since appeared a letter from one of your Indian correspondents calling attention to the threatened dilapidation of Lady Canning's monument, owing to the absence of some protection against sun and climate, for which an expenditure of a few hundred pounds would be necessary. In common with many other Anglo-Indians, I had hoped that the publication of this want would have elicited from the inheritor of Lord Canning's estate an offer to incur the required expenditure—a hope that met some encouragement from the appearance of a note in your pages from this gentleman's father, intimating that his son was not then in England. Finding now no apparent prospect that the natural guardians of the monument will save it from destruction, I, as one of the original subscribers to the testimonial, would gladly contribute my mite towards its preservation, if your correspondent would kindly publish the name of the treasurer to any fund intended to be raised for this praiseworthy object.—Your obedient servant, J. GORDON, Lieutenant-colonel. Pelham-crescent, S.W., March 26.

THE SINDE RAILWAY.—In anticipation of the extraordinary general meeting of the Sinde Railway Company, convened for the 30th of March, for the purpose of considering the propriety of obtaining an Act of Parliament to enable the company to amalgamate their several undertakings, a circular, signed by Mr. Andrew, the chairman, has been issued to the proprietors, of which the subjoined is an extract:—"Notwithstanding the isolated and fragmentary condition of the several sections of the company's system, their success has been so far assured that, with the exception of the Delhi Railway, of which only a small portion has yet been opened, they have more than paid their working expenses. The capabilities of the harbour of Kurrachee may be regarded as fully established, the area of the harbour having been virtually trebled by the improvement now in progress; and the directors consider that the time has now arrived when the requisite steps should be taken, with a view to the completion of the railway system in the hands of this company, by the construction of the missing link between Kotree and Mooltan. With the early prospect of the several links in the chain of communication between Kurrachee and Delhi being united in one continuous line of railway, it appears to the directors that the interests of the proprietors would be materially promoted by an amalgamation of the several sections. The Secretary of State for India in Council, in the month of September last, signified his approval of the measure now proposed to be carried out, intimating his concurrence in the opinion that an amalgamation would conduce to economy and efficiency." The meeting will not be over by the time we go to press; but our readers may take it almost for granted that Mr. Andrew's judicious scheme will be stamped by the general voice of the shareholders.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

THE LATE BAZOTIE RAID.

The Broad Arrow hopes that the occurrence of this outrage—the last of a long series which we have had to bear—may be the means of leading the Government to reconsider its whole system of policy upon this frontier, and to the abandonment of the penny wise and pound foolish one which has of late prevailed. Let it no longer—whilst pretending to despise as enemies these warlike clans—attempt, as it has too often attempted, to purchase immunity from their attacks by the grant of paltry concessions, or by the payment of black mail. The very act of giving such is misconstrued by these semi-savages as an indication of weakness on our part, and prospectively, if not immediately, conduces to invite a fresh outbreak. Instead of this, the adoption of a bold, manly, and straightforward policy would be infinitely more effectual with these bold and manly, if not straightforward communities, who esteem courage as the first of virtues, and who are not sufficiently refined to know that motives other than those that spring from faintheartedness may suffice to dictate the timorous and time-serving measures so much of late in vogue. Why was the regime of that great man, the late General John Nicholson, so successful and even so popular in the wild and difficult district placed under his charge? It was because the fierce Wuzerees and the savage Bunochees clans who inhabited it thoroughly understood, and understanding admired, the simple ethics of his rule. It was because they recognised and saw that the strength of his policy was ever guided by justice, but unsullied by passion and uninfluenced by fear. To return. It may be remarked that there is no authority as yet to connect the present raid with any former disturbances, nor with those which took place in Hazara last autumn. This is true. Yet no one who has studied the politics and the past history of this frontier, and who is aware of the intimate sympathy which their common hatred of the British power creates amongst sects otherwise intensely hostile to each other, so that a blow struck by us at one extremity of their territory vibrates through its entire length, and not seldom fails to produce an after effect in some unexpected locality, but must recognise the likelihood of there being some such connection in the present instance; whilst other circumstances, which we have not space enough here to mention more particularly lead us, to attach additional weight to this inference.

THE INDIA, CHINA, AND AUSTRALIAN MAILS.—(SOUTHAMPTON, March 29).—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steam-ship Poonah, Captain Methven, with the heavy portion of the above mails, has arrived. She brings 98 passengers, 13 packages specie, £26,132; gold dust, £728, and a general cargo, including 962 bales silk, value £85,000 sterling.

THE WAHABEES.—The Government of Bengal are at last, the Englishman believes, in possession of the facts relating to the remittances despatched from Bengal to the aid of Feroze Shah and the Hindostani colony on the borders of Swat. Mr. Reilly, the officer entrusted with the investigation into the Wahabee conspiracy, has conducted his inquiries with singular tact and ability. The result is that proofs of the traitorous character of much that the Government have long regarded with suspicion will now be forthcoming.

SARSAPARILLA.

WILKINSON'S (late Bridge's) ESSENCE OF FLUID EXTRACT OF RED JAMAICA SARSAPARILLA, prescribed by the Faculty for purifying the blood, debility, liver complaints, and freeing the system from the effects of mercury. Exclusively used in India and the Colonies as a prevention to tropical diseases.

"Superior preparation that may always be relied upon."—Sir Astley Cooper.
"We are in every respect satisfied with it."—Lancet.
"We recommend your Sarsaparilla as the best."—Medical Review.

Sold in quarter, half, and pint bottles.
CAUTION.—Many spurious, worthless, and injurious preparations are offered to the public. See that both bottle and label have the name and address.

QUINTESSANCE OF JAMAICA GINGER AND CAMOMILE.

WILKINSON'S PREPARATION OF GINGER and CAMOMILE has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine. It is a most efficient stomachic tonic, and the best remedy for flatulency and disorders arising from impaired digestion.

It is not affected by climate.
No European in India or tropical countries should be without it.

AROMATIC TINCTURE OF QUINOIDINE.

For the Prevention of Fever, Ague, and effects of Malaria. An unfailing remedy. It may be mentioned that those who, during the campaign in the Crimea, daily took a small quantity, passed entirely unharmed through the raking fire of fever and dysentery that thinned the ranks around them.

Sold in half and quarter-pint bottles.
Prepared by THOMAS WILKINSON (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

SAUCE.—LEA & PERRINS.—SAUCE. THE "WORCESTERSHIRE,"

Pronounced by Connoisseurs,
"THE ONLY GOOD SAUCE."
Its use improves appetite and digestion.

UNRIVALLED FOR PIQUANCY AND FLAVOUR.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS

To avoid which, see the Names,
LEA and PERRINS, on all Bottles and Labels.
ASK FOR "LEA and PERRINS'" SAUCE.

Agents—CROSSE and BLACKWELL, London, and Sold by all dealers in Sauces throughout the World.

LIEBIG COMPANY'S EXTRACT OF MEAT.—PARIS and HAVRE EXHIBITION GOLD MEDALS.—CAUTION.—None genuine without Baron Liebig, the inventor's signature being on every jar, accompanied by full printed directions. About seventy pints of excellent beef tea for 11s., the present reduced retail price per pound. Finest, most convenient, and by far the cheapest meat-flavouring ingredient for soups, made dishes, and sauces. Sold by all Italian Warehousemen, Chemists, Grocers, Ship Chandlers, and Provision-dealers.

A NODYNE CEMENT, for decayed and tender TEETH, allays most violent pain, becomes hard as enamel, answers when the Teeth are nearly broken to the gum. Artificial Teeth (an entirely new description), without springs, used only by Mr. ALFRED JONES, Surgeon-Dentist to their late R.H.H. Princess Augusta, Duchess of Gloucester, the late Louis Philippe, and ex-Royal Family of France, &c. At home from Eleven till Four.
64, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body." It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and acts to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. WEBB's residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT. WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.; postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT. ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,

&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

JOHN WHITE, MANUFACTURER, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.—UPWARDS OF FIFTY YEARS' experience has fully confirmed the superior reputation of these Lozenges in the cure of ASTHMA, WINTER COUGH, HOARSENESS, SHORTNESS OF BREATH, and other PULMONARY MALADIES.

RECENT TESTIMONIAL. August 23, 1868.
Dear Sir,—Having tried your Cough Lozenges in India, I have much pleasure in testifying to their beneficial effects in cases of incipient consumption, asthma, and bronchial affections; so good a medicine ought to be known to be appreciated. I have prescribed it largely with the best results.
W. B. G.,
Apothecary H.M. Indian Medical Service.

To Mr. Thomas Keating.

KEATING'S CHILDREN'S WORM TABLET.—A PURELY VEGETABLE SWEETMEAT,

both in appearance and taste, furnishing a most agreeable method of administering a well-known remedy for

INTESTINAL or THREAD WORMS.

It is a perfectly safe and mild preparation, and is especially adapted for Children.

Sold in tins and bottles of various sizes.

KEATING'S PERSIAN INSECT DESTROYING POWDER.—This Powder is QUITE HARMLESS TO ANIMALS, but unrivalled in destroying Fleas, Bugs, Flannels, Flies, Cockroaches, Beetles, Gnats, Mosquitoes, Moths in Furs, and every other species of insect in all stages of metamorphosis.

Sold in packets, tins, and bottles, of various sizes.

CAUTION.—The Trade Mark is the Dome and Cross

St. Paul's, which is engraved on every article.

ENGLISH HOMES IN INDIA.

PART I.—THE THREE LOVES.

| PART II.—THE WRONG TURNING.

PUBLISHERS' NOTICE.

The writer of these volumes—an accomplished member of a family whose name is conspicuous in Indian story—being now resident in India, they have not had the benefit of her final corrections. It is hoped, however, that this inevitable drawback will detract but little from the pleasure to be afforded by the perusal of the tales, which are, indeed, what they profess to be, stories of English Homes in India, represented as such homes are in different parts of the country and under various social and professional aspects. They endeavour fairly and without exaggeration to illustrate Anglo-Indian life as it is, in its many varying phases, and to bring upon the scene, in their everyday costume, many kinds of Anglo-Indian workmen, from the Resident at a Native Court, to the subaltern officer and the railway employé; and it is believed that all who have visited the countries described will recognise the truth of the portraiture.

cost of ordinary public works, which includes barracks, hospitals, roads, and so forth, is reckoned at £6,021,210. On this point Sir R. Temple differs from Mr. Massey, who placed these things under the head of extraordinary works; but in so doing he merely obeys the instructions of the Home Government, which declines to enforce in India the principle freely adopted in this country. Henceforth the extraordinary works are to include only works that are manifestly and directly reproductive, such as irrigation canals, state railways, and special fund works for Bombay; the cost of all which for the year is reckoned at £3,565,800. The net expenditure in England last year was £7,191,591, or not far from a million over the estimates. For the coming year it is put down at £6,856,750. Salt and customs are expected to yield some thousands more than last year—a just expectation in view of the steady increase from those sources year by year. Opium on the other hand is prudently rated at half a million less than last year's receipts. There is a small estimated increase on stamps, the revised duties on which are not yet to come into play, and on land revenue, forests, and interest; a considerable increase of returns from education and miscellaneous items, and a decrease on those from law and justice.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, March 13; Agra and Calcutta, March 9; Madras, March 8.

The event of the week was Sir R. Temple's financial statement, delivered on the 6th before an audience unusually large, and curious to hear what a finance minister chosen, as of old, from the Indian services would have to say. Sir Richard's speech was quite up to his usual mark in point of ability. It is a simple, straightforward exposition of India's financial progress. It contains no surprises, nor wanders far from the old financial track; but its perfect simplicity conveys an impression all the deeper of the speaker's mastery over his subject. Sir Richard began with the year 1867-8, when the deficit was £1,610,157. In 1868-9 the deficit, including £1,830,773 on extraordinary works, rose to £2,801,244. For 1869-70 the revenue is estimated at £49,340,840, which is expected to leave a surplus of £52,650 after all ordinary expenses are paid. The extraordinary public works for the year will cost £3,565,800, which will be covered by a loan of five millions. Instead of the one-sided license-tax, which yielded half a million, Sir Richard will levy an income-tax of one per cent., worth perhaps £900,000, on all incomes alike—whether derived from land, public funds, or other sources, above five hundred rupees a year. This arrangement, however displeasing to a certain section of the community, is hailed by many people as an improved edition of Mr. Wilson's defunct scheme; and Sir R. Temple has certainly done his best to soften down the harsher features of the old impost, by rendering its incidence as light as possible, and altering the manner of its collection. With due respect for the popular impatience of official prying into a man's household affairs, the principle of a rough assessment, as already applied to the collection of the certificate tax will be carried out in the case of its successor. No returns of individual incomes will be called for, but everyone will have time allowed him to appeal against his assessment. Of the estimated military outlay for the year £12,850,000 is the amount to be expended in India, and £3,202,061 the sum required for the pay of troops and establishments at home. The SIR R. TEMPLE's financial policy is certainly, in his own words, "safe, just, and sound," from more than one point of view. He has succeeded in making the best of an unpleasant business, and laying on a fresh burden in the fairest way. But would it not be a safer and sounder policy to lighten taxation by raising larger loans on all works that are likelier to be fruitful in the future than the present? A new system of fortifications, barracks, and roads ought to come under this category as well as works of irrigation. For these last two a loan of three millions will go a very short way to meet the wants of such a country as India. Railways also need pushing on at a greatly quickened pace. The powers that be however will otherwise, and so the usual deficit will probably turn up again next year.

WE observe that, according to a telegram from Bombay, Shere Ali left Umballa on his homeward journey on the 3rd of this month. Lord Mayo was to start from the same place on Monday last, the 5th, for Simlah, which he will probably reach on the 20th. If the latter date be correctly given, we are curious to know how his Lordship will eke out the intervening time, as the whole distance could be traversed by the slowest marches in a week at most. It appears from the same telegram that Lord Mayo has decided to make no "personal treaty" with Shere Ali, nor to send a British resident to Kabul. Clearly his Lordship is wiser than some English politicians, including Mr. Vambery, whose letter in the Times of Tuesday urges afresh his favourite scheme of a threefold British embassy at Kabul, Herat, and Kandahar. The time for such an arrangement is not yet come. The telegram significantly adds that "the spirit of the Government's policy is unchanged."

THE Indian papers give us further particulars of the "dashing affair" in which Colonel Keyes "surprised" a Baxotie village within the natural fortress of the Ooblu. The village of Gara seems to have been attacked and carried in gallant style, the enemy having fired first on our advancing troops, who had been led to regard them as not unfriendly. Be that as it may, the village was utterly destroyed, the grain burnt, and the live stock carried off. In spite of all this we are told that the Bazoties have not yet learned their lesson as they should do. Their pugnacity would be admirable if it were turned in some other direction. It is really most ungrateful of them to cherish ill-will against a Power that only burns down their villages and deprives them of every appliance for sustaining life.

THE commission of inquiry into the Bhoze Ghat accident is still sitting. Mr. Knox, agent of the G.I.P. Railway Company, considers that the accident was wholly due to the carelessness of the people in charge of the train. The system of reversing-stations he thought a mistake, and proposed that the trains should run along a triangle instead.

FROM Madras we have further accounts of the installation of the infant Nizam on the 1st of March. Mr. Saunders, Sir Salar Jung, and other officials, rode through the crowded streets on elephants to the palace, where the baby heir of Afzul-ood-Dowlah sat amidst his women, crying as became his years at the strange noises and figures around him. Mr. Saunders and Sir Salar Jung made the usual speeches, and munched betel-nuts together. One thing we are glad to notice; none of the British visitors had to pull off their boots, thanks to the Resident's firmness on that point.

COLONEL MEADE is to be succeeded at Indore by Colonel Daly, a Bombay officer of many years' distinguished service in the Punjab, afterwards an able political at Gwalior, and, says the Friend of India, "an accomplished writer." His successor at Gwalior is Major-general Chamberlain, C.S.I.

WE are glad to hear that the famine works in Rajpootana, which employ thirty thousand people in a tract of country nearly one hundred miles square, will not be in any way checked by the improved condition of affairs. The works will take two years to complete, at a total cost of £155,000.

WHO are these Looshai invaders of Cachar? Their name and language indicate their kinship with the Shans, Siamese, Burmese, Nepalese, and other races of the Turanian stock. Driven out of the Shou or Khyeng country by the pressure of stronger neighbours, they settled for a time in the barren hills that divide Burmah from Bengal. But again a pressure from behind drove them forward on the gardens and factories of Cachar. In the last few years the Looshai villages have advanced about twenty-five miles nearer the British Frontier.

THE controversy regarding Theodore and his cows has not yet done raging. There seems however to be no substantial disagreement between Mr. Rassam's statements and Lord Napier's. Whether the latter accepted the king's offer by word of mouth or by a nod of the head only, is of no consequence either way. Nor does it appear that the acceptance of the gift had ought to do with the release of any of the prisoners. And it is not for a moment to be supposed that Lord Napier had any the faintest idea of trying to mislead Theodore. But it is not unlikely that Theodore misled himself, that he really misunderstood his opponent's message. His parting remark to the German artisans, "I shall need you no longer now that the English are my friends," points to some such inference. We may regret that he should have been so misled, and may feel a touch of pity for the sudden blasting of his new-born hopes. With all his faults the halo of a certain nobleness surrounds the last scenes in his once proud career. But we can hardly blame Lord Napier for unconsciously misleading his enemy in the fulfilment of his own plans and of the promises made to his allies. The misunderstanding on one side or both was untoward, and it might have been more generous to spare Theodore the last humiliation of an almost unconditional surrender. But that is the worst that can be said against the leader of the Abyssinian campaign.

ACCORDING to the Indian Daily News there is much dissatisfaction among Bengal officials at the credit which Mr. W. Hunter or his friends claim for him as an ethnological wonder. The Government, we are told, has openly assailed the author of "Rural Bengal" for imputing to it undue ignorance of the aboriginal tribes within its dominion, and consequent neglect to better their condition. In a "Note" on the subject it declares that such imputations refer to a time long past, and have no ground of truth in the present. The "Note" goes on to deny Mr. Hunter's claim to originality as the author of "A Comparative Philology," most of which is taken from the vocabularies of Hodgson, Dalton and others. We should certainly like to hear more of this alleged production. To the best of our remembrance Mr. Hunter has described himself, in several passages of that remarkable work, as very largely indebted for his materials to the labours of men like Mr. Bryan Hodgson. Is it nothing however to have carefully sifted a heap of confused papers and moulded the precious outcome into precise and scientific forms?

THE project of amalgamation brought forward by Mr. W. P. Andrew at the late meeting of the Sindh Railway Company was put to the vote after a lively discussion, and accepted by a large majority. The chairman, in an able speech, gave excellent reasons for uniting the several branches of the Company, to wit the Delhi, Punjab, and Sindh Railways, and the Indus Steam Flotilla, into one business concern. He showed that such an amalgamation would reduce the average working expenses of the Sindh line from £20,000 to £14,000 a mile, and would ensure the speedy completion of the Indus Valley Railway, so necessary a link in the chain that ought to unite Kurachee with the Punjab and Delhi systems. Both the Sindh and Punjab lines are now starved, he said, for want of the connecting link between Kotree and Mooltan, while the Indus Flotilla was always meant to be employed in aid of all the other undertakings, rather than be worked by a separate company. Among the speakers who sided with the chairman was Mr. G. Campbell, Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces. He found the arguments for amalgamation "overwhelming," and looked forward to the time when a railway in the Euphrates Valley would "complete one of the most magnificent undertakings in the world."

THE BOMBAY ARMY.—The following figures, showing the castes of which the Bombay army was composed on the 1st of January last, will possess interest for many besides our military readers:—Of the native commissioned officers, 580 were natives of India (exclusive of the Punjab), 14 were Punjabees, and 34 were from beyond the Indus. In the first of these three classes there were 16 Christians, 36 Jews, 200 Mahomedans, 75 Brahmins, 53 Rajpoots, 1 Jat, 94 Mahrattas, 9 Gentoos, 26 Purwarrees, and 70 of other castes. In the second class (Punjabees) there were twelve Mahomedans and 2 Sikhs. From beyond the Indus there were 5 Afghans, 2 from the border tribes, 22 Beloochees, and 5 Persians. Of the native non-commissioned officers, drummers, buglers, and rank and file, 22,879 were natives of India (exclusive of the Punjab), 2,147 were Punjabees, 1,024 were natives of Trans-Indus, and 53 were hillmen. In the first of these four great groups there were 256 Christians, 231 Jews, 4,252 Mahomedans, 1,819 Brahmins, 1,497 Rajpoots, 45 Jats, 7,664 Mahrattas, 175 Gentoos, 6 Bheels, 3,159 Purwarrees, and 3,775 of other castes. Among the Punjabees there were 1,132 Mahomedans, 291 Hindoos, 722 Sikhs, and 2 Musbee Sikhs. From Trans-Indus there were 258 Afghans, 148 border tribesmen, 541 Beloochees, and 77 Persians. The hillmen comprise 4 Ghoorkas, 46 Dogras, and 3 other hillmen. The 1st Belooch Battalion is composed almost entirely of Punjabees, Afghans, and Beloochees. In the Infantry, it will be observed, the Mahrattas are more than double the number of any other race; in the Cavalry there are 2,221 Mahomedans, and the Mahrattas and Rajpoots come next, the former numbering 320, and the latter 296.

SLAVERY IN BENGAL.

EVERY now and then the continued existence of slavery in British India gets whispered abroad in some story that looks circumstantial enough for truth, but proves or is declared to be a baseless fiction. The latest story of the kind bears the voucher of the Indian Daily News, and for aught we know may be as true or as false as any of its predecessors. The paper in question affirms that slavery does exist throughout Eastern Bengal, especially in Tirhoot, where "every rich Mohammedan keeps his nuffers, as the slaves are called." These are usually persons for whom a price has been paid, and on whose foreheads the mark of slavery has been stamped. They belong as a rule to the lower castes of Hindoos, and abound in both sexes in or near towns like Dhurbungah and Mozufferpore, where the Mohammedans are well to do. Most of them are bought young from needy parents or kinsmen, are shut up for a time in the houses of their new masters, who feed them well and treat them kindly, and are afterwards left in comparative freedom, which they seldom seek to improve by running away. Good treatment and the force of habit seem to have so strong an influence that most of those who do run away come back again in a few hours. The Chumparun nuffers seem to be worse off as a rule than those of Tirhoot. The mark on their foreheads is pricked in with needles dipped in milk warm from a woman's breast, and warm water dashed with opium is afterwards washed over the wounds. It is affirmed that the masters of these slaves are all Mohammedans. What does the Government of Bengal say to this?

THE MEETING AT UMBALLA.

If first impressions are good for anything, Lord Mayo has certainly begun his new career under a lucky star. Few viceroys have had so early an opportunity of making their mark, as that afforded him in the splendid pageant enacted but a few days ago at Umballa. He has made the best of the good fortune which transferred to him the execution of a task originally destined for Sir John Lawrence. For him was reserved the privilege of welcoming on British ground the reinstated heir to the throne of Dost Mohammed, and of thereby sealing the friendship which his predecessor had already bespoken. And no one can deny that a golden opportunity was never turned to worthier account. Lord Mayo's reception of Shere Ali left nothing to desire. It seems to have been a brilliant performance from first to last; and the exquisite courtesy with which he presented his own sword to the Ameer of Kabul must have gone deep into that sovereign's heart. What words were exchanged between them in those two interviews on the 27th and 29th of March we have yet to learn in detail, but of Shere Ali's contentment with all that passed there seems to be no question. Lord Mayo's personal demeanour, which had already won him so many friends, must have driven home the lessons which the Ameer had been steadily learning on his march from Peshawar; lessons of respect for a power which, wielding a giant's strength, disdains to use it without just cause. The impression thus made on Shere Ali himself ought to work for his and our advantage on the minds of his own countrymen at large.

Nor is there any question as to the wisdom of the arrangement which brought the ruler of Kabul five hundred miles away from his own frontier to a great British cantonment on the road from Calcutta to Simlah. By fixing on Umballa as the place of meeting, Lord Mayo carried out the part of a powerful patron who had everything to bestow and nothing to ask from the prince who came so far to seek his aid. Sir Donald Macleod at Lahore could have done all that was wanted in the way of negotiation, but the reception at Umballa at once gratified the pride of the kingly visitor, and proclaimed his virtual dependence on the goodwill of her Majesty's highest representative. For what more esoteric purpose the meeting was arranged, it were rash to take for granted without further knowledge of what was said and done. It may have been more than the reaffirming of a former policy which circumstances had for some years seemed to set aside. Some of the Russian journals are already regarding it as a demonstration more or less threatening to their own country, and several of our own journals are doing their best to strengthen them in that view. Loud is the crowing in many quarters at the supposed reversal of our recent policy, as implied in the tardy but well-timed recognition of England's interest in Afghan affairs. It is forgotten however that nothing apparently has yet been done by Lord Mayo, which conflicts with the policy proclaimed by Lord Dalhousie, and never in fact ignored by Sir John Lawrence. So far as yet appears, we have only recurred to the state of things that prevailed in the last years of Dost Mohammed, but was non-existent during the long spell of intestine trouble that followed his death. While the sons and nephews of the old Ameer were still engaged in flying at each other's throats, what else in fact could the Indian Government do than wait for the moment when one or another of them had proved his right to our recognition by crushing his opponents? Would Sir J. Lawrence have been justified in enforcing the claims of Shere Ali by an armed interference, in the teeth, it might be, of popular feeling among his countrymen? We had seen enough of that game in the case of Shah Sujah. Sir John's slowness in committing himself to any open support of Azim Khan was a piece of foresight fully justified by the event. Now that a king once more sits in apparent firmness in the seat of Dost Mohammed, we are free to renew the old alliance and to strengthen it as far as we prudently can. How far that should be is a point which Lord Mayo may be trusted, we think, to settle for himself. One condition for settling it seems to us very clear; we would have him put Russia aside altogether, and keep his eye fixed on the sources of danger within and just outside our own frontier. It will be almost time enough to think of Russia when a hostile army is marching on Herat. Enough for the present to deal with difficulties nearer home. If Shere Ali can help us to tame down the turbulent tribes in the hills along the Punjab Frontier, and so save us from the cost and worry of endless small campaigns that lead to nothing, we might afford to double his subsidy, or to pay him handsomely for the service in any way short of an unconditional alliance against either Russia or his own people. But can he ensure us the needful help; and is there no intermediate power, such for instance as the Akhoond of Swa, whose influence among the border tribes would be better worth enlisting on our behalf, than any wielded by the ruler of Afghanistan?

THE BUDGET.

The Englishman cannot refrain from expressing its satisfaction with Sir R. Temple's Budget, a satisfaction in which the whole community will join at the mainly way he has met the difficulties of his position. We do so with the greater pleasure, as we perceive defects both in the manner and the matter of his statement, to which we shall have afterwards to advert. Sir Richard had before him two ways of providing against a deficit. The first was a very easy one, and one which would not have elicited a single audible objection from any class. It was the crude, simple resource of the incompetent civilian financiers who landed India into that abyss of chronic deficit from which Mr. James Wilson, at the expense of his life, dragged her out. Had Sir Richard Temple put only four annas more on salt, he would, so far as we can rapidly calculate it in our head and without the figures before us, have added half a million sterling to the revenue. No class in particular would have opposed the measure, and the deficit would have been made good. But had he done so, he would have simply purchased the goodwill of the higher and represented classes by the misery of the inaudible millions. At present the labouring man on four rupees a month, and with five of a family, pays 1-15th of his whole earnings for the Government monopoly of salt; the clerk with a salary of Rs. 50, and a family of eight persons, spends only 1-86th of his income on the same commodity; and the higher class employé, or small landholder, enjoying Rs. 150 a month, and a household of twelve persons, spends only a 150th. Had Sir Richard Temple put on an additional four annas, the last two classes would not have felt the slightest appreciable difference, and the native Press would have been lost in admiration at a financier who could thus raise taxes which it seemed no person had to pay. On the other hand, the great dumb masses, whose earnings do not exceed four rupees a month, would have felt, in a perplexed and hungry manner, that they had to pay 1-12th instead of 1-15th of their miserable wages for the Salt Monopoly. They would have suffered and said nothing.

But Sir Richard Temple, although a civilian, had learned a different lesson from the great master whom he served. He has had the political courage, a quality which some have hitherto been chary in admitting as a part of his public character, to do justice to the poor who could not complain at the expense of the rich who certainly will. None but those who have minutely studied the esoteric records of Indian statesmanship can suspect how rare such courage is; and if Mr. Wilson's example and teaching, the value of which Sir Richard so affectionately acknowledges, shall prove to have raised up a civilian financier worthy of the name, he will have done as much for the Indian service which never appreciated him, and indeed has never forgiven him, as he did for the country at large.

THE NEW DIVORCE ACT.

The Friend of India holds that Mr. Maine has added to his reputation alike by the Act Amending the Law Relating to Divorce and Matrimonial Causes and by the speech in which he expounded the whole subject. A Divorce Act may seem a doubtful cause of gratitude to those who hold, like ourselves, the Christian though not the Sacramentarian theory that nothing but adultery can justify divorce, and that the adultery of the man ought to be recognised by the law as no less effective for this purpose than that of the woman. But Mr. Maine has at least placed Christians in India in the same position as those in England, and he has opened a door of relief in cases of undoubted wrong, while he has to some extent improved on the English law, though with indefensible inconsistency he refuses to carry the principle farther, and make that which he believes to be moral, though not expedient, also legal. Lord Mayo was even more inconsistent, for his Excellency seemed to say that he saw little inexpediency in making adultery in the man a ground of divorce, but thought it inadvisable to go farther in India than Parliament has done in England. Now, if Mr. Maine's career and utterances as a legislator have been marked by one merit greater than another it is this—that he has always recognised India and its Christian residents as a fine field for legislation absolutely just in itself, instead of that which the precedents and prejudices of centuries, as well as the intense selfishness of the legislators, force Parliament to give to England. This very measure illustrates his willingness to improve on the English Act by introducing, from the New York Code, a provision which protects the legitimacy and property rights of the children of a marriage contracted in good faith but declared to be null. We suspect that Mr. Maine's refusal to harmonise the law with morality, even at the expense of the most pernicious form of expediency which corrupts society, was not dictated, like Lord Mayo's similar inconsistency, by a regard to Parliament, but by the difficulties which beset him as a pure English lawyer. Surely a profession so fertile in expedients, and a jurist who has vindicated his claim to one of the highest positions in that profession, could have provided securities against that risk of connivance and collusion to which the recognition of adultery in the man as a ground of divorce, it is said, would lead. Sir Barnes

Peacock, true to the principles of morality and justice in this, as Lord Macaulay and he were in their refusal to punish, under the Penal Code, Asiatic wives guilty of adultery—because in a society marked by polygamy and the reduction of women to a position of disgraceful inferiority the contract is so unequal—would certainly have found expedients to meet the danger, and the experiment was worth trying. But this open proclamation, by Parliament and the Indian Legislature alike, of the superiority of a doubtful expediency to acknowledged moral principles, is only another evidence of the encouragement of that canker worm of sensuality which is eating into the vitals of society, destroying our manliness, defiling our purity, and transmitting an ever-increasing burden of temptation and disease to our children.

THE MEETING AT UMBALLA.

The Indian Daily News lectures the Friend of India because, after giving a sort of showman's programme of what is to be done at Umballa, and the "deep historical importance" of the event about to take place there, its contemporary indulges in a most unworthy sneer at the late Viceroy. This comes with a very bad grace from such a source; and it may well be doubted whether the present ruler will feel it a special compliment to be the grave-digger of his predecessor's policy. "So much for masterly inactivity, slain by its own parent and about to be buried by his successor." The unworthy sneer at Sir John Lawrence, intended to be conveyed by this remark, is on a par with the miserable toadyism which it implies towards his successor. We much mistake if Earl Mayo would claim credit for the course of events that has brought his Highness the Amcer Shere Ali Khan to British territory, and rendered life once more interesting to profound observers. Lord Mayo, not yet two months in office, knows perfectly well that it is not the events of the last two months that have made Shere Ali a visitor amongst us. And he knows equally well that a policy of masterly activity might, and in all probability would, have had a much less satisfactory issue. The event is not only "one of considerable military splendour and deep historical importance;" it is one with some political significance about it; and it is the accident of time only that has brought the event within the reign of Earl Mayo. This alone shows how unworthy is the sneer at "masterly inactivity slain by its own parent, and about to be buried by his successor." Observers of public events ought to be above the parroting habit of repeating unmeaning and indefinite phrases; and they should be all the more cautious when the obligations of their observing faculty might be coupled with a grateful remembrance of past favours.

NEW SANITARIUM FOR INDIAN INVALIDS.—We have been informed that the authorities at home contemplate making either Algoa Bay or Natal a sanitarium for invalided soldiers of the Indian Army, and that a gentleman has been sent to both places to report on the nature of the climates and their fitness for the purpose contemplated. If the choice be confined to Algoa Bay or Natal, we should think the latter would stand the best chance.—Natal Mercury.

SIR R. TEMPLE'S BUDGET.—There was a large assembly at Government-house, on March 6th, to hear the reading of the Budget for 1869-70. The ordinary meetings of the Legislative Council draw very insignificant audiences, except when those especially interested in some particular measure occupy the usually vacant chairs set apart for the public, but on Budget days the Council-room has generally been inconveniently crowded, and Sir Richard Temple characteristically took care to secure the largest auditory ever yet gathered together on such an occasion for his first display of financial wisdom. The large upper hall of Government-house was temporarily occupied by the Council, and accommodated nearly five hundred persons, including several ladies. The statement was remarkably lucid and straightforward, and not unsatisfactory. The deficit of 1866-67 was £2,517,491, that of 1867-68 was £1,007,695, and that of the current year is estimated at £970,471. To prevent this in the coming year, the Certificate-tax is to be changed into a one per cent. income-tax, to apply to fundholders and landholders as well as others. This is expected to yield £900,000, against £520,000, this year's produce of the Certificate-tax. Thus a surplus of £52,650 is estimated for next year, the revenue being put at £49,340,840, and the ordinary expenditure at £49,288,190. Adding money borrowed for reproductive works, the whole expenditure will be £52,853,990. The amount of new loans is two millions, to be raised by the Secretary of State, of which half a million is for renewal of old loan in England; half a million to be raised in India by debentures of short terms not exceeding twelve months, to replenish the cash balances; half a million for renewal of debentures in India; and two millions proposed to be raised according to such instructions as the Secretary of State may give. The total amount of all loans is thus five millions, of which three and a half millions are for new debt, one million for renewal of old debt, and half a million to supplement possible temporary deficiencies. A Bill for income-tax has been introduced into the Legislative Council, and will be discussed on Thursday. A slight revision of the customs tariff, with a view to reduction of tariff valuation for certain articles, has also been introduced. On the 11th the Council was to assemble to discuss the Budget.

THE ATTACK ON THE BEZOOTIES.

In order somewhat to facilitate Colonel Keyes' incursion into the Bezootie country from Kohat, a strong demonstration was contemporaneously made from the Peshawur side. On the 24th two companies of the 36th Foot, the 3rd and 19th Regiment N.I., two squadrons of the 19th Cavalry, a company of sappers, two Armstrong guns, and some levies, moved out to Fort Mackeson, arriving there at nightfall. At 3.30 A.M. the troops moved to Eymul Chabootra. Three companies of the 3rd N.I. and a squadron of cavalry were detached to contain the Bussee Kheyl Afreedies, while the rest of the force entered the Kohat Pass, and occupied the village of Akbur. It was explained to the people that no harm was intended to them, but that our troops must have passage towards the Bezootie and Othman Kheyl territory. The force accordingly proceeded some two miles and then halted, the object being not to strike any independent blow, but to distract attention from Colonel Keyes' operation from Kohat. This effect it no doubt produced. Hundreds probably were detained from collecting on the skirts of Colonel Keyes' detachment by the apprehension of an attack by the larger force which was threatening them from Peshawur. At one o'clock P.M. the force retraced its steps to Fort Mackeson, where it arrived on the evening of the 25th, and finally returned to Peshawur on the morning of the 26th, having been entirely unmolested on its whole route.

Successful as Colonel Keyes' inroad on the Bezooties was, it is hardly to be correctly described as a surprise. In fact, it is we who, in one respect, were surprised. The chastisement was actually given to a village for which it had not been originally intended. It was intended for Dana Khoola, but fell upon Gara. The Mullicks of the so-called "friendly Bezooties" who accompanied the party had assured Captain Cavnari and Colonel Keyes that no opposition was to be apprehended from the people of Gara, which is the first village within the natural fortress of the Oobun. As the force approached Gara the Mullicks were sent ahead to warn the inhabitants that no harm would be done them unless provoked by their own conduct. Nevertheless, when Colonel Keyes came up he found the villagers busy removing their cattle and families, and the force had no sooner got within range than some shots were fired at it. The village was then attacked and carried at once. A considerable number of the enemy were killed on the spot—Captain Cavnari shooting two with his own hand—and the entire village destroyed, the grain burnt, and all the live stock carried off. As the fugitives from Gara had taken the direction of Dana Khoola there was clearly no chance of surprising the latter place, and accordingly the detachment returned, having inflicted probably ten times as much loss as it suffered, and, above all, having "lifted the purdah" of the Oobun, the virgin fortress, whose strength and inaccessibility had defied Coke and his successors, and been confidently vaunted all over the hills as a nut that would always be too hard for British cracking.—Pioneer, March 5.

Miscellaneous.

ACCIDENT TO CAPTAIN W. RUSSELL.—We regret to observe that Captain Watts Russell, of the 60th Rifles, has met with a painful accident by a fall from a buggy, resulting in fracture of the knee-cap.

THE BEZOOTIES.—A trustworthy correspondent at Peshawur thinks that notwithstanding Colonel Keyes' late "dashing affair," the Bezoities are not likely to remain long quiet. The tribe is large and powerful, and we have had repeated proofs of their boldness.

LIEUTENANT FARMER.—It is considered probable that Lieutenant Farmer, of the 60th Rifles, may obtain the apparently much coveted appointment of Brigade-Major to the newly enrolled Railway Volunteer Corps.

LUCKNOW.—Sir George Couper, Bart., C.B., has arrived at Lucknow, and resumed the office of Judicial Commissioner of Oudh, which he vacated some time since, upon being appointed a member of the Legislative Council.

THE GOVERNORSHIP OF THE PUNJAB.—On dit Sir Henry Durand and Sir Richard Temple are in the field as candidates for the Governorship of the Punjab, when Sir Donald McLeod's tenure of office expires, in January 1870.—Delhi Gazette.

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA.—The public will be glad to learn that a train was on Monday, the 8th March, successfully taken across the Boree, on the G. I. P. line, now pushing on towards Raichore. The works have thus been carried in this direction 320 miles from Bombay.

COMPLIMENT TO COLONEL KEYES.—In congratulating the Commissioner of Peshawur, Colonel Keyes, Captain Cavagnari, and all connected with the recent expedition from Kohat, the Punjab Government characterises it as "one of the most dashing affairs attempted on the frontier for many years past."

OFFICIAL CHANGES.—Colonel Daly is appointed to officiate as Agent to the Governor-General for Central India, and Brigadier Crawford Chamberlain succeeds Colonel Daly as Political Agent at Gwalior. Colonel Willoughby Osborne, C.B., the Resident at Bhopal, is compelled to proceed at once to England in consequence of impaired eyesight.

PUNJAB TRADING COMPANY.—The shareholders of the Punjab Trading Company—in one shape or other almost the oldest mercantile association in the N.W. Provinces—have determined to put the concern under voluntary liquidation. The Pioneer says it is hoped that about Rs. 30 a share may be eventually returnable to the shareholders after satisfying all outside creditors.

BRIGADE COMMANDS.—We observe it stated that the Commander-in-Chief, in consideration of the late rapid promotion of comparatively young men, which deprives the army of the services of some of its ablest and most experienced officers, has renewed his recommendation that a discretionary power be granted to retain in command such Major-Generals as are promoted while serving as Brigadiers until they have completed their five years' tour—they consenting, however, to receive only their former pay.

EFFECTS OF DROUGHT IN THE PUNJAB.—A gentleman writing to a Calcutta contemporary, regarding the drought this year in the Punjab, and comparing it with that of 1837, says, that just before the late rains there was no water in the Ravee, and that he had ridden up its dry bed for forty miles. The dry beds of Indian rivers in certain seasons, more especially in the south, are not unfamiliar, but near the great mountains and water sheds the fact is more remarkable.

THE PERSIANS ON THE HELMUND.—The Persians, says the Indian Daily News, are known to be advancing in force alone the line of the river Helmund—their object being to firmly establish themselves as masters of Seistan. Until they assail Herat, there will be no treaty causes of complaint against them; but possibly (thinks our contemporary) when Shere Ali's hands are a little less full than at present, he will consider it necessary to ask the people what they want in the territory of Afghanistan.

LAHORE AND PESHAWUR RAILWAY.—We see it stated that the line of railway towards the north-west from Lahore is not likely to be actually commenced until next cold weather. The line has had its exact direction fixed only as far as Goojranwalla, forty miles from Lahore. Actual work will not be begun until detailed estimates have been sanctioned. The cost of the first section of this line will go far towards determining which of the two, Government engineers or railway companies, can construct such works cheapest.

THE WAHABEES.—The Calcutta correspondent of the Pioneer has the following regarding the Wahabees at Delhi:—Mr. Reilly has pushed his Wahabee investigations pretty far. He has had arrested at Delhi a tolerable lot of suspects, through whose hands the money subscribed was forwarded on to Peshawur, and a goodly number of similar arrests at the latter place are likely to follow. It now appears certain that few or no Mahomedans of position, or even of native middle-class status, are implicated in the conspiracy. It is, however, just as certain that the money subscribed was sent across the frontier to the fanatics, who are now, it is said, located in Swat. The present investigations, and the prosecutions resulting from them, will, it is not unlikely, put an end to remittances to our friends "over the border."

AZIM KHAN.—It is said that the ex-Ameer Azim Khan designs to make his way to Seistan, and possibly thence to Persia or Bokhara, instead of joining his son Isak Khan in Turkistan. The people of Door had become uneasy at his prolonged stay there, lest it should expose them to the vengeance of the Ameer; and Azim Khan had in consequence moved some stages off into the country of the Mahsood Wuzerees.—Pioneer.—The Ameer of Afghanistan has offered a reward of Rs. 10,000 for the capture of Azim Khan, and the same for that of Abdool Rahman Khan.

UNCOVENANTED FURLOUGH RULES.—In reply to numerous anxious inquirers, the Englishman announces that the furlough rules for the Uncovenanted Service, and the Secretary of State's despatch thereupon, have been referred by the Government of India to a committee, of which Mr. Clive Bayley is President, and the members are Messrs. Batten and Monteath, of the Civil Service; Colonels Bacon and Malleson, of the Staff Corps; and Messrs. G. S. Fagan, H. Woodrow, G. W. Kellner, and A. B. Sampson, representing respectively the Judicial, Educational, Financial, and Public Works Departments of the Uncovenanted Service.

KILLED BY A TIGER.—We (Jubbulpore Chronicle) regret to hear that a few days ago a man, or rather two men, were killed by a tiger, near Narayangunge, on the Mundla Road. A report was brought to Baboo Risalooldeen, a Malgoosar of a village near Narayangunge, that a tiger was near, and that a shikaree had partially wounded it. The Baboo went out with his gun on foot, and just as he and his men were looking for the beast, it suddenly attacked the Baboo on the right shoulder and mauled him terribly. The tiger then attacked the shikaree, and left him only when the people in a body came running to help. The Baboo foolishly stayed in the village for two days, during which he had no medical attendance. He was brought to Jubbulpore almost in an insensible state, four days after he was mauled by the tiger; he died the day after. The shikaree also has died since.

THE UMBALLA DURBAR.—Lieutenant-Colonel C. F. F. Chamberlain, C.B., Commandant of 23rd Pioneers, would, it is said, be attached to the suite of Ameer Shere Ali during his visit to the Governor-General. We observe that the 7th Hussars from Sealkote were directed to march to Lahore to assist in the display there on the occasion of Shere Ali's arrival. It appears that both the 3rd Buffs and the 41st Foot were to form part of the military display at Umballa. There would thus be present nearly five regiments of European Infantry and two of European Cavalry, besides two batteries of Horse and one of Foot Artillery, one regiment of Native Cavalry, and at least three of Sikhs or Goorkhas—a force, remarks the Allahabad Journal, more imposing still from its composition than its number, though this will hardly fall short of 10,000 men. It is to be hoped they will have found water.

BOXER CARTRIDGES.—The supply of Boxer cartridges made about two years ago for service in India labour, according to the Englishman, under several serious disadvantages. In the first place, the cartridges have been so packed that the iron base of one rests on the exposed lead of the cone of the bullet of another, and the result is a deterioration of the lead, which must be destructive to the accuracy of the flight of the missile. In the next the metal lining, composed of copper and tin, is found to yield to the action of the nitre in the powder to an extent which makes the use of the cartridges absolutely dangerous, since the escape blows the breech of the rifle out. Lastly, the lubricating composition between the metal and paper linings is found not to resist the influences of an Indian climate. It dries rapidly, a fault which of course makes it worthless. A committee will shortly be appointed to investigate the deterioration of these cartridges. The matter is of sufficient moment to render it desirable that there should be no needless delay in its settlement.

ODD CUSTOMS IN ARRACAN.—The following peculiar customs of the people of the Ramree District, in Arracan, are given to the Arracan News by Captain W. C. Plant, now Deputy-Commissioner of Myingone:—1. A father-in-law may not jest or laugh with his son's wife. 2. A father-in-law may not touch the hand of his son's wife; in presenting her with a cup of water, cigar, or anything else, he must place it down near her, and then she may take it up. 3. An elder sister, younger sister, and younger sister's husband going together in a boat, and the elder sister falls overboard and is drowning, the brother-in-law must not save her with his hand, but may try to do so with a bamboo; on no occasion may he touch her with his hand. 4. A man leaves his own village or island, gets married in another, and returns with his wife, who is enceinte, the babe must not be born inside the village, but in a shed or house erected for the purpose outside the village. 5. If a man die on the last day of the month he must be buried at once. 6. The corpse of one month must on no account be left unburied at the commencement of the next month. 7. No burial to take place on a Wednesday. 8. If the last day of the month is Wednesday burial may take place. 9. Two men die on the same day in the same village, one in the morning, the other in the evening, the evening corpse must be buried first, or, if taken to the burial-place together, must precede the morning's corpse in the procession. 10. If a stream run through the village, and separate the houses of the two persons who died the same day, the corpses may be buried independently.—Madras Mail, March 4.

Madras.

MILITARY GOSSIP.—It is stated that Lieutenant-Colonel F. Roberts, v.c., will succeed Major C. C. Johnson as Deputy Quartermaster-General at Army Headquarters in Bengal. There is a strong probability, the Pioneer hears, that Colonel Sam Browne, late of the Guides, will succeed Brigadier D. M. Stewart in the Peshawur command upon the latter obtaining his Major-generalship. It is also likely that Colonel Probyn will obtain the commandantship of the Central India Horse on his return from furlough. There would seem no prospect open to General Stewart but one of inglorious ease for a considerable period, as, under ordinary circumstances, he can scarcely succeed to a command for some years. We learn that Mr. Conder, of the Great Northern Railway, has been appointed general traffic manager of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, and that he expected to arrive by the mail steamer due on the 21st March. Major General Travers is to officiate as Major-General commanding the Meerut division, vice Major-General Harris, transferred to the Allahabad division, and brought permanently on the establishment. Colonel Milne, formerly Commandant of the 1st N.L., is to be Brigadier General at Dinapore, vice Brigadier General Bouchier, transferred to the Eastern Frontier district.

THE KOHAT FRONTIER.—A Peshawur correspondent sends the Pioneer the following account of the march of the Peshawur column towards the Kohat frontier:—"On the 26th February a force, composed of all arms of the service, marched from Peshawur to Fort Mackeson, and before daylight next morning struck into the hills, beyond a large village called Akhor, in the direction of Kohat. No European had ever been there before, and the politicals appeared to be somewhat at fault (no wonder) as to the precise locality of the place they wished the force to proceed to. But as the object of the movement from Peshawur was only to create a diversion in favour of Keyes' column from Kohat, it succeeded admirably. Fortunately the Afreedies allowed us to march for about three miles into the interior of the hills and back again without molestation. I say fortunately, because to every one present with the force it was evident that a force of 1,500 men (the strength of the column) was too small to inflict any material injury on the tribes of that part of the mountain. But as the infliction of punishment was not the object, the strength of the force did not much matter, except in so far as our self-preservation was concerned. The march itself was indeed most dangerous, and had the Afreedies taken it into their heads to offer any resistance, they might have made the place much too hot for us. Our route lay along the dry bed of a river, filled with huge stones and boulders, and commanded on either side by steep cliffs, to storm which would have required better lungs and firmer footsteps than any of the troops present possessed, clad as they were according to the orthodox regulation system. However, our work was done—and well done, though we gained no glory—for since our return we have received intelligence of the complete success of Keyes' raid from Kohat, to which our movements are said to have contributed in no small degree."

DEPARTURES FOR LONDON.—It is currently reported that Lady Napier and Master Napier will proceed by the first P. and O. steamer to England in May next, and that Archdeacon Dealtry and family will proceed by the same opportunity.—Madras Standard.

THE SAPPER CORPS.—At the request of the Commander-in-Chief the local Government have forwarded to the Government of India a letter from the Adjutant-General, requesting an early decision on the question of the assimilation of the Madras Sapper Corps with that of Bengal.—Madras Athenæum, March 5.

OFFICIAL.—Colonel Barrow, R.A., the Inspector-general of Ordnance, is about to proceed home on furlough, Lieutenant-colonel A. T. Cadell is to act for him, and this notwithstanding that Colonel Hay Campbell, the superintendent of the gun carriage manufactory, is the senior officer.—Madras Mail.

MADRAS PIER.—The work of repairing the Madras Pier has, we observe, at last commenced. A Madras paper mentions that one of the new piles has been screwed down, and a second is now nearly in. It appears that the European workmen struck work one day last week, on account of some disagreement regarding their wages. More liberal terms having been offered, the men resumed their work.

OPERA AT MADRAS.—Madras as well as Calcutta is having an opera. A Madras paper says:—"Some French artistes, who bring excellent credentials, are now in Madras, and propose to give a series of operatic representations in the Banqueting Hall next week. We have seen in a Paris paper a notice of Madame Cassade, the prima donna of the party, that speaks in high terms of her artistic abilities."

GUINEA GRASS IN SOUTH CANARA.—Mr. Thomas's experiments on the cultivation of guinea grass in South Canara have been successful in two respects. The grass has grown luxuriantly, namely, from four to six feet high, and when sold fetched double the price of the next best dry fodder in the district. These facts seem to promise that future efforts will succeed where the past have failed. We look forward to seeing the crop "pay" financially, and to hearing of a large extension of its cultivation among the natives. The Government have asked Mr. Thomas to continue his experiments.—Madras Athenæum.

THE LATE NIZAM.—The Bangalore Herald does not observe the rule De mortuis nil nisi bonum in referring to the late Nizam. It says:—"From the date of his accession he never moved beyond the city. He has not, like other Indian princes, made his mark in Indian history. A voluptuary, a 'perfect nonentity,' as we have heard him described, he had not even the sublime and passionate feelings Lord Byron makes Sardanapalus to possess. True, he managed so far to assert his own identity as to lend his assistance to that peevish opposition that has tried before now to cast Sir Salar Jung from the Premiership. . . . The late Nizam may be described as a man whom none regret, none respected, and none loved. It is hard to speak thus of one who now lies cold and dead in the grave. Let us draw the curtain of forgetfulness over his memory, and hope for better things from his successor."

ARRIVAL OF TROOPS FROM BURMAH.—The coasting steamer Punjant, towing the British ship Cospatrick, arrived here from Burmah at nine o'clock this morning, with the right wing of the 16th Regiment Madras Native Infantry, consisting of 2 European officers, 7 native officers, 1 warrant officer, 271 non-commissioned rank and file, 11 public followers, and 41 private followers, and also the headquarters and left wing of the 30th Regiment Native Infantry, consisting of five European officers, 7 native officers, 324 non-commissioned rank and file, 8 women, 15 children, 1 hospital assistant, 18 public followers, and 89 private followers. The parties landed in the afternoon. The 16th marched direct to the Monument Esplanade, to be encamped there till the 8th instant, when orders will be given for them to proceed by rail to Tadpatry, and from thence to march to Bellary on the 11th idem, to join the headquarters of their regiment. The 30th, on landing, proceeded by extra train at five o'clock to Bangalore, en route to the French Rocks, their present garrison station.—Madras Athenæum, March 4.

INSTALLATION OF THE NEW NIZAM.—On Monday, the 1st of March, Mir Mahbub Ali Khan Bahadur, the infant son of the late Afzul-ud-Dowlah, was installed by the Resident as Nizam of Hyderabad. The child is a fine looking, healthy boy, and fair-coloured, about two years and a-half old. The heads of departments from Secunderabad assembled at the Residency to breakfast, and about noon, Mr. Saunders, the Resident, and Captain Tweedie, the Assistant Resident, followed by the assembled officers, drove to Sir Salar Jung's house, from which the party, nineteen in number, went to the palace on elephants. The streets were lined with people, and near the Sukha Houz their numbers were very great; the Char Minar square was filled, and the street leading to the palace densely crowded, even in going, but by the time the Resident returned, the streets leading to the route were filled as far as the eye could see. The numbers looking on were variously estimated at from fifteen to thirty thousand people. All through, alike going and coming, the people looked interested, but were silent, and only an occasional salam was observed to be made to any of the cortege as they passed along. After alighting at the gate of the palace grounds, as the Resident approached the house, he was met by Sir Salur Jung, and other nobles, who conveyed the British officers by a devious route to the Dewan-Khanah, where the infant was sitting, supported by cushions, with his women servants near; the crush and noise were great, and the infant was fretting at the uproar; but he was kept amused by a watch and a musical box, and considering the confusion he was wonderfully quiet. Mr. Saunders made a speech, to which Sir Salur Jung replied, expressing the desire felt for the friendship of the British nation, mentioning the long period of amity between the two nations, and the longing for its continuance. To this Mr. Saunders rejoined with the remark that such would no doubt be the case, and the distribution of the betel leaf packets closed the ceremony, the Resident, and his officers returning as they had come.

EXPORTS OF COTTON FROM THE CENTRAL PROVINCES AND THE BERARS.

The following report to the Secretary to the Chamber of Commerce, Bombay, has been placed at the disposal of the press:—

Sir,—I have the honour to forward for the information of your Chamber the usual statement of cotton exports from the Central Provinces and the Berars. The return has been made out for the three weeks ending Feb. 21, so as to compare more easily with the statistics of last season.

2. The quantity sent down this season as compared with the exports of former years continues to be unusually large. The full-pressed bales, half-pressed bales, and dokras exported up to Feb. 21 may be taken to represent about 124,000 bales, or about one-half of the total annual exports, against 49,500 bales sent down during the same period last year. But the season that commenced so early will, there can be no doubt, close unusually soon.

3. During the last few weeks the high quotations from home have brought a large quantity of cotton into the market. There is much still in the villages, but the general opinion is that the great want of rain has materially affected the Berar crops. There the rain ceased in August, and the cotton was altogether deprived of the "later rains" on which the plant so much depends. The second and the third pickings have thus been affected, and the effect will, I fear, be felt in the out-turn and exports. On the other hand, the cotton harvest in the Wurdah Valley has been a favourable one, and this will help to make up for any deficiency in the Berar supplies.

4. It may be convenient to mention here that although the Dak Bungalows at Khangaum is not yet quite finished, comfortable quarters have been finished for travellers in the Serai. The Government of India have recently sanctioned a tonga dak between Nandoorah and Khangaum, and Sheagaum and Khangaum, and this arrangement, besides improving the mail service, will be a boon to travellers who will be able to get seats on the mail carts.—I have, &c.,

HARRY RIVETT CARNAC,

Cotton Commissioner for the C.P. and the Berars.

Nagpore, March 1, 1869.

Miscellaneous.

H. E. LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA was about to leave Bombay, in order to attend the grand durbar at Umballa. He was accompanied by Colonel Dillon.

ALI MOORAD.—The correspondent of a Sindh paper states that Meer Ali Moorad has refused to accord his sanction to the Roree-Hydrabad Canal passing through his territory, and the Commissioner has (very properly, we think) declined to see him.

THE SCOTTISH ORPHANAGE.—We are glad to learn that the Director of Public Instruction has recognised the Scottish Orphanage at Mahim as a High School, teaching up to the University matriculation standard.

MR. JUSTICE TUCKER.—We hear it said that the Honourable Mr. Justice Tucker is likely to be appointed to act as a member of the Executive Council of his Excellency the Governor of Bombay during the absence of the Honourable Mr. Ellis, at the seat of the Supreme Government.

EARTHQUAKE AT BUSHIRE.—A telegram was received at Kurrachee on the 2nd March to the effect that a severe shock of earthquake had been felt at Bushire the day before, and that the stations of Gwadur and Jask had been visited by heavy gales, accompanied by heavy showers of rain.

MR. F. MATHEWS.—We learn that Mr. F. Mathews, chief engineer of the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway, proceeds to England about the end of April next, and will remain there about three months on business connected with the railway. Mr. D. Richmond, deputy chief engineer, will act for him during the period of his absence.

CONTAGIOUS DISEASES ACT.—We learn that the Government of India has sent final orders to the Bombay Government for the introduction of the Contagious Diseases Act in that city. It is expected that the Act will be brought into operation soon, though no date has yet been fixed. For the present it is deemed desirable to apply it only to the presidency town.

LORD NAPIER.—According to the Madras Athenæum, "Lord Napier of Magdala, the Commander-in-Chief of Bombay, makes it a rule not to dine as a public guest at any mess, because he says he 'won't put the youngsters of a regiment to ten or twelve rupees additional expense.' But he has no objection to dine at the mess with the commanding officer as his private guest, on condition that there should be nothing different from ordinary nights; and we also hear that the officers have—at any rate in some instances—had the wit to take him at his word, paid him the real compliment of believing he meant what he said, and of being willing to pay respect to his views instead of the false compliment of forcing upon him a parade which he had declared he did not wish for."

DEPARTURE OF MAJOR GRAY.—Major Gray left for England, on the 10th March, in the Krishna, on leave. The loss of an able, single-minded, and clear-sighted official from the ranks of our military financiers, even for a time, is always serious in India. Major Gray is more than this; he is a fine soldier whom misfortune deprived at once of an arm, left on the ramparts of Mooltan, and of an active military career, for which he was eminently fitted and gifted. The State has gained by the accident which has diverted his attention to a branch of his service in which his energy, enlarged views, and unflagging industry have always been as reliable as they were invaluable. It is to be hoped that two years in England will restore him to health, and nerve him for years of efficient watch and ward over our military purse-strings.—Times of India, March 13.

POONAH.—We observe that an address is in course of preparation in Poona for presentation to the Ven. the Archdeacon, on his approaching departure.

H.M.S. "FORTE."—H.M.S. Forte, Captain Alexander, arrived in Bombay on Saturday morning, the 7th March. She relieves the Octavia, which for three years past has been the flagship of the East India station. The Octavia left Bombay under command of Captain Alexander, who returns with her to England. The Forte left England on the 1st October, and sailed as far as Trincomalee, from whence she steamed to Bombay. She touched at Madeira, Sierra Leone, the Cape, Trincomalee, and Galle. She remained three weeks at the Cape, and sailed thence on the 2nd January—the same day as that on which H.M.S. Galatea, Captain H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, left for Melbourne.

SHIPPING NEWS.—H.M.'s Indian troopship Malabar left Bombay for Ceylon on the 9th March, from whence she will bring H.M.'s 59th Regiment to Bombay. The Windsor Castle and Sam Mendel have been chartered for the conveyance of soldiers in ill-health to England via the Cape of Good Hope, and it is expected that the former will sail from Bombay on the 16th inst., and the latter on the following day. The Windsor Castle will carry 133 invalids, 18 women, and 34 children who are now at the general depot. The officers are Captain Stockwell, 2-10th, Captain Remington, Bombay Staff Corps, Lieutenant Malcolm, 2-10th, Assistant-Surgeon Waters, 82nd, and Assistant-Surgeon Anderson, R.A. The Sam Mendel will carry 80 men from Bombay and Poona, 12 women, 17 children, 24 lunatics, and 4 convicts. The officers in command will be Captain Hutton, 1-23rd, Lieutenant Lloyd, 1-23rd, Lieutenant Hughes, 1-25th, and Assistant-Surgeon Howard, R.A. A detachment of convalescents is expected to arrive here from Kamptee on the 15th March, and will proceed per the B.I.S.N. Co.'s steamer Sattara to Beypore, en route, to Wellington. The strength of the detachment is 90 men, 7 women, and 12 children. Captain Taylor, R.A., is in command, and Assistant-Surgeon Keith in medical charge.—Times of India, March 13.

HORSE ALLOWANCE TO CAVALRY OFFICERS.—The Government of India has decided that the horse allowance as at present passed shall not be withdrawn from a cavalry officer (of the old cavalry), even though only doing general duty; and further that, if a cavalry officer is appointed to a regiment under the new organisation, when his combined staff pay and staff corps pay is less than the cavalry pay of his rank, he is to be considered entitled to draw the latter, whether his appointment is an officiating or a permanent one. G.O.G.I. No. 1,168 of Dec. 10, 1868, is equally applicable to acting and permanent employment.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

NEW MOUNTAIN TRAINS, ROYAL ARTILLERY.

Feb. 19.—No. 203.—It having been decided that two mountain trains, to be manned by royal artillery, shall be maintained in the Bengal Presidency, the Rt. Hon. the Governor general in Council is pleased to sanction the under-noted establishments for each of these batteries, subject to the approval of her Majesty's Government as regards the complement of British soldiers assigned.

2. These trains will consist of 6 mountain guns, a garrison battery, raised to the requisite strength, being attached to each.

3. The establishments now sanctioned for these batteries will admit of their proceeding on service with a light equipment at the shortest notice, and with this view a complement of baggage mules will be permanently maintained, under the charge of the officers commanding the batteries:—

British Establishment.—1 captain, 1 2nd captain, 3 lieutenants, 1 asst. surgeon, 1 sergt. major, 1 qrmr. sergeant, 1 farrier sergeant, 6 sergeants, 6 corporals, 6 bombardiers, 2 trumpeters, 72 gunners. Pay and allowances as with a field battery.

Drivers' Establishment.—3 havildars of drivers, Rs. 10 each; 3 naicks of drivers, Rs. 8 each; 112 drivers, Rs. 6 each.

Command and Staff Allowance.—Battery command allowance, as with a field battery; hospital sergeant, ditto; pay sergeant and savings' bank clerk, ditto; horse allowance, ditto; mess allowance, ditto.

Educational Establishment.—As with a field battery.

[Here follows the subordinate medical and fixed hospital establishment.]

Contract Allowance.—Allowance for repair of arms and accoutrements, Rs. 20; allowance for medicines and stable requisites, Rs. 20; contingent allowance for 6 guns and carriages, at Rs. 7·8 each, Rs. 45; Ditto for 1 spare carriage, Rs. 5; ditto for repair of 86 ammunition and store boxes, leather, at 4 annas each, Rs. 21·8; ditto for repair of harness and gear of 112 battery mules, at Rs. 2 each, Rs. 224; ditto for repair of 4 saddles, at Rs. 1 each, Rs. 4; ditto for shoeing 112 battery mules, at Rs. 1 each, Rs. 112; ditto for shoeing 4 yaboo or ponies, at Rs. 2 each, Rs. 8; ditto for shoeing, gear, and repair of pack saddles of 66 baggage mules, at Rs. 2 each, Rs. 132; ditto for repair of 23 lascars' pails, at 12 annas each, Rs. 17·4.

4. The Right Hon. the Governor general in Council is also pleased to authorise a revised establishment and equipment for the Hazara and Peshawur mountain train batteries of the Punjab frontier force.

5. The armament of each of these batteries will consist of 4 mountain guns, with the following establishment:—

1 commandant, with pay and allowances as at present; 2 subalterns, ditto; 1 subadar, pay and allowances according to class, as at present; 1 jemadar, ditto; 1 havildar major, Rs. 20; 1 pay and qrmr. havildar, Rs. 20; 4 havildars, Rs. 16 each; 4 naicks, Rs. 12 each; 2 trumpeters, Rs. 8 each; 60 gunners, Rs. 8 each; 2 havildars of drivers, Rs. 10 each; 4 naicks of drivers, Rs. 8 each; 85 drivers, Rs. 6 each; 8 muleteers, Rs. 6; 1 farrier, Rs. 9.

Educational Establishment.—1 moonshee, Rs. 10.

PROBATION FOR THE STAFF CORPS.

Feb. 18.—No. 199.—The following military letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 1, dated Jan. 6 last, is published for general information:—

Military.—No. 1.

India-office, London, Jan. 6, 1869.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

Sir,—I have considered in Council your Excellency's letter dated the 10th of October, 1867, No. 387, paragraph 1, submitting your proceedings, showing that you have determined that, under no circumstances whatever, shall the period of probation for the staff corps exceed a second twelve months.

2. The circumstances of the case, out of which the question thus decided has arisen, are as follows. was appointed 2nd wing subaltern of the , on probation for the staff corps, from the 30th of August, 1867; and, almost immediately afterwards, he obtained six months' leave of absence to Calcutta, from the 10th of October, 1867, to the 10th of April, 1868, to enable him to study the native languages, as he had not passed the examination by the higher standard in Hindustani. On the 8th of April he was granted an extension of three months for the same purpose, to the 10th of July.

3. In the meantime, your Excellency referred to the Secretary of State the question whether the period of probation in a military appointment required to qualify an officer for admission to the staff corps should include leave taken in India, and Sir Stafford Northcote decided that all leave, except privilege leave, should be excluded from the year's probation, but that the date of final admission to the staff corps need not be affected on that account.

4. At the conclusion of his nine months' leave of absence , having up to that time failed to pass the examination, applied to have his period of probation extended for six months; and the C. in C. pointed out that such an extension, making the period of probation thirteen months, would, with the addition of his nine months' leave, be equivalent to a period of twenty-seven months' probation in the case of this officer.

5. Your Excellency thereupon directed that, if did not pass the examination within two months (his twelve months' probation having nearly expired), he should be remanded to his regiment and struck off the list of probationers, and you determined that in no case should the period of probation exceed a second twelve months.

6. I quite concur in the action which your Excellency has taken in this matter. In permitting leave of absence to be excluded from the period of probation, it was obviously not contemplated by Sir Stafford Northcote that a case might occur in which leave would be granted for the express purpose of studying to pass the examinations, and that, by the exemption of this leave from the twelve months' probation, the period for qualifying might be considerably extended. Leave of absence, if granted to a probationer for the purpose of study, must be held to count as part of the year's probation.

7. It is evident that such a case can only occur when an exception is made to the general rule that an officer must pass in the higher standard before he can be admitted as a probationer. In that event, however, it may be a question how long an officer should be allowed, for purposes of study, to be absent from his regiment, where he has other duties of which he must have learnt the due performance before he can be qualified for the staff corps.

8. In approving of your Excellency's decision that a second period of twelve months' probation shall in no case be exceeded, I desire that, except under very special circumstances, the existing regulation should not be departed from, namely, that the period of probation shall be limited to one year, at the end of which the candidate, if not qualified for admission to the staff corps, must be remanded to his regiment.—I have, &c.,
 ARGILL.

FURLONGS TO WARRANT OFFICERS.

No. 207.—The following military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 8, dated Jan. 13 last, is published for general information:—

Military.—No. 8.

India-office, London, January 13, 1869.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

Sir,—Your despatch, dated Aug. 18, 1868, No. 313, relates to the question whether the furlough regulations of 1868 shall be made applicable to the warrant officers, and to certain other questions connected with the pay and allowance of those officers.

Having considered the suggestions made by you, I have decided—

1. That the furlough rules of 1868 shall apply to all warrant officers holding veteran or honorary commissions, the period of service qualifying for furlough being calculated from the date of the attainment of the commission. These officers will receive, during furlough, half their total receipts, without any reference to a minimum or maximum rate.

2. That conductors and sub-conductors shall only be entitled to a furlough on sick certificate. The furlough will be for two years, and half of aggregate Indian allowances will be drawn during that period. Any leave on sick certificate, not exceeding one year, granted in extension of the two years, or leave taken within less than three years from date of last return to duty, will be on English furlough pay only.

I approve of the proposal that warrant officers appointed to act for those of a higher grade who may be on furlough shall receive the half of the aggregate allowances of the absentees, added to half the aggregate of their own allowances.

I approve also of permanent conductors, who have hitherto been in receipt of the old staff salary of Rs. 75 a month, being still allowed to draw that amount.

Your letter has no reference to the officers of the subordinate medical department, but, should your Government propose to include them, it is desirable that they should be expressly mentioned in the general order which will be issued on the receipt of this despatch.—I have, &c., ARGILL.

Under the authority conveyed in the last paragraph of the foregoing letter, it is hereby notified that the provisions of the rules now notified will be equally applicable to warrant officers, and those holding the honorary rank of assistant surgeons in the subordinate medical department.

MIXED DETACHMENTS.

No. 243.—In order to provide for the performance of the staff duties of a mixed detachment of European and native troops formed for active service, the strength of which is not less than 500, and not more than that of a native infantry regiment, an officer shall, if there be no regimental staff officer present, be appointed for the discharge of such duties on a staff salary of Rs. 100 per mensem.

This order is not intended to supersede, or in any way interfere with the conditions of G.G.O. No. 495 of 1851, which, under certain circumstances, authorise a higher rate of staff pay for the performance of detachment staff duties.

PROFICIENCY IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.

Feb. 24.—No. 237.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to notify that the following additions, to take effect from March 1, 1870, will be made to the tests required for certificates of high proficiency:—

Hindi.—The Second Book of the Ramayan.

Urdu.—Masnaviyat of Sonda, as contained in Dr. Lee's Edition of Extracts from the Kubyati Sonda, pages 56 to 83.

It is further notified for general information that the test books for the examination of officers in the lower and higher standards, under the rules laid down in the following general orders, will remain as at present, no changes being considered necessary:—G.G.O. No. 734, of Sept. 9, 1864; G.G.O. No. 794, of Aug. 17, 1865; and G.G.O. No. 814, of Aug. 24, 1865.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

CLAIMS TO ABYSSINIAN BATTA.

Bombay Castle, March 10.—No. 183.—Claims to Abyssinian donation batta which may be preferred by officers and men of the late expeditionary force, now in England, should be preferred on the India Office, duly supported by the following declaration from individual officers :—

"I hereby declare that I am entitled to six (6) months' donation batta as a in the lately serving with the Abyssinian expeditionary force, at the rate of Rs. per mensem, and that I have not received the same, either in my own person, or through my agents in India; and I engage to refund any sum, which may be issued to me erroneously, in consequence of payment being made at the India Office in anticipation of the receipt of the usual rolls from India."

All claims for payment in India should be preferred, duly vouched, before May 31, 1869, and any neglect of this order, except in cases where compliance can be proved to have been impracticable, will be held sufficient reason for negating future claims.

ARRIVAL OF OFFICERS FROM FURLOUGH.—The undermentioned officers returned to duty by permission of the Secretary of State for India on the dates specified :—Major J. H. S. Pierce, staff corps, wing officer 24th N.I., Feb. 21; and Major F. T. Cornwell, staff corps, March 1.

FREE PASSAGE TO OFFICERS DISMISSED.—It has been ruled by the Government of India that in all cases in which free passage is given to officers who may have been removed from the service by sentence of court martial, or who may be permitted to resign the service to avoid trial, a fixed sum of £87 should be granted to them as hitherto, to enable them to make their own arrangements for securing a passage to England.

THE QUEEN'S LEVÉE.

By command of the Queen a Levée was held on Saturday, April 3, at St. James's Palace, by his Royal Highness Prince Arthur, on behalf of her Majesty. Presentations to his Royal Highness at this Court are, by the Queen's pleasure, considered as equivalent to presentations to her Majesty. The following were among the presentations:—

Lieut. col. A. Bunny, on return from India, by the Duke of Cambridge.
Lieut. D. Darroch, Bengal staff corps, by the Secretary of State.
Mr. G. Duff, M.P., on appointment as Under Secretary of State for India, by the Secretary of State for India.
Col. Field, on receiving the honour of C.B. and appointment of Aide-de-Camp to the Queen, for services in Abyssinia, by the Secretary of State for India.
Lieut. col. W. J. Gray, on promotion and return from India, by the Duke of Cambridge.
Major Higginson, by Secretary of State for India.
Mr. W. B. Jones, by the Secretary of State for India.
Major W. M. Lees, by the Secretary of State for India.
Sir C. Mills, on being created a Baronet, by the Secretary of State for India.
Major R. Robertson, by the Secretary of State for India.
Capt. W. H. Yates, on promotion and return from Abyssinia, by the Secretary of State for India.

THE SCINDE RAILWAY COMPANY.

An extraordinary general meeting of the above company was held at the London Tavern, on Tuesday, March 30, W. P. ANDREW, Esq., chairman, presiding, for the purpose of considering a resolution for the purpose of authorising the directors to obtain an Act of Parliament empowering the company to amalgamate the several undertakings into one, at such time after the passing of the Act as the proprietors see fit.

The CHAIRMAN said: The object for which this meeting has been convened is a very extraordinary and a very important object, inasmuch as to-day will be ensured the future prosperity of your undertaking. If the meeting is extraordinary I am happy to say that the almost unanimous support of the policy of the directors is equally extraordinary, for I have received no less than 1,110 proxies in favour of the resolution which I have the honour to submit to you to-day, and how much capital do you think these proxies represent? Why £1,693,000, and what do you think I have received adverse to the proposition? why only one, representing £200. (Hear, hear.) When I state that I have received 1,110 proxies in favour of it, I put on one side two or three hundred which arrived too late; but they also were in favour of it. It is a policy so obviously for your good that I think it should recommend itself thoroughly to your common sense, and had it not been for what transpired on a former occasion it would be scarcely necessary now to trouble you with any observations on the subject; but as we have had 1,500 additional shareholders of late who cannot be supposed to be so well acquainted with the position of the company as those whom I have had the honour of addressing for so many years, I think it will be agreeable to you if I make one or two remarks on each undertaking. I will, first of all, advert to the origin of the company when you were invited to become partners in each of its separate sections. You will remember that the countries in which your operations were to be carried on had then been but recently acquired. We were dependent entirely on the plans and estimates of Government when we constructed the Scinde Railway, which we did under most disadvantageous circumstances, and it cost in consequence a very large sum. There were difficulties arising from the want of labour, which we had to procure from distant provinces, and even from Persia and from China, in consequence of which the cost of construction was very largely increased, and the results impaired in proportion. To these we have to add the unfortunate delay in the prosecution of the works for the improvement of the harbour of Kurrahee. Again, the inefficiency of the native river transport, combined with the difficulties of the navigation, affected seriously the estimates originally formed, and whilst the cost was considerably enhanced, an adequate traffic did not come on to the line. The vote which you are invited to give to-day, and which if you are in the least alive to your own interest you will give with unanimity, I shall regard as an omen of the future prosperity of all your undertakings. (Hear, hear.) By the amalgamation contemplated in the resolution submitted to you, the cost of the Scinde Railway, which averages £20,000 a mile, will be reduced to an average of £14,000 per mile, and we shall get rid of that heavy permanent charge upon your working expenditure to which we are subjected by the maintenance of nearly twenty-five miles of sidings at Kotree, which are necessary under present circumstances for the accommodation of the traffic, which is here interrupted by the absence of that link of communication between the upper terminus of the Scinde and the lower terminus of the Punjab Railway, which imposes upon us a serious delay in forwarding our traffic, and grievously enhances our working expenses. No doubt the Scinde Railway is, as it has often been described by me, and by others, the "spout of the funnel" through which the traffic of the Indus, of Upper India, and Central Asia must pass. This, no doubt, is one of its great advantages; but if we would hope to derive the full benefit of that favourable situation, we must endeavour to secure the best means for increasing the volume of that traffic, for which an outlet to the ocean is thus prepared. That is alone to be secured by a junction with the railways of the Punjab. (Hear, hear.) Now as to the Indus Steam Flotilla, it always has been my intention to give the shareholders in the Flotilla an equivalent amount of stock in the Indus Valley line in exchange. The Flotilla was constituted with the object of assisting all the undertakings, rather than as a permanent company, although the period when it should cease to be a separate undertaking was dependent on circumstances which could not be determined. It was a necessity of the situation. We could not do without it; and it will be long before we can dispense with it or some similar assistance; and if we are entrusted, as we hope to be, with the construction of the line between Kotree and Mooltan, familiarly known as the "missing link," you must employ the Flotilla in the conveyance of material and machinery; or if you dissolve it to-morrow a fleet of similar capacity must be organised. With reference to the Punjab Railway, I know many gentlemen here are holders in the Punjab Railway only, and have no interest in the other undertakings, and are quite at liberty to say, "I selected the Punjab because of certain advantages I thought attached to it. Why should I be burdened with the Flotilla?" There can be no doubt the Punjab has its advantages. Undoubtedly it is easily worked and a cheap line, but it is to be remembered that it is starved in its traffic for want of a connection with your lower line; but when this is accomplished you will have a great development of traffic and a most profitable undertaking. Then I come to the Delhi line, and if any one of your undertakings is distinguished above the others for the advantages it possesses it is this, for it will have uninterrupted railway communication with the ocean, by its junction with the East Indian Railway. It will possess an access to the sea certainly, but it will be an access entirely dependent upon another company, which being a line constructed at a very large cost must, of necessity, impose upon its traffic a correspondingly high rate. The Delhi line will cost £15,000 per mile; it passes through a populous and fertile country, and by its connection with the Punjab lines and through communication to Kurrachee, will have the advantage of possessing two ports, whilst the average cost of its construction will be reduced by this amalgamation. I may be told that whether we are entrusted with the missing link or not that line will be made, because it is necessary, and will be made by Government; but I beg to say that nothing could be more injurious to the whole of your system than that either the Government or a separate company should make it. If the Government were to decide to make this line it would be impossible to speculate when it would be completed. The Government undertook many years since to make a road to Peshawur, the watch tower of India, and not a single bridge has been built on that road, whilst this company, in the prosecution of their works, have been the first to bridge any of the celebrated "Five Rivers" of the Punjab. Some of you may say, "This amalgamation is not a fair thing. You ask us to enter into one agreement, and now you ask us to enter into another." Well, I admit it. I now ask you to cancel your agreement, and to accept that which I offer for your acceptance, and which provides additional security for the prosperity of your general undertaking, at the same time preserving in its integrity the guarantee now enjoyed by everyone of the parts which constitute it. The plan which I propose is perfectly simple and straightforward. My proposition is that you exchange your shares in the Delhi, the Punjab, the Scinde, and the Indus Steam Flotilla for shares of the amalgamated company; and when I ask you to do that, I only ask you to do that which I believe will greatly improve your individual interests, as well as the collective interests of the whole undertaking. By this means you will place yourselves in the best position for obtaining an early concession for the line between Kotree and Mooltan, by which the several sections of the great highway of communication in your hands will be united in one continuous railway. The project is, therefore, one which is fraught with the utmost importance to you in a financial point of view—one which will prove of enormous benefit to India, and will conduce to the prosperity of the mother country. (Applause.) I will not detain you longer, but will conclude by moving the following resolution:—

Mr. ALEXANDER DEVAUX seconded the motion.

Mr. FLEWER said when he became a shareholder in the Punjab, it was in the belief that the cost would be low, and the traffic enormous, and that the guarantee would be exceeded by the results of the working. The Delhi, they were assured, would also be a great success on its own merits. He could hardly imagine how the directors could take upon themselves the responsibility of the amalgamation.

Mr. MINTON thought some further details were necessary in order to enable them to arrive at a just decision, and he considered a delay of some period desirable.

A SHAREHOLDER said the question had not been fairly put by the proprietors who had spoken; they were not asked to amalgamate, they were simply asked to give their consent to a Bill "empowering" them to amalgamate upon some future occasion, if the proprietors should think it conducive to their interests. It had been his misfortune to be connected with many undertakings, but he never was associated with one which was conducted with greater ability and integrity than this company. He saw one of the largest merchants in the City of London present at that meeting, and he knew that he entertained the same views—he having in fact seconded the resolution—and he would venture to say that they who entered into any one of these undertakings did so simply because it was a five per cent. guaranteed stock. (Hear, hear.) They had a safe five per cent. guaranteed stock, and if they desired that it should ever realise any surplus beyond that five per cent. it must be by endeavouring to bring about the completion of their undertaking. The directors were deserving of their highest confidence for the management of their affairs in the past, and the proprietors would, no doubt, by their resolution that day express their trust in them for the future. By all means let them have unanimity in supporting the policy of the directors.

Mr. ROBINSON objected to the amalgamation altogether. They were told the Bill was only permissive, but he said don't give them the power.

Mr. JAMES MACDONALD, as a proprietor of the Delhi only, said he could not refrain from stating to them that he was entirely in favour of the Bill being taken to Parliament. (Hear.) It was purely a permissive Bill—he could see there were great advantages to be secured by it, greater economy of management and greater efficiency of control, besides other advantages. He could not for one moment admit the charge against the directors of a dereliction of duty in sending out forms of proxy; on the contrary, it would have been a very unfair proceeding if the general body of shareholders had not been represented on so important a question, and the directors would have been greatly to blame. (Hear.) From what he knew of Indian affairs, having passed nearly a quarter of a century in that country, he believed he was consulting his own interest in assenting to this measure. They had never had reason to regret the confidence they had always reposed in their chairman, and he saw no reason why they should mistrust him in the future.

Mr. A. TYLOR, as a large shareholder in the Delhi, gave the proposed amalgamation his most cordial support. He believed that it was only by an amalgamation that the entire undertaking could be made profitable, and that all the sections, although collectively they possessed intrinsic elements of profit, had been depreciated in consequence of their being split up into fragments. In reference to the proxies which had been alluded to, he entirely approved of the course adopted by the board. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. GEORGE CAMPBELL (Chief Commissioner, Central Provinces, India) thought there could be no difference of opinion as to the great disadvantage under which all undertakings laboured where they consisted of a great diversity of interests. They had an extraordinary illustration of the truth of this in the unfortunate position of the London, Chatham, and Dover, where, if he remembered rightly, as many as thirteen different interests were contending. In the undertakings before them no doubt certain speculative advantages were relied upon by investors in the choice or selection of one or other of them; but the estimate of the distinctive value of each as derived from the market quotations—that is, of the Delhi, Scinde, and Punjab stock—was a fractional half per cent. He, for himself, preferred the Delhi; but as to the Punjab, he thought it was the worst, and would never pay beyond the guarantee until it was united by a continuous railway with the ocean at Kurrachee. He considered the arguments in favour of the amalgamation overwhelming. He should be glad to be informed by the chairman, however, whether the Government guaranteed 5 per cent. upon the Steam Flotilla stock, as it did upon the others; for if that was the case he could not see any possible objection to the measure proposed; for whether regard was had to the interest of the Flotilla or the Punjab Railway, the amalgamation was desirable in itself as conducing to concentration of management and consequent economy, and was clearly in the interests of the several companies. He trusted that on this amalgamation the Government would authorise them to construct the railway between Kotree and Mooltan, which was so necessary to give value to all the undertakings. The harbour of Kurrachee would then prove of the highest importance as a supplemental harbour to that of Bombay, which, excellent as it was, nevertheless possessed many defects, and the through route by the Western coast to India carried out by the Euphrates Valley to the Mediterranean would complete one of the most magnificent undertakings in the world. (Cheers.)

A PROPRIETOR said it appeared to him very remarkable that proprietors in the Scinde, Punjab, and Delhi Railways should express such readiness to join themselves with the Flotilla.

A SHAREHOLDER said: Reference had been made to the Indus Flotilla. The capital of that company was £500,000, which he hoped with the rest of the undertakings would return more than the amount of the guaranteed interest after the construction of the missing link. The total capital would then probably be £20,000,000, but without that missing link the upper line would depend upon the East India line; but when the continuous line was completed, the whole traffic of Upper India would pour down the lines of this company. It was of the highest importance they should retain the Flotilla, for without it they could not complete their enterprise. At the present moment it was necessary to carry on the traffic, and they must have that or another Flotilla during the construction of the missing link; but the capital of £500,000, which was the capital of the Flotilla, was perfectly insignificant as an objection to the amalgamation, regard being had to the total capital of £20,000,000. It would be satisfactory to the meeting if the chairman would give them some idea of the relative proportion of the proxies sent in by the shareholders in the different companies.

The CHAIRMAN here read a statement of the proxies which had been received in favour of the Amalgamation Bill. Excluding those proxies which had been sent in too late, 1,110 proxies had been received in support of the directors; the capital which they represented being thus distributed among the several undertakings:—Scinde, £331,849; Flotilla, £173,815; Punjab, £371,936; Delhi, £837,956; total, £1,715,556. Only one proxy had been sent in to oppose the amalgamation, and it represented £200 of capital. The several undertakings were represented in fair proportions. The Government held upwards of £80,000 in the Flotilla, and had given a proxy in favour of the amalgamation.

The PROPRIETOR continued: The proxy which the Government gave to the chairman was a guarantee of their concurrence, in his opinion, in favour of the Flotilla as an essential part of the undertaking. He was a Delhi shareholder, and found that unless the interest of that line were to depend entirely on local traffic, the proprietors must look to the through traffic—to the consolidation into one of all the separate systems. They knew the influence of the Government, and they also knew that the making of the missing link would, in a great measure, depend upon the assistance to be derived from the Flotilla. They had all heard the favourable opinion of gentlemen acquainted with Indian affairs, and he had the utmost confidence in the good judgment and prescience of their chairman, who, as the old Indian postmaster, had foreshadowed the great undertaking which they were now present to consolidate, and was justly considered the father of railway enterprise in India; and he unreservedly gave his vote in favour of the resolution. He hoped not only to see the chairman complete the railway from Kurrachee to the North-West, but that he might soon be in a position to bring forward his great design for a railway along the Valley of the Euphrates. (Cheers.) In conclusion, he could not imagine any sound ground for a mere fractional value in market prices to interpose an objection to so important a measure as the proposed amalgamation.

Mr. W. MACKINNON, in an energetic speech, cordially supported the policy of the chairman and directors, and considered the arguments which had been used, or rather the objections which had been made, for he could not call them arguments, in opposition to the resolution were futile, and quite unworthy of serious consideration.

Mr. JOHN FLEMING said it had been clearly proved that there could be no prospect of profit beyond 5 per cent. without the construction of the missing link.

Mr. COOKE suggested that it would be well to withhold the final decision until a committee had been appointed to investigate the whole matter. (Cries of "No, no.") The character of the chairman stood too high for them to imagine that any other motives than the best interests of the proprietors had induced him to recommend this arrangement for their adoption. (Hear, hear, and cries of "Divide.")

The CHAIRMAN said: I pass by as wholly unworthy of my notice the unfounded, and I may add, ungentlemanly remarks which have been made in reference to myself. I am, however, exceedingly obliged to these speakers, since, but for their remarks, I should not have the satisfaction of being indebted to gentlemen, entire strangers to me, for the spontaneous and independent expression of their good opinion. (Cheers.) In doing so I pass on to matters of more importance than those which relate to myself. In submitting this amalgamation for your approval I beg you to bear in mind that I am also a shareholder myself, and I should not recommend it for your adoption unless it was for the interest of all, and not for the benefit of any exceptional interest. I beg to state, for the information of the meeting, that the same Government guarantee of 5 per cent. is tendered to the capital of the Flotilla, as to the other undertakings of this company, and that the shareholders in the Flotilla are entitled to the same privilege as the proprietors in all the others of getting back, if they should feel disposed to do so, the whole of their capital at par; and if we were to carry out the amalgamation between the three railway companies, and leave the Flotilla out in the cold, we should be put to the greatest inconvenience, and it would render the construction of the missing link perfectly impossible. You must bear in mind that the East Indian Railway Company had the advantage of a better river navigation, conducted in better boats, and by more skilful boatmen; that there were also steamers of private companies already established on the Ganges; and yet notwithstanding all these advantages they were under the necessity of taking a leap out of our book, and organising a "Flotilla" of their own for the construction of their railway. As to the proxies, I shall certainly feel it my duty to use them if necessary, and indeed every influence I can to carry out this measure, which I believe to be for the best interests of the company. (Hear, hear.) Let it not be understood that by saying so I intend to thrust this measure down your throats. The Bill is simply a permissive Bill. Do not raise false issues. Your unanimous consent to this measure will have a great moral effect. You will have ample time to decide upon the period when, and the terms upon which to carry out this amalgamation. I can have no other possible object than to promote the prosperity of this great work. When I first submitted this undertaking, it was indeed small in its beginning, and I then told you it would in the end grow up to be a great work, for carrying passengers and merchandise from the remotest frontier of the Indian empire down to the sea. (Hear, hear.) I should deeply regret if the opposition of a mere handful of shareholders, whom I may characterise as "busybodies," and who, I venture to say, do not hold collectively as much interest in your undertaking as stands in my own name alone, should restrain you from giving your assent to a great measure like this.

Mr. FREWER, interrupting: I hold as much as the chairman.

Mr. FREWER: £500. (Laughter.)

The CHAIRMAN: That is on a par with your other observations. I represent nearly £70,000. (Hear, hear.) Gentlemen, I have no interest except your own. I am also inspired by the desire to secure the permanent success and prosperity of this undertaking, and I shall devote my best endeavours to bring it about in a manner most agreeable to those who have hitherto shown such confidence in me. I desire the weight and influence which the unanimity of your vote on this occasion will give me in the further prosecution of the work I have in hand; I trust you will express that unanimity heartily and cordially. (Cheers.)

The resolution was then put and carried, there being only about half-a-dozen hands held up against it.

The CHAIRMAN: The resolution is carried by a very large majority. (Cheers.)

Mr. W. MACKINNON then proposed and Mr. MORRICE seconded the following resolution, which was put and carried unanimously:—

"That this meeting, believing it to be of the utmost importance to the company's existing undertakings that early steps should be taken to unite the several sections of railway in the company's hands in one continuous line, are of opinion that as soon as the Amalgamation Bill now before Parliament shall have become law, the directors should take the earliest opportunity of convening a meeting of the proprietors for the purpose of considering the propriety of exercising the powers to be conferred by the Bill, with the view of placing the company in the best position for obtaining an early concession for the line between Kotree and Mooltan."

A cordial vote of thanks to the chairman was then voted by acclamation; and that gentleman having briefly acknowledged the compliment, the meeting separated.

Miscellaneous.

LORD LAWRENCE'S PATENT OF PEERAGE.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent, dated Whitehall, March 27, to be passed under the Great Seal granting the dignity of a baron of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland unto the Right Hon. Sir John Laird Mair Lawrence, Bart., G.C.B., G.C.S.I., lately her Majesty's Viceroy and Governor-General of India, and the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten by the name, style, and title of Baron Lawrence, of the Punjab and of Grately, in the county of Southampton.

AGRA BANK.—The Agra Bank (Limited) and the committee of shareholders of the Agra and Masterman's Bank (Limited) have respectively issued their reports, to be presented on the 14th of April. The former announces the payment of dividends completing the preferential dividends arranged by the articles of association to be paid out of profits for two years, and states that £3,136 remains to be appropriated in augmentation of the assets of the Agra and Masterman's Bank. The report of the committee of shareholders of the latter shows that the assets have not realised so much as was expected, but still congratulates the shareholders that by the arrangements with the resuscitated Agra Bank they were enabled to meet their liabilities without the pressure of heavy calls.

EAST INDIA LAND, CREDIT, AND FINANCE COMPANY.—The ordinary general meeting of the East India Land, Credit, and Finance Company was held on March 31, at the London Tavern; Mr. J. Carrington Palmer in the chair. The report stated that an additional £20,000 would be paid on the 5th of April, being at the rate of £1 per share. The prospects of the company were improving, and the directors hoped to be able to repay a considerable proportion of the remaining realisable capital to the shareholders within the present, or early in the ensuing year. The chairman expressed an opinion that sufficient would be received of the £140,000 out on leases to enable them to make a return of £1 per share, in addition to the £2 already returned, and to the £1 to be returned on the date above mentioned. The report was adopted.

EQUIPMENT OF TROOPS FOR INDIA.—The Secretary of State for India having represented to the Secretary for War that regiments have not unfrequently embarked from this country for India with portions of their equipment in an unserviceable condition, Mr. Cardwell has concurred in a regulation by which the surveying officers of the India and War Departments shall arrange for the replacement of any stores which they may find at their inspection to be unserviceable. As, however, it is important that the responsibility for the equipments of a regiment being in proper condition should rest with the commanding officer, it is to be understood that this course has only been sanctioned upon the condition that officers commanding regiments under survey shall sign a joint report with the surveying officers to the effect that the replacement of any particular store has been found absolutely necessary.

THE VACANT GOOD SERVICE PENSION (£100 a-year) has been awarded to that highly-distinguished and deserving officer, Colonel William Olpherts, V.C., C.B., Royal Horse Artillery, Indian Army. Concentrating, as Colonel Olpherts has done, the unbounded commendations of such brothers in arms as the late Sir James Outram and the present Lord Napier of Magdala, and many others of the highest military character with whom he served, the appointment does great credit to Lord Mayo and the Duke of Argyll. We hope it will be but the precursor of still higher honours in rank and emolument. It will be remembered that last autumn the nobility and gentry, aided by all ranks of the county and City of Armagh, presented Colonel Olpherts, on his return from India, with a splendid sword of honour, at a grand banquet in recognition of his gallantry and services. Some of the subscriptions still remaining in hand, it is intended to present Mrs. Olpherts with a handsome bracelet.—Belfast News Letter.

SERVICES OF GENERAL MORGAN, C.B.—General John Morgan, C.B., died on Monday, 29th ult., aged eighty-four. He entered the army in 1800. He served with the army of the Deccan in the first Mahratta campaign of 1803-4, and with Colonel Doveton's field force in pursuit of Maheputrow in 1807-8. He served with Colonel Close's army in Hindostan and Nerbudda in 1809-10; with Colonel Dowse's field force in the Southern Mahratta country and Concan in 1812-13; also with the Hyderabad subsidiary force in the operations against the Pindares in 1815-16. At the latter end of the year 1816 he joined the Nagpore subsidiary force against the Pindares; again served with the Hyderabad subsidiary force in 1817, and in the second Mahratta campaign in pursuit of the Peishwah in 1818. His commissions bore date as follows:—Ensign and Lieut. July 20, 1801; Captain, June 7, 1813; Major, September 8, 1826; Lieutenant-colonel, December 24, 1831; Colonel, November 10, 1843; Major-general, June 20, 1854; Lieut.-general, January 27, 1858; and General, May 27, 1866.

THE MAILS, &c. (SOUTHAMPTON, April 3).—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's screw steamship Poonah, Captain R. Methven, sailed to-day for Gibraltar, Malta, and Alexandria, with the India and China mails, a general cargo, and 401 boxes of specie, &c., value £123,677. 14s. 4d., consigned as under:—For Galle—gold coin, £515; watches £25. For Bombay—bar gold, £10,000; gold coin, £3,500; bar silver £25,000; dollars, £5,000; jewellery, &c., £662. 17s. For Madras—sovereigns, £5,000; gold and silver coin, £1,500. 4s.; gold thread, &c., £1,448. For Calcutta—bar silver, £30,000; watches, £110. For Shanghai—dollars, £15,515; watches, £490. For Yokohama—watches, £120. For Hong Kong—dollars, £24,791. 13s. 4d. The Poonah takes out fifty-three first and twenty-six second class passengers, and twenty-eight proceed by the corresponding steamer from Marseilles, making a total of 107, among whom are Staff Assistant-surgeon Eager, for Ceylon; Adjutant James Ferguson, for Rangoon; Dr. J. Robb, Staff Surgeon J. Kelly, Colonel C. W. Moore, and Ensign A. Campion, for Bombay; Col. and Mrs. Woods, Assistant-surgeon F. H. Ilenkinsop, Captain F. Horsley, Staff Assistant-surgeon P. Fraser, Colonel E. Miller, Assistant-surgeon W. E. Wright, and Lieutenant W. F. Wigston, for Madras; Lieutenant-colonel and Mrs. Baird, Staff Assistant-surgeons Martin and Jackson, Dr. J. MacGregor, Assistant-surgeons E. R. Johnson and K. M. Downie, Ensigns, Richardson, T. Wade, and R. Dick, for Calcutta.

INDIAN MUTINY RELIEF FUND.—The report of the Committee of the Indian Mutiny Relief Fund for the year 1868 shows what have been the past operations of the fund, and the transactions that have occurred during the twelve months ending December 31, 1868. The balance-sheet shows that the balance brought forward from December 31, 1867, is £174,144. 9s. 11d. Interest on securities, £6,206. 18s. 11d.; repayment of loans, £400 — total, £180,751. 8s. 10d. The payments for the year were as follows:—By relief granted during the year, £15,228. 12s. 3d.; by expenses of management, viz., advertisements, £5. 5s.; salaries, £361. 4s. 2d.; stationery and printing, £18. 2s. 5d.; rent of offices, £50; stamps, postages, and charges on post-office orders, £65. 1s. 4d. Total of payments, £15,728. 5s. 2d. Thirteen annuitants and six children were placed upon the fund in the year 1867. On the 31st of December last there were on the fund in all 163 widows and other relatives of officers in the United Kingdom; ditto in India and the colonies, 36; widows and relatives of soldiers, &c., in the United Kingdom, 537; ditto in India and the colonies, 29; orphan children in educational establishments, 114. Total recipients of the fund, 879. During the year 1868 28 new applicants were admitted on the fund, and seven orphan children placed at educational establishments at an additional expenditure of £710. 12s. The committee are, it appears, now called upon to pay (additionally) annuities to widows and allowances to orphans residing in Scotland, numbering in all 131, as the funds collected in Scotland and reserved for that purpose by the Edinburgh committee have become exhausted.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, April 1.—INDIAN FIELD OFFICERS.—Col. SYKES asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether there was any and what foundation for a statement at page 16 of the Home News of the 19th March that the Council of India had rejected the schemes of Col. Norman and Col. Broome for the relief of the finance of India by facilitating the retirement of field officers for whom there was not employment; and whether the Council contemplated the reduction of the charge for unemployed field officers in India.—Mr. GRANT DUFF said that, subject to the obvious correction that the "Secretary of State in Council" should be substituted for the "Council" in each of his hon. and gallant friend's questions, his answer to both was in the affirmative. If his hon. and gallant friend would move for the correspondence he was ready to give it him as an unopposed return.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, April 2.—DONATION BATTA—ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.—Viscount ENFIELD asked the First Lord of the Admiralty whether the crews of the hospital, steam and other transports engaged in the late Abyssinian expedition were not entitled to receive the donation batta for their services; and, if not so entitled, whether he would state the grounds for such refusal.—Mr. CHILDERS said that on the 15th June, 1868, the Treasury informed the Admiralty that a six months' batta donation would be granted to the troops and naval forces engaged in the Abyssinian expedition. No authority was given to give batta to the merchant seamen. The charter-parties under which the ships were engaged as transports contained no stipulations as to the wages of their crews, which were paid by the shipowner, Government having nothing to do with them.

HOUSE OF LORDS, MONDAY, April 5.—GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA BILL.—This Bill passed through committee with some amendments, chiefly of a verbal character.—The Duke of ARGYLL called attention to a new provision repealing the obsolete clauses in the Act of 1833, requiring Europeans resident in India to have passports or permits from the Governor-General; but at the same time giving the Council in India power to deal as they might think fit with the evil of vagrancy, which has become very serious since a large number of navvies and others have been employed in the construction of railways in India.—The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH said that he believed the greater number of English vagrants in India are discharged soldiers.

GRIEVANCES OF INDIAN OFFICERS.

The Broad Arrow would ask the authorities to reconsider the claims which certain officers of the new line regiments and artillery have repeatedly urged upon their attention. Those claims may be summed up in a few words:—"Permit us either to enter the Indian Staff Corps in accordance with the promise made to us in 1866, or to revert to our old position on the cadres of the local service." The real strength of their case rests on the repeal in 1866 of certain clauses in the Amalgamation Order of April, 1861. They had originally "volunteered" for general service, if volunteering can be deemed a synonym for "Hobson's choice" between the new line regiments and certain ruin. Excluded from the Staff Corps by the terms of the original Order, and driven from the local service by the inevitable working of those terms, what else could they do? The gleam of a better day dawned upon them when Lord Cranworth's Commission condemned certain clauses in the Warrant of 1861 as a breach of Parliamentary pledges, and Lord Cranborne followed up the condemnation by issuing the amended Orders of 1866. Announcing on the 7th August the repeal of the clauses which had hitherto barred the entrance of many officers into the Staff Corps, and destroyed the prospects of the local service, his lordship promised that "all officers who belonged to the Indian Army before the amalgamation should be allowed to join the Staff Corps without test or condition whatever." It was easy enough to make the promise, but how has it been fulfilled? In the face of so formal a pledge it was idle to maintain that the officers of the non-purchase corps had irrevocably made their choice in 1861. But how did the Indian Government get over the difficulties involved in this cancelling of former rules? They simply issued fresh orders, which shut against non-purchase officers the very door of escape so lately opened to them. The blow was dealt indirectly, but it took effect, nevertheless. By the edicts of December, 1866, and of August, 1867, no officer in the new Line regiments of more than seven years' standing could enter the Staff Corps, although far older officers in the purchase regiments have since found their way into the coveted sanctuary. Thus it happens that many men of the highest qualifications and the longest experience have been doomed to see their just hopes once more blasted by something very like a deliberate evasion of a solemn pledge. Very awkward, no doubt, it might have been to admit a new supply of old officers into a service already overstocked with such. But no considerations of any sort should have been allowed for a moment to interfere with the fulfilment of a bargain already made. And this reminds us of another instance in which the promise made to the ear has not been kept in the performance. It is certain that the right of Indian officers to the money value of their commissions on retirement forms part of the "rights, privileges, and expectations" guaranteed to them by the Act of Amalgamation. The giving of a regimental bonus to an officer willing to retire was formally sanctioned, as every one knows, by the Court of Directors in 1837, years after the practice had grown into a regular system. The very Commissioners of 1863 affirmed that such a practice "was certainly acquiesced in by the East India Company." In 1866, Lord Cranborne accepted the principle of compensation for the lost "privilege," by decreeing that every officer should be refunded the sums he had actually spent in buying out his seniors. This was, in fact, an evasion of the larger claim to compensation not for money spent, but for the "bonus" or money's worth of an officer's step on retirement. It was generally accepted, however, as better than nothing, in the full belief that it meant something tangible, however small. The Indian Government was for interpreting the concession in a generous spirit. But its hands were tied by instructions from the India Office; the Compensation Committee, especially on the Bengal side, made cruel deductions from the claims sent in; and the general result has proved a mournful mockery of justice. Claims ranging from one or two hundred to more than a thousand pounds have been cut down on the most barefaced pretexts to twenty, to ten—in many cases to nothing at all. Officers who have waited long years for their lawful dues have found themselves quibbled even out of the pittance they had been told to expect. But who can reckon with the proverbial laxity of a corporate conscience?

LORD MAYO AT UMBALLA.

The Standard observes that it is at a period when the future existence of the Afghan kingdom is in peril that Lord Mayo, by a wise and bold policy, has chosen for the meeting with the Ameer Shere Ali, and it cannot be doubted that the results of that interview will be to the advantage of both countries. There is another good result likely to arise from this Umballa meeting—conducted, as it has been, with all the pomp and show which are influences so powerful in native eyes—and that is the effect which will be produced in the minds of our Indian subjects. Hitherto it has been the natives who have been the bitterest critics of our do-nothing foreign policy. They have looked on with a curious sense of bewilderment at the apathy with which their rulers seemed to regard the advance of a rival Power towards our northern frontier. Having the strongest possible interest in this question of Afghanistan as a rampart to their own country, they have been unable to comprehend upon what principle of national duty the Government has steadily set its face against all recognition of Afghan affairs. The natives will now be convinced that the British Government is perfectly well disposed to take all necessary precautions with a view of strengthening and consolidating their great north-western rampart.

The Examiner and London Review (the two journals are now united) doubts the wisdom of the proceedings which have taken place at Umballah to procure the friendship of Shere Ali. How the astute successor of Dost Mahomed must have laughed in his sleeve as he wended his homeward way! To what good account, with his other great European friends, will he not turn these public proofs of our weakness and solicitude. It may one day task our strength and steadfastness to keep India, and surely it will not lessen our difficulties if, in the meantime, we teach the border hordes that we are ready to buy them off at any price. This is, indeed, to lower the prestige and the name of England. Lord Mayo failed last year to inaugurate a policy in Ireland of levelling up; the Examiner hopes he will not succeed in India in inaugurating a policy of levelling down.

The Spectator is greatly pleased at the line of policy which has been taken by Lord Mayo in India, and says:—Shere Ali returns to Cabul the friend of the British; and if he is their friend, just think what we have gained. It is nothing less than a permanent certainty of a year's warning before our frontier can be attacked by a European force. Three days would suffice for Shere Ali to warn the Commissioner of Peshawur that he was in danger; from Peshawur the telegraph stretches everywhere, and in three weeks half-a-dozen engineers, five mountain batteries, twenty officers such as defended Kars, and five years' subsidy in anticipation would be in Cabul. So strengthened, the Afghan force alone would be sufficient to make the Russian march a most difficult and dangerous campaign; while behind this great outlying picket, within our own territory, on our own railway lines, through districts choked with food, masses up, in slow but irresistible force, the entire armament at the disposal of the fourth military monarchy in the world, and of the only Treasury in Asia which cannot be insolvent. The Government, if it decides to fight in Afghanistan, as it would,—for no native, however inclined to rebellion, would play so impatient a game as to desert us before we had been beaten there,—has no passes to force, no Afghan revolt to dread; but moves on to its chosen battlefield as the profitable friend of the race for whose independence, in the first instance, it is about to strive. And it moves unembarrassed by Mussulman hostility in its rear. The key to that Wahabee danger which we have so often described, and which still alarms the Government of Bengal, is in Shere Ali's hands; the maddest fanatic in the Passes will not fight him and us at once, and the friendship of the Ameer paralyses Patna as well as Swat. The matter has been well managed.

The Times holds that it was no unwise policy to let the Afghans settle their own quarrels and decide the succession for themselves before we intervened with our recognition or our offers. An earlier interference might have committed us to a mistaken alliance or an embarrassing obligation; nor would Shere Ali's own position, indeed, be any the stronger at this moment if he could be thought indebted for it to foreign aid. Then, it is evident from the very circumstances before us, though the Ameer might have preferred our recognition at an earlier period, he is glad enough to receive it now, and indeed there is much we can do for him at comparatively small cost to ourselves. The Afghans are as poor as they are war-like; a little money goes a long way with them, and a present of arms is a welcome gift. Shere Ali has received, we believe, besides the substantial compliment tendered to him at Umballah, a subsidy of £120,000 and a few thousand muskets. Such a replenishment of his treasury and his arsenals will add materially to his strength, and it must be remembered that when he returns to his capital from this grand reception he will carry with him a reputation enhanced by an apparent alliance with the greatest Power of the East. What pledges, if any, have been given him of a political character, or what engagements have been exacted from him in return, we can as yet only conjecture. We know that the object of the Indian Government is to secure, with as little intervention on our part as possible, the neutrality of Afghanistan. In the last extremity we should probably be prepared, on good reason shown, to go a step further, and co-operate actively with the Afghans in defending their territory against aggression. But as things now stand our policy must substantially consist in convincing Shere Ali that we have no designs of our own against his country, that we wish nothing more than to remain unmolested on our own side of the border, but that if we ever should cross it it will be as friends. Of course, it is obvious that some such professions may be made from the other side also, and that in a competition for favour by purchase Russia may bid as high as we do. Nor, indeed, are the Afghans by any means unskilled in the art of playing one suitor against another or unlikely, in point of fact, to listen to the promises of both sides at once. If, however, Shere Ali and his friends are as sagacious as their success implies, they must needs learn from this visit two decisive lessons. They must inevitably be convinced that we, in those regions, are far stronger than the Russians, and that we are less likely to do the Afghans harm. There can be no imaginable comparison between the military power of British India and such military power as Russia can exert on the banks of the Oxus; nor can there be a doubt that the independence of Afghanistan is more in danger from the side of Tartary than from the side of the Punjab. Those two conclusions, we should hope, may be left to produce their due impression on the minds of our guests at Umballah.

CURE of ASTHMA, COUGHS, COLDS,

Dr. LOCOCK'S WAFERS.

From Mr. John Coble, M.P.S., Broad-row, Yarmouth:
"I have great pleasure in stating that many persons, to my knowledge, have derived great benefit by the use of Dr. Locock's Wafers."

They give instant relief to ASTHMA, CONSUMP-TION, COUGHS, and all DISORDERS of the LUNGS, and have a pleasant taste.

Price 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. per box.
Sold by all Druggists.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

Bad legs, wounds, ulcers, and all descriptions of sores, are cured by the proper and diligent use of this inestimable preparation. To attempt to cure bad legs by plastering the edge of the wound together is a folly, for should the skin unite, a boggy, diseased condition remains underneath, to break out with tenfold fury in a few days. The only rational and permanent treatment, as indicated by nature, is to reduce the inflammation in and about the wound, to soothe the neighbouring nerves, to cool the heated blood as it courses along its vessels, and to render the thin, watery, ichorous discharge consistent and healthy. Happily for suffering humanity, Holloway's Ointment accomplishes these ends with unfailing certainty.

DYSENTERY, CHOLERA, FEVER, AGUE, COLDS, &c.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than
DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr.
J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not supply a want and fill a place."

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 21th, that "104 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations, totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine.
Sold in bottles, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

WHITMORE'S COMPOUND LINIMENT OF ARNICA.

A SPECIFIC for the CURE OF RHEUMATISM, LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, SPRAINS, CONTUSIONS, WEAKNESS OF THE JOINTS, CHILBLAINS, &c. It is also an excellent remedy as a stimulating application to the surface of the chest and back in bronchitis, inflammation of the lungs, pulmonary consumption, and whooping cough. When the liver is inactive, rubbed over it, its stimulating properties have a beneficial effect, and in all cases where counter irritation is desirable, it will be found invaluable.

In bottles, small, medium, and large.

WILKINSON'S BRONCHIO-THORACIC LOZENGES.

Prepared from the receipt of an eminent Physician, and experience has fully justified their recommendation as the most speedy remedy in irritation of the throat, catarrhal coughs, bronchitis, incipient consumption, spitting of blood, &c., &c. To public speakers and vocalists they will be found invaluable, as they impart a clear and beautiful tone to the voice. Free from any preparation of opium, and of an agreeable taste, they are applicable to all.

In bottles of one uniform size.

WHITMORE'S STOMACHIC DINNER PILLS.

No Pill is so efficacious in promoting digestion, strengthening the stomach, correcting acidity, preventing or eradicating headache, giddiness, &c., arising from a costive habit, debilitated stomach, or torpid liver.

They require no change of diet, and those of the most delicate constitution may take them with safety.

Taken as an adjunct with WILKINSON'S SARSAPARILLA with the greatest success.

In bottles, small, medium, and large.

Prepared by THOMAS WILKINSON (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

"INDIAN BAEL," for Diarrhoea, Dysentery, &c. Imported by J. G. GOULD, Pharmaceutical Chemist, 194, Oxford-street, corner of Orchard-street, Portman-square, W.

AN ENTIRELY NEW METHOD of FIXING ARTIFICIAL TEETH, without springs or wires, or any painful operation, more natural and durable than any introduced, giving a facility in mastication and speech hitherto unattained. To be had only of Mr. ALFRED JONES, Surgeon-Dentist to his late R.H. the Princess Augusta, the Duchess of Gloucester, &c., 64, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square. At home from Eleven till Five.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body."

It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. WEBB's residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 6d. Umbilical, 12s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.

The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.—

UPWARDS OF FIFTY YEARS' experience has fully confirmed the superior reputation of these Lozenges in the cure of ASTHMA, WINTER COUGH, HOARSENESS, SHORTNESS OF BREATH, and other PULMONARY MALADIES.

RECENT TESTIMONIAL.

Dear Sir,—Having tried your Cough Lozenges in India, I have much pleasure in testifying to their beneficial effects in cases of incipient consumption, asthma, and bronchial affections; so good a medicine ought to be known to be appreciated. I have prescribed it largely with the best results.

PUBLISHERS' NOTICE.

The writer of these volumes—an accomplished member of a family whose name is conspicuous in Indian story—being now resident in India, they have not had the benefit of her final corrections. It is hoped, however, that this inevitable drawback will detract but little from the pleasure to be afforded by the perusal of the tales, which are, indeed, what they profess to be, stories of English Homes in India, represented as such homes are in different parts of the country and under various social and professional aspects. They endeavour fairly and without exaggeration to illustrate Anglo-Indian life as it is, in its many varying phases, and to bring upon the scene, in their everyday costume, many kinds of Anglo-Indian workmen, from the Resident at a Native Court, to the subaltern officer and the railway employé; and it is believed that all who have visited the countries described will recognise the truth of the portraiture.

At an EXTRAORDINARY GENERAL MEETING of the PROPRIETORS of the above Company, held at the LONDON TAVERN, Bishopsgate-street, in the City of London, on TUESDAY, the 30th March inst., for the purpose of considering the propriety of authorising the Directors to obtain an Act of Parliament empowering the Company to amalgamate the several undertakings of the Company into one, at such time after the passing of the Act as the Proprietors see fit,

W. P. ANDREW, Esq., Chairman of the Company, presiding,

The following Resolutions were carried:—

Proposed by the Chairman; seconded by Alexander Devaux, Esq.,

Proposed by W. Mackinnon, Esq.; seconded by R. E. Morrice, Esq.,

"That this Meeting, believing it to be of the utmost importance to the Company's existing undertakings that early steps should be taken to unite the several sections of railway in the Company's hands in one continuous line, are of opinion that as soon as the Amalgamation Bill now before Parliament shall have become law, the Directors should take the earliest opportunity of convening a Meeting of the Proprietors for the purpose of considering the propriety of exercising the powers to be conferred by that Bill, with the view of placing the Company in the best position for obtaining an early concession for the line between Kotree and Mooltan."

Proposed by R. E. Morrice, Esq., seconded by J. King, Esq.,

"That the cordial thanks of this Meeting are tendered to W. P. Andrew, Esq., for his able and courteous conduct in the Chair this day."

W. P. ANDREW, Chairman.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, March 20; Agra and Calcutta, March 16; Madras, March 15.

Shere Ali's progress from Kabul to Umballa furnishes a fruitful topic for the Indian papers. On his way down to Peshawar he had to make terms of some sort with the Khyberes before they would let him through the gates of his own dominion. Such at least is the not improbable story repeated in the papers. From Peshawar he telegraphed to the Viceroy his acknowledgments of the courteous and cordial welcome that met him there. His delight at all he saw is said to have been very great. An inspection of the troops and barracks at Peshawar evoked from him expressions of wonder, which were yet further enhanced by a careful study of our breechloaders and an Armstrong gun that stood sentry in his garden. The cleanliness and comfort in the barracks and the great size of the buildings themselves seem to have made on him a deep impression. He was dressed not in the flowing robes of an Afghan, but in the more martial costume of Herat. The papers describe him as a fine handsome man of middle age, affable in his talk, and speaking Hindustani with great fluency. In return for the handsome presents which the Ameer was bringing with him, he was to receive fifty trays of choice gifts from Calcutta, Cashmere shawls, weapons of rare workmanship, gold embroidered dresses, jewels, cups of gold; not to speak of some fine Arab horses and a battery of Armstrong guns.

On the 15th March the Ameer was escorted over the bridge, of boats into the citadel of Lahore by the Lieutenant-governor through a long line of troops. Next day guest and host exchanged visits. On the 17th a day of sightseeing was closed by a grand fête in the terraced gardens of Shalimar. The 18th was memorable for the grandest durbar ever witnessed—by English eyes—in Lahore. For the particulars of the Umballa meeting we shall have to wait two mails more.

Nothing certain has yet transpired as to the movements of Azim and Abdurrahman Khan. According to a letter received on March 9 at Lahore, it seems that the two had left the Wazeerie Hills with a few score followers to try and make their way through Beloochistan towards either Persia or Bokhara. The Ameer had ordered his officers to close up all the passes leading to Kandahar, and the Governor of Khost was looking out to stop the fugitives if they should pass his way. Meanwhile affairs in Turkistan are not so favourable as they might be to the Ameer. The ousted governor of Tukhta Pool is waiting for troops from Kabul, which the Ameer's son, Yakoob Khan, is unaccountably slow in sending. It is said that the latter has entangled himself in some engagement with Persia, which makes him look coldly on his father's English leanings. A likelier motive may be found in his resentment of Shere Ali's preference for another son as heir to his throne. All this, however, is, for the present, mere gossip.

THERE was a lively debate in Government House on Thursday, March 11, over Sir R. Temple's Income Tax Bill. Mr. Bullen approved of the measure so far as it sought to tax all classes equally, agreed that barracks should be charged to yearly revenue, but would like to see the home charges brought up in more detail. Mr. Shaw Stewart doubted the likelihood of an increase on stamp-tax returns, and protested against the continuance of a fee on all criminal plaints, as a hardship for the poor. Mr. Cowie would have met the outlay on barracks by debentures issued for two or three years while money was cheap, so that Sir R. Temple might have ensured a surplus large enough to permit of a reduction in export and other duties. According to Mr. Cockerell the stamp on criminal plaints had not worked badly, whatever the Madras and Bombay Governments said of it. The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal picked a small hole or two in the Bill, to which, however, he gave a general assent. Sir W. Mansfield took Sir R. Temple rather viciously to task for having drawn odious comparisons between his own and Mr. Massey's budgets. To talk of Mr. Massey's principle of including barracks among extraordinary public works as "intolerable" seemed to him "hardly respectful to the former Government, and certainly not complimentary to his predecessor." Rightly considered, the finances of India were never healthier than now. In fact, says Sir William, "India has reached a pitch of financial prosperity unequalled in any country in Europe, England included." Sir H. Durand wanted a clear statement of all the points of difference between reproductive and ordinary public works, as a means of strengthening the Government in the money-market. Sir R. Temple denied Sir W. Mansfield's rash imputations and explained what it was that he had called intolerable. With regard to collecting income-tax by guesswork, how else had the license and certificate taxes been collected? Even the surcharges on the old income-tax were "guesses pure and simple."

SIR R. TEMPLE's defence was then taken up by Mr. Strachey and Lord Mayo. The latter also avowed his firm adherence to the principle of charging against revenue all works not clearly reproductive. Under that head he would certainly class barracks. Essentially reproductive works would of course include State railways, and works of irrigation; and might be shown to include the improvement of harbours, the sanitation of towns, the building of bridges in populous places, and so forth. It was all the more needful to proclaim this distinction at a time when India was about to begin borrowing for reproductive works to an extent "limited only by the power of the money market to yield, by the extent of our constructive organisation, and by the capacity of the yearly revenue to pay the necessary interest on the sums borrowed." With regard to the home charges Lord Mayo hinted agreement with Mr. Bullen, and promised, if need were, to write his mind on the subject to the Secretary for India. In reply to Sir Dig Bejai Singh's remonstrances about the salt-tax, his Lordship would do his very best to reduce the cost of carrying salt and to cheapen its consumption by extending the area of its manufacture. The Council then adjourned, but at its next meeting on March 18 the Income Tax Bill and other budget Bills were passed.

WE observe that tenders for a loan of £2,000,000 were to be received at Calcutta up to the 17th of this month. In the present state of the market there was every likelihood of the loan being taken up at a price equal to about  $4\frac{1}{2}$  per cent.

NOTHING new about the Loshai Kookies. On the 11th March Major Stephenson's column had reached the Soonai river and occupied some Looshai salt-works. Both columns were in good health, and Mr. Edgar, the Commissioner, sees his way to the prevention of future raids. The police were still ahead of the soldiery.

THE hostile "note" which the Bengal Government was said to be drawing up against the author of the "Non-Aryan Dictionary" turns out to be merely a mild grumble against the Supreme Government for having forestalled its own liberal intentions towards Mr. W. Hunter. Besides ordering two hundred copies of his great work, the Indian Government has of its own motion recommended the conferring of a handsome grant on Mr. Hunter, which will reimburse him for his heavy outlay in the past, and enable him to continue researches otherwise adjourned indefinitely for want of funds. The Bengal Government claims to have started Mr. Hunter on the work in question, and seems to begrudge a higher power the honour of rewarding him out of imperial funds for labours of imperial much more than local significance.

ON Thursday last Mr. Eastwick was persuaded by the Prime Minister to defer his promised motion for papers concerning the affairs of Central Asia. Mr. Gladstone pleaded with some show of fairness that while "friendly communications" were still passing between the English and Russian Governments on that very question, a debate in our own Parliament might somehow mar the expected issue of those communications. Unluckily the same excuse is so often brought up for stifling fair discussion on important topics, that we can fully sympathise with the tone of disappointment that marked Mr. Eastwick's acceptance of the official plea for stopping his mouth. There is no good reason, we think, to fear that an open discussion on the politics of Central Asia would embarrass the Government in its dealings with Russia. Russophobia is not a Parliamentary disease. Speakers in Parliament are apt to weigh their words, especially on a question so nearly concerning a great European Power, whose Eastern dominions have spread almost to the borders of our own. We are bold to say that a free expression of British opinion, as strained through the Parliamentary sieve, would in this case strengthen the hands of the British Government by showing Russia how resignedly we regard her progress in Central Asia, so long as she refrains from crossing the Hindu-Khoosh, or throwing needless obstacles in the way of our trade with Turkistan. Let her clearly understand our aversion from other conquests than those of peaceful enterprise, and our utter innocence of any desire to annex Afghanistan, and we are pretty sure that Russia, on her part, will leave us no ground for suspecting her of foul play.

MR. GLADSTONE's assertion that the Indian Government has not engaged to pay Shere Ali an annual subsidy must be very disappointing to those who saw in the Umballa meeting the opening of a new era of masterly activity on our side. To have blown the trumpet so loudly for so small a matter as an exchange of friendly assurances, uncoupled with any real change in our Indian policy, is not a thing to reflect upon with a complacent mind. Whatever Lord Mayo has said or done at Umballa, it seems clear that he has declined to commit himself to any embarrassing alliance with his late guest. The gift of money and muskets was a pledge of our goodwill for the heir of Dost Mohammed; but evidently he is bidden to take it as a gift, not as the first instalment of a yearly subsidy.

IN a lecture delivered last Wednesday at the United Service Institution Sir Vincent Eyre did battle against the new Russophobia, in a style the more effective for his old experiences in Afghanistan. He protested against such a tendency as unreasonable and dangerous, pointed out the vast difficulties in the way of a Russian invasion of India and the ease with which it could be met by ourselves, with all our means of concentrating troops and warlike stores and pouring in reserves by sea, and declared that in the event of such an invasion "not a man of the invading force would be likely to find his way back to Russia." As for Russia's near approach becoming the signal for a general revolt in India, he believed that the natives were much too shrewd to exchange one European master for another. Let us look to the safety of our frontier, maintain friendly terms with the local chiefs, and cultivate the goodwill of Persia, and we need fear nothing from a power whose base of operations is 2,000 miles away. Sir Vincent's opinion as an old artillery officer of proved repute should carry weight with all who look at the question from the military side. Sir R. Murchison clenched the effect of his arguments by declaring that the present Emperor of Russia had recently given our Government "the most solemn assurances" that he would never think of approaching Afghanistan or mixing himself up with Afghan politics. If people would only "take a glance at the map," their fears on this subject—added Sir Roderick—would soon be dissipated. So they would, if the glance was taken dispassionately; but do we not remember how Sherman's march from Atlanta to Savannah was spoken of at the time as a disastrous retreat?

THE Nawab Nazim of Bengal, whose arrival in London was mentioned in our last issue, was received at Dover by an official of high standing from the India Office. He and his sons were afterwards lodged in the Alexandra Hotel, Hyde-park, under the guidance of Colonel Layard, brother of Mr. A. H. Layard, the Nineveh explorer. Before leaving Paris his Highness thought to keep out the cold by having his coats lined with fur. A Paris tailor did the needful, but with the six coats forwarded a little bill for more than £5,930—not francs, but pounds sterling. This modest demand the Nawab refused to pay, and the indomitable Frenchman followed his Highness to England. Here however the fortune that favours the bold turned altogether against him. The Nawab's English friends declined to see him fleeced before their eyes. On reaching London the coats were examined by experts who pronounced the sables to be worth comparatively nothing, and the tailor was glad eventually to compound his claim, by the cession of the furs and the payment of two or three hundred pounds on account of work done, loss of time, and partial deterioration of the furs.

AT the last meeting of the Linnean Society, an interesting paper, accompanied with figures and descriptions of three new species, was read by Dr. George Birdwood on the genus Boswellia, which yields the frankincense or olibanum of commerce. After quoting the accounts given of frankincense in the Bible and Greek and Roman authors, and by the Arabs, to the effect that it was obtained from Arabia, Dr. Birdwood went on to show that all modern authorities insist that it was produced in India, notwithstanding that Carter had discovered, described, and figured the frankincense tree of Arabia, and Cruttenden, Vaughan, and Kempthorne had noted the presence of frankincense trees in the Somali country. Three of these trees Dr. Birdwood now described with figures, and demonstrated that the frankincense, or olibanum of commerce, was obtained from the Somali country and Hadramant, in Arabia, being partly re-exported from India to Europe. He described five plants under the genus, and named the three new ones Boswellia Carterii (Mohr Manow of the Somalis); Boswellia Bhuu Dajiana (Mohradd of the Somalis); and Boswellia Frereana (the Yegar of the Somalis).

WE are given to understand that Dr. Fitz-Edward Hall has ceased to be Examiner in Eastern Languages to the Civil Service Commissioners. We trust that his successor will be properly qualified for so important a post.

WEDNESDAY, April 14, 1869.

THE LESSON OF PAST FAMINES.

IF any one thing comes out clearer than another in the history of Indian famines, it is that such disasters have been immensely aggravated by insufficient means of intercourse and irrigation. A scanty rainfall necessarily begets drought, but all experience shows how materially the evils of a drought may be lessened by a proper network of roads, tanks, and canals. The famine of 1860, for instance, proved much less fatal than the famine of 1837, because, among other reasons, of the extent to which Upper India had meanwhile been armed with those important palliatives for nature's shortcomings. In 1837, says Mr. Girdlestone, whose "Report on Past Famines in the North-West" now lies before us, the whole outlay on roads for one year was only Rs. 65,195. At that time the Grand Trunk-road had been metalled no further than Allahabad, nothing that could fairly be called a road was to be seen in the direction of the Central Provinces, and the intercourse between one district and another was almost nominal. By 1860 however things had greatly changed for the better; "a network of district roads had sprung into existence; the railway had come up to the edge of the North-West; a considerable length of the Ganges Canal had been completed; steamers were plying incessantly on the Ganges; and the granaries of Jubbulpore, Oudh, and Bengal were all accessible by land." And the improvement since then is even greater. The railway has been carried to Lucknow, Jubbulpore, Delhi, and Umballa, with the certainty of early extensions to Lahore and Rajpootana. The Ganges Canal now waters a wider tract of country than it did then; irrigation is steadily advancing over the Punjab; and every year sees large additions to the mileage of good metalled roads. A steady continuance in preparations of this sort against the evils resulting from a scanty rainfall will ere long go far to justify Mr. Girdlestone's belief that the era of great famines in Upper India is at an end. But we are inclined to fear that if no rains had fallen there last January and February, the belief in question would have proved somewhat premature.

That danger has passed away however for the present, and the waters of the Ganges and Baree Doab Canals are once more flowing in their accustomed volume. Nor can it be doubted that great famines never come without ample warning. We agree with Mr. Girdlestone that it is "not the drought of one season but of several, which causes the mischief." Future Governments will carry out to yet happier issues the measures of precaution taken by their predecessors in 1860 and 1868. But without a due supply of roads for the conveyance and of water for the production of grain, it is clear that the best efforts of the ablest governments on the spur of the moment must end in partial failure. Relief works and remissions of land-tax or transit-duties can never make up for the neglect of ordinary precautions against the evil they may do much to mitigate after it has come. For want of those precautions the well-being of Rajpootana gave way at the first breath of a storm whose full force spent itself almost in vain on provinces better prepared to meet it. The Gangetic Doab fared much better, but it had after all a narrow escape. It contains at the utmost no more than three million acres and a-half of irrigated land out of fifteen million acres fit for cultivation. Until a good third of those fifteen millions has been brought under irrigation either from canals or wells, the Doab cannot be fully insured against the horrors of famine. Even the above estimate of three and a-half millions refers rather to prospective than actual results. It shows that under favourable conditions one-fifth of the cultivated land will be properly watered in the next few years.

But the right proportion should be at least a third. How is the difference therefore to be made good in the shortest time? Canals in India are costly things, uncertain in their action, and slow in yielding the desired returns. The conditions of making and feeding them are very different from those of the Lombard canals. It is possible however to turn their capabilities to better account by a system of wells and tanks that would fertilise tracts of country hitherto left without water. Much of the water that now trickles to waste through the canal-banks would thus be stored up for the general good. As Mr. Girdlestone truly remarks, there is no lack of water in India, "but the means of storing and distributing it are insufficient." A proper system of wells for holding the surplus canal water, of tanks for storing rain-water, and of embankments to catch the overflow of natural streams, would insure India against the opposite evils of drought and floods. And all this could be done at comparatively little cost, if the Government went to work the right way. Small loans of public money to the poorer landholders—tuccavee advances as they are called—would enable them to build "pucka" wells of the requisite depth and breadth, while a moderate annual outlay on dams and embankments would repay itself in a few years in the shape of enhanced revenue. In the famine season of 1837-8 Mr. John Lawrence was "unwearied in his applications for loans to build wells in the Delhi territory, and his request was never denied." And yet in the six years from 1862 to 1867, which include four years of Sir John's viceroyalty, the tuccavee advances for the north-west amounted in all to little more than two lakhs and a-half. Colonel Dixon's success in Mairwarra shows what may be done in the way of embankments. He spent on works of this kind Rs. 2,41,112, and in eleven years the revenue of the district rose from Rs. 96,805 to Rs. 210,219. There are many small streams in the north-west which might be dammed to good purpose at no great cost.

PROMOTION IN THE ROYAL ARTILLERY.

FIGURES are puzzling things, especially when two opposite parties evolve from the same set of numerical data conclusions widely diverse. One would think it was easy for instance, by an appeal to figures, to settle the vexed question as to the unequal rates of promotion in the several regiments of Royal Artillery. But somehow the old dispute keeps raging with undiminished warmth. If one disputant complains of the disadvantages under which the old Indian artillery corps are still suffering, another is sure to confront him with an equally loud assertion of the injustice suffered by officers of the old Royal Artillery. Amidst conflicting clamours it is hard to tell where the truth lies on a subject which, besides involving a good deal of dry calculation and much poring over army-lists and general orders, has very small attractions for the outside public. Still for those who take a real interest in questions affecting only a few, there ought to be some means of forming a fair judgment on this question also. How far a pamphlet lately sent to us by

Lieutenant-colonel Gray meets the existing want, we cannot state for certain; but if his data are as correct as they appear to be, the inevitable conclusion is that the old Indian Artillery officers have better reason to complain than their brethren of the English service.*

From the tables appended to this pamphlet we find that in 1861, the first year of the amalgamation, the junior colonel on the Bengal List was three years and four months older in the service than the junior colonel on the Royal List. The rival lieutenant-colonels were only a month apart, but the difference between the junior captains was three years and four months, and that between the junior second-captains one year and seven months, against the Bengal service. Nor has time done much to lessen the difference, for in 1868 the junior colonel, lieutenant-colonel, and captain of the Bengal List counted respectively two and a-half, two and a-half, and two years more of service than their rivals in the Home List. In fact the Bengal List at this moment shows thirty captains of longer standing than the junior lieutenant-colonel of the Royal branch. The promotions of late years tell yet more against Bengal. In 1867 the number of Royal officers from second-captain upwards promoted was fifty-three to thirty-five on the Bengal side. Last year the figures were seventy and twenty-two. And the prospects of the Indian officers grow worse with every year. Owing to the break up of the old retiring funds, the older officers are hanging on for their colonel's allowances, rather than retire on the insufficient pensions which the defunct bonus system helped to eke out. Of the fourteen annuities offered in 1863 by Lord Halifax, six only were accepted, while no one has yet availed himself of the pensions promised by Lord Cranborne in 1866 to officers of thirty-five and thirty-eight years' Indian service. As compared with the Staff Corps the position of these officers of Indian Artillery seems harder still. An officer in the former branch may reckon on his colonel's allowances after thirty-eight years, whereas General Huyshe, of the Bengal List, will be fifty years in the service before he can look for his. Again, at the present rate of promotion, the thirtieth captain on the Bengal List will not gain his lieutenant-colonelcy before eight years hence, by which time he will have served thirty years and a-half, or two years and a-half longer than the present junior colonel on the Royal List.

Promotion being thus slow, with the prospect of getting yearly slower, Lieut.-colonel Gray would quicken the retirement of the senior officers by means of additional pensions in the first place, and ultimately by a revival of the old bonus system on a scale embracing the whole of the Royal Artillery. If the Secretary for India can bring himself to spend a few thousands more a-year on the former process, he will certainly be wise in his generation. But in view of many co-existent demands on the Indian exchequer, he can always plead reasons of State for deferring attention to this particular claim. Against the plan of a general purchase system for the amalgamated service however there is little to object, if the officers themselves are willing to try it at their own expense. It is clear that something of the sort is necessary to keep up a fair rate of promotion in a seniority service. Old officers will hang on to the profession which many of them once adorned, in hopes of a richer prize than the moderate pension of their rank, and in utter disregard of their juniors' eagerness to fill their places. In default of Government efforts to counteract this tendency to stop the way, some scheme of retiring-bonuses, like that which the old Court of Directors sanctioned for the Indian services, may be accepted as a useful makeshift. If the time is not yet come for shelving at a certain age all officers deemed unfit for further promotion, a bonus system in aid of pensions might answer indirectly the same end. Whether the present scheme is preferable to the one proposed or rather advocated by Mr. Childers, we need not here discuss. Colonel Gray proposes to get up by subscription among the junior officers of each rank a fund of £40,000, which shall yield an annual income of £2,000. This sum would enable ten officers to retire on their pensions with a bonus of £200 a-year each. A further subscription of £4,079 a-year from the six or seven senior officers of each rank above that of second captain would ensure the payment of ten more annuities of £200, and the balance, added yearly to the original capital as a sinking-fund, would provide one or more additional annuities every five years. Twenty annuities, increasing by at least two more every five years, ought to help materially in quickening promotion; and as the fund developed itself and old annuitants dropped off, it would become easy to calculate how many annuities would yearly fall due. Everything would depend on the regular influx of subscriptions, and to collect them from officers scattered over the globe might be found no easy task. But one-half of the scheme is meant to meet that difficulty at least in part, and the scale of subscription is pitched within the means of all concerned. A scheme of this sort might need revising in some particulars, but, as its framer rightly observes, "a body of gentlemen, numbering nearly fifteen hundred of all ranks, can well afford to establish such a fund among themselves, and not always seek for Government aid." A preliminary step to the adoption of such a scheme consists in the complete amalgamation of the four artillery regiments into one, so that promotion should always go by seniority to the next in rank, whether he belonged to the Royal or to one of the Indian branches.

Notices of Books.

Debrett's Illustrated Peerage and Baronetage of the United Kingdom for 1869. Two vols. London: Dean and Son.

This new edition of a work first published more than a century ago seems to maintain its old character for accuracy and fulness of information. The editor has brought down his revisions to the latest dates and enlarged the supply of historical and antiquarian notes. Lord Hatherley's peerage for instance comes in for mention, and a still later event, the death of Lord Strangford, is duly recorded. Sir M. Brady's arms and biography find a place among the baronets, while the recent knighthood of Sir D. Wyatt has not caused him to be left out in the cold. There are plenty of interesting or amusing details to be culled from these business-looking volumes. A romantic story of the present Lord Fairfax, which is too long to quote here, attests the innate nobleness of a man who, deeming himself wounded to death, spared his murderous assailant for the sake of his wife and children. A curious turn for punning on names comes out frequently in the heraldic mottoes. Pie-repone-te is the motto of the Pierreponts, Earls of Manvers. The Earl of Clancarty—Le Poer Trench—has for his motto Dieu pour la Trench. Lord Monteagle's motto is Altè fert aquila, "the eagle mounts with me on high." Lord Lyons' Noli irritare leones belongs to the same class. Lord Gough's Clear the Way seems to condense the history of his life, while Thurlow's Justitiæ soror fides (fidelity is the sister of justice) expresses in a phrase what Lord Thurlow the first was not.

Times of India Calendar and Directory for 1869. Bombay and London (G. Street, 30, Cornhill).

Here we have in more than six hundred closely printed pages a very full and trustworthy guide to all sorts of matter connected however distantly with the Bombay Presidency. The other Presidencies are not overlooked, but Bombay concerns necessarily fill up the bulk of the volume. A reference to the index shows what a variety of useful information has been packed into a small space. There is a good English Calendar filled with incidents in our Indian history, followed by a calendar for natives and a description of native festivals. The Postal Directory, Customs Duties, Port Charges, Shipping and Commercial Sections are all fully treated. There is no lack of information about telegraphs, educational institutions, Government finance, and a host of other things more or less important to our countrymen in India.

PUBLIC LOANS.

The Englishman declares that these financial measures hanging over the market disturb all monetary relations, and business is injuriously affected by the length of time we are held in suspense. Sir R. Temple could only say that he must wait the Secretary of State's decision before he acted. This is a blot in our system; either the Secretary of State should have been sufficiently informed in time before hand to have enabled him to give his general instructions, or the Government of India ought to be empowered to judge for itself whether loans could with advantage be placed on the market. There can be no question that this is the proper market and country in which to borrow money, if the Government is in credit with the people, and money is in the hands of the latter seeking employment. Both these conditions, we believe, now exist, and it should be the policy of this Government to encourage the people throughout the country to intrust it with their funds. The Emperor of the French comprehended the immense strength it would give to his Government if he could draw forth the hoards of the masses and make them fruitful. How much more the same policy is to be desired in this country every one must know who is acquainted with it. Whence therefore this hesitation to intrust full powers to the Government of India to judge for itself at once and on the spot? We are unwilling to accuse the Home Government of having some special interests of their own to consider in the matter, but where large sums are concerned jealousy and suspicion are easily aroused. We ask, why does the Secretary of State insist on holding the question of loans and all financial questions so tightly in his hands, when it is obvious that the wisest policy would be to borrow in India, and that the Viceroy and his Council are the best judges as to their prospects of obtaining money here. The loans immediately wanted are fifty lacs to restore the cash balances, and fifty lacs to renew on a debt falling due. The latter could be settled here at once, and fifty lacs is no great sum to provide. Any one of the Presidencies can subscribe the sum as soon as formal notice is given, and if a proportion of the payments are arranged for at each Presidency, the Finance Minister has only to ask in order to have.

STATE OF FEELING BETWEEN ENGLISH AND NATIVE TROOPS.

The Madras Times laments that the old fine feeling of friendship and sympathy which existed between sepoys and their European officers no longer exists. Impolitic orders of Government, from the days of Lord William Bentinck to our own, have done much to sap the friendship between officers and men. The mutiny, the amalgamation, and the new organisation of the army, has finished what was begun many years ago, and we believe we are correct in stating that at the present moment there is nothing of what may be called "friendship" between sepoys and their European officers. Indeed, it is impossible to expect such a feeling to exist. The officers are unsettled. They are moved about here and there, to and fro, and everywhere. No encouragement is offered to them to place themselves on good terms with their men. They are superseded in their regimental appointments by outsiders, and they are afforded neither the powers of punishing nor of rewarding their men. Generally speaking, the European officers are gentlemen of middle life, who have sown their wild Indian oats, and do not mix with the sepoys any longer in field sports and field games. Thus there is no tie between officers and men but the barren regulations of the service, which, however well calculated to maintain discipline, are far from being guides to friendship. Knowing, as we do, how far removed the sepoys are from their own officers, it is not surprising that European soldiers, who have a smaller acquaintance with natives, and little interest to be on friendly terms with them, do not "cotton" to their swarthy comrades in arms. Generally speaking, European soldiers do not know anything of native languages, and are far too indolent to learn. They contemptuously stigmatise sepoys, bad and good, under the one general sobriquet of "damned niggers," and hold it an article of their military belief that one European can thrash half-a-dozen natives, if not more. Although they may have no positive hatred or ill-will to sepoys, they look down upon them as very inferior creatures, so that a soldier and a sepoy meeting on her Majesty's highway, always remind us of a mastiff and a dog of low degree passing each other on the causeway. The mastiff is a superior animal, and he knows it. So does the other dog, and the recognition between them is consequently of the very slightest. But, on the other hand, the sepoy, however much he admires the courage and physique of the European soldier, does not fail to criticise his vices. In the words of John Chinaman, the sepoy knows that our soldiers "drinke for drunkee, not for dry," and they crack many a jest on our national weakness. Temperate, and generally polite themselves, they are shocked at the intoxication and bad language of many European soldiers, and they consequently are as averse to cultivate the soldiers as the soldiers are averse to cultivate them. There is little or nothing in common between them which can make them good comrades; and this is much to be regretted, as nothing has a better effect on the morale of sepoys than free intercourse with Europeans. It is hard to expect good service from men whom we regard as wretches unworthy of the consideration we extend to our countrymen; and yet, under the new organisation of regiments, a sepoy may, for several years, never have interchanged a single word with his European officer, and yet be expected to follow that officer with rare devotion to the "imminent deadly breach" itself in action. It appears to us that if our sepoy army is worth anything at all it is worth a great deal more care and consideration than is now bestowed upon it. Regiments are notoriously officered by natives unfit for their position, and by Europeans so few in number as to be inadequate to the maintenance of good discipline. Sepoy regiments are officered and treated like police detachments, and yet they are expected to fight in a manner only second to our European forces!

THE ZEMINDARS OF BENGAL.

The Englishman holds that if there is one fact more strongly foreshadowed than another in the future history of Bengal, it is that, at no very distant period, some great change must take place in the character and position of the Bengali zemindar. Usefulness is an essential condition of continued political existence. The more rapid the progress of development, the more rapidly are all useless classes of society obliterated. That the great landed aristocracy of England still survive, and retain a powerful vitality in an age and among a people that have produced the Great Republic of America, and that have made of utility almost a god, is an irrefragable proof that they fulfil a most important purpose. The landholders of Bengal, as a class, are one of the most useless bodies that ever existed. They can be shown to serve literally no important purpose to the community at large, but the collection of revenue that might be collected much more economically by other agency. In connection with the cultivation and improvement of the soil they are, as a body, an elaborate and expensive nonentity. They contribute to production neither labour, nor capital, nor intellect; while, as regards moral progress, they have lately placed or endeavoured to place themselves between the State and the people. It has been too much the custom to attribute this uselessness to the incapacity of the landholders themselves. But if there were not good reasons to doubt this on other grounds, the fact of so large a body of a highly intelligent race, not selected for want of the capacity for usefulness, being dolts or obstructives would, in itself, be striking enough to excite scepticism in any reasonable person. We have always maintained that it is not the zemindars but the laws that created them, and have adjusted their relations to the Government, the land, and the cultivator, that are to blame. Mr. Justice Phear, in his last address to the Social Science Association, has demonstrated this in the most convincing manner. There can be no doubt that it was the intention of Lord Cornwallis to create a body of landlords in Bengal, who should perform the same social and economical functions as the landed aristocracy of England. But Lord Cornwallis wholly overlooked the essential conditions on which the performance of such functions depended. Mr. Justice Phear very truly says:—"Whatever of excellence resides in the English system of land tenure is traceable, I think, to two potent springs of human action. The first is that residence in a particular spot of land, accompanied by the sense of immediate proprietary power over the soil, gives rise to very strong feelings of attachment to the locality, and to an active desire for promoting local welfare; the second is that that which is the subject of property is best managed for the interests of society by permitting the proprietor to deal with it unfettered, in the way which appears to him most advantageous for himself. Now, the regulations of 1793 leaves the very smallest opening for the play of principles such as these. It is true that the Legislature at that time somewhat ostentatiously declared the property in the soil to be vested absolutely in the landowners, and gave them free power to transfer such rights as they possessed. But it also busied itself minutely to protect the actual occupants of the land and all middlemen from the interference of the zemindar. I do not intend now to discuss the policy of the enactments which were then made, or to inquire into the extent of change, if any, which they effected. I desire only to point to the results, as regards the zemindar, which remain in their train. On the one hand, the proprietor's name is brought upon the books of the Government, his property is encumbered with a fixed rent charge, and if he makes default in the punctual discharge of this liability all his proprietary rights are irrevocably sold away from him without his consent. On the other hand, unless he is exceptionally situated, middlemen, mokurree tenures, and rights of occupancy effectually bar him from direct action relative to possession of and dealings with the land itself. How different is this from the perfect freedom of the English landlord, and how impossible it is to reason in the one case by analogy from the other. In truth, the property in the soil which the Bengal zemindar enjoys is not that of the landholder in England; and it was from want of perceiving the distinction that the authors of the Permanent Settlement formed expectations which could never be realised."

STATION TALK.

UMRITSUR, March 10.—I regret to say that our grain-dealers do not seem inclined to accept the situation, and consider it desirable to hold their present stocks at as high figure as they can to insure them against loss. They quote the recent order of Government withdrawing from 23rd March the privilege of conveying grain at the reduced rate per rail, and also the existing state of the atmosphere, as necessitating a higher price than they might otherwise be inclined to charge. There has certainly been a good deal of cloudy weather, and we want sunshine to bring on the crops after the late favourable rains, but I do not think this warrants the continued high charge. There is no good reason now why the rate should not be lowered, and I trust that the business may soon find the season too much for them. I am told that the American Circus Company came over here some days last week, and that they were to perform here for our amusement; but whether they did so or not I cannot tell, as no bills appear to have been circulated, or if they were it was very partially. One of my friends went in search of such amusement at the place he had understood to be selected for the performance, and found nothing but utter darkness in return for his trouble. The filling in of the town ditch as a famine-work is progressing apace. I am told that two thousand people are engaged on the work, and as they do from ten to twelve cubic feet a-day they must make an impression on the work at the rate of 120,000 cubic feet per week. Mr. Vaughan, the treasury officer, superintends this work, with the assistance of Mr. Nicholls, clerk in the deputy-commissioner's office. The numbers who thus seek work would seem to indicate, or the daily wage is much below the ordinary market rate, that there is real want in this part of the country, but I see also that on the introduction of light labour in one of the poor-houses for those who are up to it, the number of attendants has considerably diminished, and the plan is being organised in poor-house No. 3. The fact is that, although there is a well-founded "demand" for relief, it has been afforded too indiscriminately, and that those who are relieved at the poor-houses do not desist from importuning the townspeople during the day for alms or food, the money being hoarded and the food sold; and as the managers of the poor-houses are stewards for the benevolent public, it behoves them to be very careful in their arrangements.

SAHARUNPORE, March 13.—Major Orchard, superintendent Delhi police, arrested the other day, under a warrant from the magistrate of this district, a Bengalee Mahomedan said to have been implicated in the now notorious Wahabee conspiracy. This man, I believe, has been here for the last six months studying Arabic in a private school established by some Mahomedans of the city. He, together with the Moulvee in charge of the school, had some papers in their possession, and they have been taken to Delhi, where the case is sub judice in the Deputy Commissioner's Court. No further particulars have as yet transpired. The Educational Inspector, 1st Circle, N.W.P., Mr. E. T. Constable, was here on the 24th ult. on his annual tour of inspection. On Wednesday he examined the hulqabundee or village school boys, not less than 600 in number, and the next day, the 25th, those in the tahseel and zillah schools. I hear he was satisfied with the progress the scholars in the latter had made under their indefatigable head master, Lalla Bishumber Nath, since whose arrival the number of boys has greatly increased. Mr. Oldfield, late Judge of Moradabad, has been specially deputed by the High Court, N.W.P., to make further investigation into the charges of bribery and corruption brought against Meer Badsha, late Moonsiff of Deobund, during Mr. Carnae's incumbency as officiating judge of this district. The 2nd Goorkhas, under the command of Colonel Macpherson, marched into this station yesterday morning, and the Viceroy's body guard this morning. Both regiments proceed to Umballa to give colat to the coming ceremony of the Ameer of Cabul's reception by her Majesty's representative in India. The summer, or hill season, having begun, the dak proprietors and hotel keepers are busy reaping their long-expected harvest.

LAHORE, March 9.—There now appears every reason to believe that there will be no slip between the cup the Ameer Shere Aleo Khan of Cabul has agreed to drink out of, and the lip of the Governor-General, whom his Highness is coming down from Afghanistan to pledge in good and sincere fellowship. He has left Peshawur with all his cortege before or behind, and will, with as much certainty as any event of the kind could be expected to come off, be at Shahidera on Sunday next. One of the curiosities of the times will be found in the turn the Muscovite press will give to a move that will well nigh go towards giving them checkmate, as far, at least, as their views of their Government on Afghanistan are concerned. I have not been very well for a day or two, and therefore unable to go and see what progress, if any, has been made in the arrangements for the public reception of the Ameer which is to take place in the Montgomery Hall, and the local government may congratulate themselves and thank Mr. Cooper for having such a fine place to receive their guest in. The Governor-General's darbar tents will be nothing to it, and I imagine the meeting between the Afghan chief and the English Lieutenant Governor will be one to stamp its mark for years to come on the memory of the natives at least who will be present on the occasion. More in my next.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

COLONEL ANDERSON.—It is stated that Colonel J. C. Anderson has gone to Calcutta to take the place of Colonel Strachey at the head of the Irrigation Department.

AGRA.—A quarrel has occurred at Agra between two military officers, resulting in the assault of one, who complained to the officer commanding the station, and the arrest of the other.

INDORE.—Colonel Meade, C.S.I., Agent to the Governor-General, Central India, left Indore on the 8th March, making over charge to Colonel Daly, C.B., who will officiate for him during his absence on leave to England.

NATIVE SCHOOLS.—The Government of India has sanctioned a rent-free grant of a piece of land in the Gujranwalla district to certain American missionaries for the erection of native schools and of an orphanage.—Indian Daily News, March 12.

THE ALIPORE JAIL.—Lord Mayo visited the Alipore Jail on the 20th January last, and wrote the following remark in the visitors' book:—"I visited the Alipore Gaol this morning, and was quite astonished at the amount of industrial work carried on therein, and was generally pleased by the excellence of the organisation."

BOKHARA.—It is reported by Cabul merchants that the Russian officials at Bokhara levy a tax of 25 per cent. on their value on all articles of Indian produce which are transported beyond Bokhara to Samarcand or Kokan, but that no hindrance is put in the way of their sale at Bokhara itself.—Pioneer.

THE RISING IN TURKISTAN.—Sirdar Mahomed Isak Khan, son of Azim Khan, seems to be at any rate sufficiently strong in Turkistan to collect revenue. The Meers of that province have represented this to Mahomed Yakob Khan, stating that they are for the most part fervent wellwishers of the Ameer Shere Ali, but that without considerable military aid from him they cannot hope to suppress the party of Abdul Ruhman and Azim Khan.

PUNJAB HIGH COURT.—According to the Hindoo Patriot the Government of India has recommended to the Secretary of State the appointment of a third judge to the Chief Court of the Punjab on a salary of Rs. 3,500, and expressed its opinion to the Punjab Government that the place, if sanctioned, should be conferred on a native gentleman. Our contemporary believes the credit of this resolution to belong to Lord Mayo. We are glad to welcome this indication of his Lordship's liberal policy.

FAMINE RELIEF FUND.—The balance of the Famine Relief Fund of 1860-61, remaining in the hands of Government, amounts to 200,000 rupees. This sum was invested in Government securities. The Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab has now asked for 100,000 rupees in aid of the relief funds in that province. The Lahore Central Committee urgently require assistance. The Viceroy has granted the sum asked for, and ordered the immediate sale of securities to that amount.

DEATH OF COLONEL B. HODGSON.—We regret to observe it announced that Lieut.-Colonel Benjamin Hodgson, Staff Corps, commanding H.M.'s 7th M.N.I., died at Penang, on the 17th Feb., from typhus fever, after a comparatively short illness, at the age of fifty-two. He was buried the same evening with the honours due to his rank, his funeral being attended by all the naval and military and civil officials in Penang, as well as by most of the merchants and others.

BLACK MAIL IN THE KHYBER.—It has been remarked upon as a curious illustration of the nature of the Ameer's authority in Afghanistan, be his sovereignty never so undisputed, that before entering the Khyber Pass on his way to Peshawur he was forced to come to an understanding with the Khyber chiefs that he was not to be molested in the Pass. He gave hopes that the payment formerly made for keeping the Pass open might be renewed if no obstruction were offered, and threatened fire and sword in the opposite case.

SEVERE HAILSTORM.—We regret to hear that in the Muttra district the loss occasioned by the deficient rains of last year is now aggravated by a fearful hailstorm, which has devastated the crops more or less in at least a hundred villages. This storm occurred on the afternoon of the 6th. It came from the north-east, following almost exactly the course of the Jaleysur and the Muttra road, and sweeping a breadth of about five miles. In the Saidabad tehsel alone the crops in thirty-one villages are utterly ruined, ear and stalk, so that no bhosa even will survive. Twenty other villages in that tehsel suffered considerably. In Mahabun seventeen villages have lost all, and sixteen others a proportion of their harvest. In Jaleysur and Muttra tehsels also there has been considerable damage. It is said that where the hail had drifted it was a foot deep.—Pioneer, March 13.

WRECK CHART FOR INDIA.—The Government of India has sanctioned the grant to the First Assistant Master Attendant of an allowance of 100 rupees per mensem for the preparation and annual publication of a wreck report and chart for India, and has also allowed him to entertain such moderate clerical establishment as he may find necessary to carry on the work satisfactorily.—Englishman.

THE KUPPOORTHULLA RAJ.—We have already mentioned that the Secretary of State for India has reversed the decision of the late Governor-general in regard to the dispute between his Highness the Rajah of Kuppoothulla and his brothers Bikrama and Suchet Singh. The promise given to his Highness in Durbar by the late Lord Canning is to be upheld—the whole territory to remain under the sovereignty of the present Rajah, and to descend to his heirs. The brothers of his Highness will be provided for according to the instructions which will be sent to the Punjab Government.

THE BRIDGE OVER THE BEEAS.—The “testing of the bridge” at the Beas is now taking place under the direction of Colonel Drummond and Mr. Harrison, with J. C. Marillier, of the firm of Messrs. Brassey and Co. Four spans have been completed, showing the mean deflection of somewhat less than one-sixteenth of an inch. A locomotive and two dead engines weighted with rails are used to test the bridge which is completed, as is some part of the permanent way laid on the east side embankment, as sand only is procurable on that side. On and after the 16th instant a ballast engine and trucks will be at work carrying solid earth from this side to consolidate the great embankment on the Jalandhar side. Great satisfaction seems to be felt relative to Brassey's work.—Indian Public Opinion.

MASHOOD-DEEN.—When the Queen-Mother of Oudh went to England to appeal to the Queen in person against the annexation, she had with her as her Prime Minister one Mashood deen, a Mahomedan noble. This man had two wives in this country, but when he reached England he contracted another marriage with one, probably, of that class of ill-taught, ill-trained Englishwomen, who have no more objection to Mahomedanism, for the sake of wealth or rank, than to go to the Feejee Islands, if required, to be matched. They were married according to Mahomedan forms, but the lady was soon left behind in England, and he returned. She has followed him, and as he asserts she was divorced before he left England she claims her dowry according to Mahomedan law. The case was brought up in the Benares Courts and decided in the lady's favour; but an appeal has been made to the High Court at Allahabad.

RAJPOOTANA.—It is hard to say whether Rajpootana is still suffering from scarcity or from famine. The late conference from the Rajpoot States which met at Ajmere fixed 8 seers for the rupee as the famine test, and since the rain fell the rate has been as low as 7½. It is still 8½. The public works authorities are circulating money, the grain clubs are selling food which seems to be pouring in, and yet the rate does not fall. The missionaries, too, who were the first as usual to move and to rouse others, still feed and supply work to several, having received from the children of the United Presbyterian Church—the poorest of the three Churches in Scotland—a sum of £4,500 as a new year's gift for the famine-stricken. It is true of Rajpootana as it was of Orissa, that, if it had not been for the missionaries, especially in Nussceerabad, the tale of victims to famine would have been much heavier than it is.—Friend of India.

NARROW ESCAPE OF A MISSIONARY.—The Rev. Mr. Johnston, a missionary, who is working in connection with the Baptist Missionary Society amongst the Santhals, near Ramporehaut, has had a very narrow escape from being killed by a tiger. Mr. Johnston had received frequent complaints from the villagers of the destruction of their cattle by a tiger, and had resolved to destroy it, if possible, the first opportunity that presented itself. He received intelligence of its whereabouts, and went out in search of it. On crossing a khal he was met by the animal full in the face, and immediately discharged his rifle at it, but without effect, and in an instant the tiger was upon him, threw him down, and commenced the work of devouring, seizing one of Mr. Johnston's arms between his teeth and crunching it. Fortunately Mr. Boerson came up in the nick of time, and by clapping his hands and shouting so frightened the animal that he made off, but not before Mr. Johnston had been seriously mauled. He was conveyed immediately to the house of Mr. Hampton, at Ramporehaut. Fortunately the native surgeon belonging to the station was on the spot, and was able to render prompt assistance. Mr. Johnston is progressing as favourably as could be expected, considering the serious nature of the injuries he has received, but it will be long before he is able to resume his duties.

DESTRUCTION OF WILD BEASTS.—Sixteen thousand one hundred and ninety-seven rupees were paid during the half-year ending 31st December, 1868, as rewards for wild beasts destroyed in the Central Provinces. Two hundred and fourteen tigers, four hundred and twenty-three panthers and leopards, one hundred and ninety-five bears, ninety-six wolves, and two hundred and fifty-seven hyenas, were killed during the half year. These include cubs, and the non-observance of any distinction in this respect slightly detracts from the interest with which the statistics might have been regarded by the Nimrod mind. The figures include two man-eating tigers, and five man-eating panthers. The largest number of tigers destroyed in one division was eighty-eight, in Chutteesgurh, and in one district forty-one, in Belaspore, within the Chutteesgurh division. The Nagpore division stands second; forty-nine tigers were destroyed in it. Panthers most infest the Jubbulpore and Nerbudda divisions; forty-eight, at an average of eight a month, having been killed in the Chundwara district of the latter. The wolves in the Jubbulpore district have been found so dangerous and destructive that we remember a letter from a railway engineer on the subject, which led to Government raising the rewards for these animals; for twenty-three destroyed in the Saugor district in that division four hundred and sixty rupees were paid. The ordinary rate is five rupees.—Indian Daily News, March 11.

THE CROPS IN LOWER BENGAL.—The returns of the crops and general state of the people in the Lower Provinces up to the middle of February, subsequent to the fall of rain which has proved so beneficial to the country in general, have now been published. The prospects had improved wherever the rain had fallen, but in some parts it was too late to do much good to the winter crops, although it would enable the cultivators to prepare their lands for spring sowings, and would increase the supply of fodder for the cattle. Still, in Cuttack, 4,500 labourers had been employed on the Canal works during the fortnight, and special relief works had been provided in parts of the Balasore districts where the crops had been entirely destroyed. In some pergunnahs in the centre of the Monghyr district the rice crop had been a total failure, and relief works were necessary. In the Sonthal Pergunnahs about Rajmehal the poorer classes were becoming anxious, and work would soon have to be provided for them. At Godda a severe hailstorm had injured the growing crops. The worst accounts, which we have already given, come from the Patna division. In the Loharduggah district of the Chota Nagpore division the people were flocking in increasing numbers to the relief works. From all the other districts, however, the reports were more favourable, though there can be little doubt that the extra two lacs granted by the Government of India for relief measures will be fully required before the close of the dry season.

THE AKOLA EXHIBITION.—Mr. Saunders does not appear to entertain any very sanguine idea of the benefits to be derived from the Exhibition lately held at Akola, in the Hyderabad assigned districts. In forwarding the report on the Exhibition to Government he remarks that it does “not appear to him to present any points worthy of special prominence,” whilst as regards the general effect on the province it must necessarily be as yet in the future. The report itself, however, is not without some features of interest as regards Indian exhibitions. For instance, it is rather a candid admission on behalf of the committee to say that in consequence of their ignorance of the subject they were not able to do justice to the exhibition of implements for tillage and harvesting, although many of the implements were sent from England for exhibition, and some had been especially constructed for use in this country. Was there no one at all acquainted with agriculture to be found in the district? Some excellent pumps for irrigation purposes were exhibited, especially that of Messrs. Shand, Mason and Co., which can be worked either by hand power or machinery; Norton's tube wells, owing to the rocky nature of the soil, did not succeed. Some of the native thread produced by hand labour in this country far surpassed any that was sent from England or elsewhere made by machinery, both in fineness and strength. The show of mixed silk and cotton goods by the native weavers of Nagpore and Bhundara is highly praised, and in this department also the natives seem well able to hold their own against European manufacturers.—Englishman.

THE UNCOVENANTED LEAVE RULES.—We hear on good authority that the uncovenanted leave rules which the Secretary of State sent out for reconsideration (for the very reason that we objected to them, namely, that the rules only pretended to legislate equally for Europeans and natives) have been again sent back to England. The Simla Committee, with only two dissentients, to whose good sense much credit is due, suggested that leave taken in England should extend to six and in India to three years. The object was to enable Europeans to go home, and to induce natives to make use of the privilege of another three years' leave if they thought of visiting Europe. Practically, however, this meant that natives should have three and Europeans six years' leave. The principle laid down by the Secretary of State was that of equal legislation for both European and native, and it was very foolish of Sir John Lawrence to send home rules formed on a tricky avoidance of that principle. Now there can be no doubt that Europeans want more leave than natives. Health, tardy acclimatisation, absence from relatives, wife, children, &c., should be compensated (as much as possible) by concession of extra leave or furlough. A native lives in his own climate, with his own family, and requires only leave. The Europeans want leave as the natives, but also furlough as a foreign soldier far from hearth and home. The Calcutta Committee has recommended the rules to be passed in their entirety, but (in the event of the Duke of Argyll thinking with Sir Stafford) has also sent an alternative, viz., a collection of names of offices, &c., whose incumbents should be treated as to leave as civilians. We fear that in that case many officers with high claims may have to go to the wall, and that “in drawing a line” in the service much injustice may be perpetrated.—Indian Public Opinion.

COLONEL H. STANLEY.—Some of our readers may remember that in 1865 a Court of Inquiry was held at Mhow to investigate certain charges connected with occurrences on parade brought against Col. H. Stanley, of the 15th N.I. The Court recorded no opinion, but Sir C. Straubenzee, then Commander-in-Chief, on reviewing the case, directed that the captain making the charges should be either changed to another regiment or be permitted to go on furlough, we forget which. Some months after the holding of the Court the papers were called for by H.E. Sir W. Mansfield, who, without any reference to the authorities in this Presidency, ordered Colonel Stanley's removal from the command of his regiment. That officer, considering himself grievously wronged, has taken every course open to him to obtain redress, and after wearisome and disheartening efforts, he appears to have at length succeeded, to some extent. Several influential men at home, including most of the members of the Indian Council, are said to have expressed their opinion that Colonel Stanley has had very hard lines indeed; and we hear that the Duke of Argyll, having spent on the case some of his long pent-up energy, has expressed to the Bombay authorities his decided opinion that Colonel Stanley should be re-employed in some suitable position. Although this will do nothing to compensate him for the pecuniary loss and supersession in promotion during the period of his enforced retirement, it will go far to remove a dark cloud from the professional reputation of an officer whose early services under Sir C. Napier and Sir J. Outram, in Sind, were of very high value.—Times of India.

MILITARY.—It is said that Dr. Ross, surgeon to H.E. the Commander-in-Chief, will be appointed garrison surgeon, Fort William, and that Dr. White, at present holding that post, will be placed in civil charge of Berhampore, vice Dr. Fleming, proceeded to Europe.—Capt. K. J. W. Coghill has been appointed by the Governor-general to be Deputy-assistant Quartermaster-general with the Viceroy's camp at Umballa, and has proceeded towards Agra and Umballa to make the necessary arrangements for camp establishments.—We hear from Mhow that the Bays have moved into camp, some distance from the station, owing to several fresh cases of cholera having occurred in the corps. No cases had occurred in either the Artillery or H.M.'s 95th regiment.—The Times of India hears it is in contemplation to order the adoption of a uniform similar to that worn in the old Bombay Marine (prior to its forming part of the late Indian Navy) by the officers of the Dockyard and local Marine. During the recent operations in Huzara, the men of the levies employed behaved remarkably well, and in some cases, as in the affair of Nawab of Umb, rendered very valuable services. This being the case, the Viceroy has, on the recommendation of the Punjab Government, sanctioned the disbursement of Rs. 2,600 as gratuities to the families of those who were killed, and Rs. 1,025 as compensation to those who were wounded. This is as it ought to be.—In consequence of the 12th Bengal Cavalry being short of horses, Abyssinia having been sore upon it, its place at the Umballa display would be taken by the 14th Bengal Lancers. The first Native Infantry also gave place, in consequence of sickness, to the 40th N.I.—Dr. Bellow, Civil Surgeon of Peshawur, has been attached as interpreter to the Staff of the Amier of Cabul during his Highness's stay in India.—Colonel Mowdray Thomson, of Cawnpore celebrity, District Superintendent of Police at Bijour, has been appointed officiating Commandant of the 42nd Assam Light Infantry, in the room of Colonel Rattray proceeding on furlough. The 42nd is, says the Pioneer, likely to have plenty of work on our disturbed Eastern frontier; and Colonel M. Thomson is an officer likely to do that work well.—A detachment of two companies of the 1st Goorkha Light Infantry, under command of Captain Mercer, has been ordered from Dhurmsala to duty at Simla, during the time the Viceroy may be at that sanatorium.—Delhi Gazette, March 11.

Madras.

LIEUT. KENNEDY.—The death is announced of Lieut. Kennedy, of the Royal Artillery, which occurred on Saturday, March 6, at Secunderabad. The deceased officer had been complaining of ill health for some time. He was interred at Trimulgherry the same evening. The number of officers who have recently died at this station is, it is remarked, very extraordinary.

WATER SUPPLY OF MADRAS.—The water supply project of Madras will cost twelve lakhs and eighty thousand rupees, and it is expected that if the work is commenced as soon as it is sanctioned by the Government of India, it will be completed before the close of next year. Up to this time the preliminary expenses have cost the Municipal Commissioners Rs. 6,900.—Madras Standard, March 10.

PRESENTATION OF COLOURS.—On the 23rd of February the troops at Bolarum were paraded to witness the presentation of a pair of new colours to the 2nd Hyderabad Infantry by the Resident. Mr. Saunders, in presenting the colours to Major Adey, sketched the history of the corps from its embodiment by Sir Henry Russell in 1812 through the second Mahratta war, in which it formed part of Sir John Malcolm's division, whose thanks, as well as those of Sir Thomas Hislop, the Commander-in-Chief of the Madras army, were tendered to the regiment for its services at Mehidpore. At the capture of Nowah in 1818, and in several subsequent affairs in the Deccan from 1824 to 1847, the regiment maintained its high reputation, and conducted itself with exemplary steadiness and fidelity during the mutiny; it also volunteered for field service during the Abyssinian Expedition.

A NEW SPECULATION.—Major Haig, Executive Engineer of Doomagoodium, is, we learn from the Central India Times, about to engage in a rather novel speculation. He intends sending straw from Doomagoodium to Coconada, having it pressed there and finally shipping it for the English markets! He is very sanguine as to the result of his scheme, and feels convinced that it will pay.

MADRAS UNIVERSITY.—Lord Napier has made a proposal which has for its object to convert the Madras University from a simple examining body into a teaching one. He proposes to create five University Professorships, (1) for Architecture, Civil Engineering and Mechanics, (2) for Natural Philosophy and Chemistry, (3) History and Belles Lettres, (4) Astronomy, (5) Law, with the obligation of delivering lectures on these subjects. His Lordship calculates that the total cost of this establishment would be £4,100 per annum. He would give Rs. 1,000 a month to each of the three professors of Architecture, Natural Philosophy and History, and he would give an honorarium of £200 a year to the Government astronomer for delivering lectures as professor of astronomy, and one of £360 to the gentleman who would devote a portion of his time to lecturing on law. As however the professorship of architecture would be held by the principal of the Engineering College, his present salary would have to be deducted from the proposed salary of Rs. 1,000 a month, and as the law professorship would simply be a transfer from the Presidency College, the £360 allowed for that chair would not be a new charge. In communicating his minute to his colleagues, Lord Napier expressly guarded against its being thought to embody a definite scheme; it was merely a suggestion upon which he invited comment. His chief object, he said, was to "give a new impetus to higher study, and to rouse a more generous and disinterested intellectual movement in this Presidency than at present exists." Mr. Powell, the Director of Public Instruction, has written a very damaging commentary on the scheme. That gentleman points out that the project of attaching professorships to the University is not authorised by the act of incorporation, and would require special authorisation by the higher authorities; the Presidency and provincial colleges have been especially established to enable students to pursue the course of studies required for university degrees; and if university professors are appointed there will be two sets of men both discharging the same duties, and both paid out of the same purse; he thinks that architecture is a branch of civil engineering, with which the university has nothing to do, and which ought to be taught in the Engineering College; he does not quite understand what a professor of "natural philosophy" would be called upon to teach, and he thinks that students are instructed in the different branches of natural philosophy at the Presidency College more effectually than they could be by a single professor at the University. Mr. Powell holds that the instruction in English literature given in that college is high enough to meet the wants of all except an extremely small number, and he thinks the proposed professorship of English literature or belles lettres "altogether unnecessary." The chair of astronomy is found to be of little value even at Cambridge, and at Madras it would be altogether superfluous. With cruel satire the director adds his opinion that the kind of teaching in astronomy best suited to the capacities of the candidates could be given by means of a magic lantern; and, as he gravely remarks, the manipulation of that instrument would be beneath the dignity of a university and a professor of astronomy! As for the law professorship, it may as well be retained in connection with the Presidency College as be transferred to the University; and so with the Sanscrit professorship. Mr. Powell shows that for all practical purposes the Presidency College serves the objects sought as well as they are likely to be served by establishing new professorships.

INCIDENTS OF THE AFGHAN AMEER'S VISIT TO INDIA.

Shere Ali, on entering the residence provided for him at Peshawur, despatched telegraphic messages to his Excellency the Viceroy and his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, tendering his acknowledgments for the honourable reception accorded to him, and expressing his gratification at the cordial welcome given to him. In the afternoon the Commissioner paid a visit to his Highness, who was pleased to express again entire satisfaction with all the arrangements made for his comfort. He expressed his thankfulness for the honourable reception given to him, and more than once referred with surprise and pleasure to the evidences of prosperity he witnessed on all sides. "Indeed," observed his Highness au risque de nous deplaire, "the English, wherever they go, spread wealth and prosperity in their track. It cannot, in fact, be otherwise under their system of rule, where justice is tempered with mercy, and the welfare of the multitude is the prime object of Government."

On the 4th of March his Highness paid a formal visit to the Commissioner. The visit lasted two hours, during which his Highness partook of refreshments, and appeared to be interested in various scientific instruments produced for his inspection, but was probably quite as much amused with the toys presented to his son, the Sirdar Abdoollah Jan, a fair boy aged seven years, who accompanied him. On his departure his Highness was heard (of course by accident) to observe—"These English are wonderful people. We know they can fight and rough it as well as anybody else, and yet they know how to make themselves comfortable and surround themselves with luxuries. Now, why can't we do the same? Why should we continue to live in the filth and discomfort that surrounds us?"

On the 5th of March his Highness was present at a grand parade of the whole of the troops in the garrison. At his Highness's request an Armstrong gun was marched from the parade to the General's house for the inspection of his Highness. The Ameer examined the gun and carriage and all the equipments with the greatest minuteness and interest, and expressed his wish to be furnished with a plan and model of the gun and carriage complete. His Highness's wishes fortunately were easily met, and the Commissioner presented him with a model from the Peshawur Museum, supplying its place with a new one.

On the 6th March the Commissioner, Major Pollock, c.s.i., paid a visit to the Ameer. His Highness during the interview mentioned having received the Viceroy's reply to his telegram of the 3rd inst., and expressed his gratification at the cordial welcome to her Majesty's territories given him by his Excellency. In the evening his Highness drove out in an open carriage, attended by Colonel C. Chamberlain, c.b., 23rd Pioneers, and Dr. H. W. Bellew, Civil Surgeon, whose attendance his Highness specially requested. His Highness drove through cantonments, along the mall, and visited her Majesty's 36th Regiment [in barracks. Colonel MacMahon, c.b., received his Highness and conducted him through the barracks, sergeants' mess, reading-room, &c.; his Highness minutely inspected the men's kits and arms, and spent some time in the reading-room and listening to the band. On re-entering his carriage the men of H.M.'s 36th Regiment gave the Ameer three good British cheers. His Highness expressed his appreciation of the compliment, and thanked Colonel MacMahon for his polite attentions. The Ameer observed that he had now seen the British soldier visited unawares in his barracks. "Nothing," his Highness said, "could exceed the order, cleanliness and comfort in which I have found them." Indeed he was evidently surprised at the new barracks, and remarked, "They are far more magnificent and luxurious than any building in my kingdom, not excepting my own palace."

On the 8th of March his Highness visited the photographic studio of Mr. Baker. He was attended by the Commissioner, Major Pollock, c.s.i., and the Civil Surgeon, Dr. Bellew. His Highness and his son, Sirdar Abdullah Jan, were photographed singly, and then in a group with some of their attendant Court officials. On being escorted back to his residence his Highness was shown a portion of the Atlantic submarine cable. On its mechanism and uses being explained to him he expressed great astonishment, and could hardly credit the possibility of a message being sent from Peshawur to London within twenty-four hours. In the course of a general conversation his Highness stated that coal was known to exist in the Lohgar Valley, but the people were too ignorant and unsettled to make any use of it. The circumstance of the Ameer and all his suite being dressed in the costume of the people of Herat and not in that of the Afghans having given rise to comment on the part of the native residents of Peshawur, his Highness explained that he had adopted this costume ever since he succeeded to the throne of Cabul, as being more suited to a military life than the cumbrous robes and head-dress of the Afghans.—Pioneer.

Miscellaneous.

OLDENBURG CONSULATES.—The Grand Duke of Oldenburg has suppressed the Oldenburg Consulates at Akyab, Bombay, and Rangoon.

DRAINAGE COMMISSION.—Dr. Lyon has, at the request of the Drainage Commission, been appointed Secretary to the Commission, which met for the first time on March 20.

SURGEON JAMES.—We understand that Surgeon James, M.D., will, on the recommendation of Sir William Merewether, K.S.I., and C.B., be appointed civil surgeon of Kurrachee. Dr. Morton, who has so long and so satisfactorily acted in the appointment, will, on being relieved, rejoin the 2nd Belooch Regiment.—Our Paper.

SIR S. FITZGERALD.—His Excellency Sir Seymour Fitzgerald was to proceed to Mahabeshwur, via Bancote and the Nagotna river. The steamer May Frere went out of harbour on March 19, and would receive his Excellency on board at Malabar Point. It is probable that his Excellency will take a short cruise before proceeding to Nagotna.

EUROPEAN WORKMEN IN INDIA.—Mr. Knox remarked very aptly to the Bhoore Ghaut Commission the other day that "a rupee has two values; it is equal to 1s. if you spend it, but 2s. if you save it." He added to this remark a statement which very agreeably surprised us. "As a rule," he said, "our men (European engine drivers), after three years' service, take home about Rs. 5,000. That is what I consider about the average." Most persons, we imagine, will share our gratified surprise at this disclosure. We had no idea that it was possible for an English mechanic to save so large a sum in so short a period.

DEATH OF A HOSTAGE AT ADEN.—It may not be generally known that at the close of the campaign in Abyssinia last June three Abyssinians, chiefs of the tribes of Ghaso, Rassamo, and Debra Nulla Shoboes, were seized and sent down to Aden by Lord Napier, with orders that they should be detained there as hostages until such time as the murderers of Mr. Dufton, who was attached to the Intelligence Department of the Expedition, were produced by the tribes. One of these prisoners, the Ghaso chief, died in the Aden jail of scurvy last November; and advices from Aden now report the death, on the 25th of February, of another of the chiefs from the same cause.

SIR JOSEPH ARNOULD.—Mr. Cowasjee Jehanghier Readymoney, desirous to perpetuate the name of Sir Joseph Arnould in Bombay, has bethought him of a novel means of doing so, as the following letter will show:—"To the Secretaries, Scottish Orphanage Society. Gentlemen,—I have the pleasure to enclose you a Government promissory note for Rs. (500) five hundred, of five per cents, bearing interest from February 28, 1869, No. 005,899-64,555, the interest of which you will oblige me by spending year after year, on the anniversary of Sir Joseph Arnould's birth-day, in sweetmeats for the children of the Orphanage under your charge, to preserve some trifling permanent reminiscence of the career amongst us of a judge whose arduous duties have been discharged to the universal satisfaction of the community.—I am, &c., COWASJEE JEHANGHIER READY-MONEY.—Bombay, March 11." The children of the Orphanage will no doubt now inquire who Sir Joseph Arnould is, and all about him.

THE HON. MR. ELLIS.—The appointment of the Hon. Mr. Ellis to the Supreme Council, in the place of the Hon. Mr. Noble Taylor, is objected to on the Bengal side, not on the ground of Mr. Ellis's fitness (all acknowledge that), but because it will be "to the detriment of the Bengal civilians." Surely this has nothing to do with the difficulty which we understand Mr. Maine has discovered in the way of Mr. Ellis's appointment. Mr. Ellis is a member of the Bombay Council, and, as such, it is asserted, disqualified to act as a member of the Supreme Council, retaining his appointment in Bombay, whilst no one can legally act for him in the Local Council. A reference has, we believe, been made to the Secretary of State on the subject. The difficulty, we imagine, is of a purely formal nature. Mr. Ellis was appointed by the Duke of Argyll, and if the legal difficulties which have presented themselves to the mind of Mr. Maine do really exist, we are satisfied, with the Pioneer, that the Indian Secretary would prefer the removal of those difficulties to the cancellation of an appointment made by himself, and of a nature unexceptionably good. A meeting of the native inhabitants of Bombay was held on March 19, at the residence of the Hon. Munguldass Nathooobhoy, to consider the best means of expressing their sense of the esteem and respect in which the Hon. Mr. Ellis is held by the native community. Mr. Ellis left Bombay at the invitation of Lord Mayo, to be present at the Umballa ceremonies, and he will therefore proceed to Simla to take his seat in the Viceregal Council. Mr. Ellis has, throughout his career, proved himself a steadfast and impartial friend of the natives of Bombay, and wherever he has held office his memory is held dear by the people. Especially is this the case as regards the Southern Mahratta country, where he was regarded, not merely as a clever revenue officer, but as a friend and adviser on whom all might rely.—Times of India.

INCOME-TAX.—The following telegram from the Financial Secretary to the Government of India is published:—"All salaries, from March, at the rate of Rs. 41 10a. 8p. per mensem, and upwards, will be assessed under the new income-tax at one per cent."

DEPARTURE OF H.M.S. "OCTAVIA."—H.M.S. Octavia, Captain Alexander, sailed from Bombay for England on March 12. The Octavia was commissioned in 1865, and has been on this station since the early part of 1866. Commodore Heath, K.C.B., the senior officer on the East India station, shifts his flag to the Forte, which came out to relieve the Octavia. Captain Basil Hall goes home by the mail to-day, and Captain Alexander, who brought out the Forte, takes the Octavia home. It will be remembered that at the commencement of the Abyssinian Expedition Lord Napier and staff were conveyed to Annesley Bay in the Octavia. The Chief was a great favourite of all in the ship, and when he went on board to say good-bye he was most warmly and enthusiastically welcomed, all hands turning up to receive him. His Lordship said that he could not let the Octavia leave Bombay without saying farewell, as he had a lively remembrance of the kindness he had experienced from all during his passage to Annesley Bay, and he especially recollected the happy Christmas-day he spent among them. Not only England, but all Europe knew the great services which the naval brigade rendered to the expedition; the value of the rocket party was fresh in the recollection of everyone, and he would venture to say that no expedition would ever be fitted out without such a valuable auxiliary. He was happy to tell them that a medal, in the shape of a cross, was to be given to every one engaged in the Abyssinian Expedition. Whenever in future he met a man-of-war's man, he should always look to see if he had the Abyssinian decoration. The Octavia got under way at five o'clock, and having dropped down to the Forte and Daphne to say good-bye, the crews of which ships cheered her lustily, she steamed away out of the harbour. In five minutes more she had made sail, and in half an hour had faded away in the distance. She was accompanied to the outer light-ship by a steamer, in which were Lord Napier and Commodore Heath, and Lady Heath. The Octavia takes home the officers and crew of H.M.S. Vigilant, which was paid off on the 1st of January. On her way home she calls at the Cape, Sierra Leone, St. Helena, Ascension, and Madeira.—Times of India, March 20.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

MEDICAL BOARDS.

Adj. gen.'s Office, Poona, March 8.—No. 233.—The following gen. orders by H.E. the C. in C. in India are published for information and guidance:—Head Qrs., Simla, Sept. 25.—No. 289.—With reference to the orders (Queen's regs., page 168, para. 788; Horse Gds.' G.O., No. 93, Nov., 1867; Adj. gen.'s circular No. 23, of March 3, 1868; Adj. gen.'s circular No. 66, of June 18, 1868), and in view to the removal of misapprehension in regard to the signification of the term "medical board," which is at present understood in a different sense by military and medical authorities, the following rules, which have received the sanction of Govt., are published for general information and guidance:—

1. Medical officers are not in future to be nominated members of any boards, except such as are purely professional or departmental.

(b.) Sanitary boards, when matters influencing, or likely to influence, the health of the troops or community are concerned, and on which a medical opinion only is required.

(c.) Board for examination of candidates for admission into the subordinate medical department.

Departmental boards mean—

(a.) Boards on medicines and surgical equipment.

2. Such boards to be composed of medical officers exclusively, and to consist of a president and two members under all circumstances.

3. Boards of survey on hospital bedding, clothing, and utensils, on hospital diets and wines, although considered departmental, may, however, be composed of medical and military officers, indifferently.

4. Boards to examine as to the fitness or otherwise of soldiers for re-engagement are purely "professional." At stations where there are two or more regiments these boards should be presided over by a medical officer of a regiment other than that to which the soldier belongs. If, however, there be only one regiment at the station, the medical officers of the regiment should of themselves constitute a board, sign the re-engagement certificate, and should, besides, furnish to the commanding officer a written statement, detailing their opinion as to the man's health, muscular development, age, &c., and, in case of rejection, a full explanation of their reasons; and this statement they should all sign and attach to the re-engagement form.

5. Boards of survey on barrack furniture, soldiers' rations [this modifies para. 5 of G.O.C.C. Sept. 9, 1865, para. 8, sec. 18, and para. 7, sec. 56, of the military regulations], and canteen supplies should be composed of military officers exclusively; and if the opinion of a medical officer be required, one should be detailed to attend the board (regimentally or from the brigade office), who will give his opinion, either  viva voce  or in writing; this opinion, if in writing, to be attached to the proceedings of the board.

6. The only exception to these rules to be in the case of cantonment committees, at which the principal medical officers of the British and Indian forces will attend as members.

7. These rules will not affect the composition of special committees appointed by Government or the Commander-in-Chief.

EXAMINATION IN NATIVE LANGUAGES.—The following officer is reported to have passed the required examination in Hindustanee, according to the lower standard:—Capt. Seton, 82nd foot.

ARRIVALS FROM EUROPE.—The undermentioned officers returned to duty, by permission of the Sec. of State for India, March 8:—Captain Watts, staff corps; Lieut. Morris, gen. list, asst. engineer P.W. department; Asst. surgeon Hopkins, civil surgeon, Hyderabad; and Lieut. Twemlow, R.E.

TO DO DUTY WITH INVALIDS.—The following medical officers are appointed to do duty with the invalids under orders to proceed to England, via the Cape of Good Hope:—Asst. surgs. Waters, 82nd foot, per ship Windsor Castle; Anderson, 19th brig. R.A., per ship Windsor Castle; and Howard, 8th brig. R.A., per ship Sam Mendel.

CIVIL FURLONGS AND LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The following officers obtained leave of absence in March:—Mr. West, act. judicial comr., Scinde, 2 years' furl. from May 25 next. Mr. Leischwager, superint., preventive service, for 8 mo. from March 5, to Australia, m.c. Capt. McGilivray, dist. superint. of police in Canara district, priv. leave for 3 mo. from date of departure of the last steamer in May next from Karwar to Bombay. Mr. A. H. Plunkett, dep. coll. and mag. of Tanna, priv. leave for 3 mo. Mr. C. J. DAVIES, act. dep. comr. of customs, &c., 2 mo.

TRAVELLING EXPENSES OF ROMAN CATHOLIC PRIESTS.—In assimilation to the practice obtaining in Bengal, the following rules are laid down for regulating the admission of travelling expenses to Roman Catholic priests when required to visit out-stations to minister to British soldiers or their families in sickness:—Applications for visits from Roman Catholic priests must be addressed by the officer commanding the station at which the priest is required to the officer commanding the station at which he resides, stating clearly the circumstances, and if the latter is satisfied of the necessity for the visit, he may authorise the priest to proceed at the Government expense by the issue of a division or station order. If the journey (or any portion of it) can be performed by rail, a free pass must be given to the priest there and back, and for such portion as must be travelled by dak, &c., the priest will submit a contingent bill for the sum actually expended, vouched by a certified copy of the division or station order, and the receipt of the dak company or person supplying the conveyance. When the application may be sent by the person requiring his services direct to the priest, the latter, if he considers it an occasion requiring his attendance, should, on receiving it, at once apply for the order to the officer commanding the station (or division if he is on the spot), who must use his own discretion in complying with the application or not.

MILITARY FURLONGS, &c.—The undermentioned officers have obtained leave of absence, subject to confirmation by H.E. the C. in C. in India, to proceed to England by the overland route, for the purpose of appearing before a medical board:—Lieut. Beaumont, 1st battalion 23rd foot; Surg. major Holloway, 37th foot. Lieut. col. Hathway, staff corps, for thirty days from date of departure, preparatory to proceeding to Europe. Lieut. Stourton, 1st battalion, 8th foot, for thirty days from date of departure, to proceed to Bombay, preparatory to obtaining a final certificate to Europe. Lieut. col. ## OUR INDIAN POSSESSIONS.

On Wednesday afternoon, the 6th inst., the members of the East India Association assembled in the theatre of the Royal United Service Institution, in Whitehall-yard, for the purpose of hearing a paper read by Major-General Sir Vincent Eyre, K.C.S., C.B., entitled "A Retrospect of the Afghan War, with Reference to Passing Events in Central Asia." The theatre was well filled. Sir RODERICK I. MURCHISON, Bart., K.C.B., occupied the chair.

Sir V. EYRE, after a few preliminary observations, proceeded to point out upon a map, which contained the most recent information regarding Central Asia, the existing boundaries of Russian and of English power, and having done so he gave a graphic sketch of the Afghan campaigns from the commencement of the war in 1836 until Lord Ellenborough wisely determined to evacuate the country and restore the exiled Dost Mahommed Khan. He alluded to the life which he himself and the other captives had led whilst in the hands of the Afghans. Matters had now, he thought, much improved upon our North-Western Frontier. The Sikh army no longer existed, and British rule extended through the Punjab to the borders of Afghanistan. Invasion of this country, indeed, now seemed so temptingly easy, that any startling renewal of the Russian panic might precipitate us beyond recall into a complete or partial reoccupation of the country. But he deprecated any such panic. In 1837 Count Nesselrode, when pressed by our Government, said, "The idea of assailing India has never presented itself, and never will present itself, to the mind of our august master;" and he further said, "A single glance at the map ought to be sufficient to dissipate in this respect all prejudice, and convince every impartial and enlightened man that no hostile design against England can direct the policy of our Cabinet in Asia." In taking "a glance at the map," Sir Vincent showed that our north-west frontier of India was by nature one of the strongest in the world, protected as it was by the rapid river of the Indus, the mountains of Afghanistan, the Suliman range, and the desert tracts that border our possessions in Scinde. In addition to this there were the immense facilities at our disposal for concentrating troops and the munitions of war by river, road, and rail, and there were the strong reserves which could readily be poured in by sea from our colonies. Under these circumstances he could not bring himself to believe that any Russian general would risk his own and his country's reputation in any such Quixotic adventure as that of attacking India. And of this he was perfectly sure, that if such an attempt should be seriously made not a man of the invading force would be likely to find his way back to Russia. Russia might indeed count upon her near approach being the signal for a general revolt among our native soldiers and subjects, but in doing so he believed that she would reckon without her host. The natives were shrewd judges of their interest, and when the question was simply one of a change of European masters he believed that their answer would be similar to that of Charles II. to his brother James—"Brother, don't distress yourself; rest assured that they will never take my life to make you a king." In conclusion he observed that the Russian nearest European starting-point for Cabul or Candahar was little short of 2,000 miles away. They would have immense difficulties before they could reach India, and in his opinion the world was wide enough for us both without treading upon each other's toes. He counselled that we should cultivate the most intimate friendship and goodwill with Persia, and that those entrusted with the safety of our Indian dominions should look well to the assailable points of the Indus, and to the mountain passes immediately beyond; that they should fortify the former; and, as regarded the latter, lose no opportunity of entering into amicable political and pecuniary arrangements with the local chiefs, whom it might be necessary to propitiate whenever such active measures might seem desirable by way of precaution. For the rest it might suffice to bear in mind the profound axioms of Jacob Jaithful—"What's done can't be helped;" "Better luck next time;" and, above all, "Take it coolly."

Sir R. MURCHISON congratulated the lecturer that he had terminated his paper in so pacific a manner. He happened to know that the present Emperor of Russia was the most pacific of Sovereigns, and that he had recently, through his Prime Minister, given the most solemn assurances to her Majesty's Government that neither at the present, nor at any other time, would he attempt to approach Afghanistan or trouble our frontier by in any way involving himself in the affairs of the Afghans. He said this because so many persons were ready to adopt ideas which would soon be dissipated if they would only condescend to take "a glance at the map."

After these few words Sir Roderick vacated the chair, and this terminated the proceedings.

Miscellaneous.

ARMY MEDICAL SCHOOL.—The session at the Army Medical School at Netley commenced on April 1. Deputy Inspector-General W. C. Maclean delivered the introductory lecture to an audience consisting of six surgeons, twenty-five assistant-surgeons (who have been permitted to attend the course of instruction), and twenty applicants for commissions in her Majesty's Indian army. Amongst the latter are some gentlemen of colour, to whom Dr. Maclean addressed a few special words of welcome, complimenting them on the rapid diminution of prejudices, and assuring them of the Government's co-operation and support.

THE MAILS, &c.—SOUTHAMPTON, April 10.—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship Ripon, Captain J. M. Rogers, sailed hence to-day for Gibraltar, Malta, and Alexandria, with the Bombay mails, a general cargo, and 300 boxes specie, &c., value £153,322. 11s. 7d., for Bombay, viz.:—Bar gold, £75,000; bar silver, £74,300; silver coin, £3,200; gold coin, £600; watches, jewellery, &c., £222. 11s. 7d. She takes out 19 first and 11 second-class passengers, and 20 proceed by the corresponding steamer from Marseilles, making a total of 50, among whom are Lord Lilford, Captain Boutell, and Captain F. Grant, for Gibraltar; Major-General P. K. Skinner, for Aden; Captain Studdy, Ensign Dickson, Surgeon J. F. Longheed, Dr. G. Maitland, Captain and Mrs. Palmer, for Bombay; Captain Doherty, for Bombay, joins at Suez.

ARRIVAL OF TROOPS FROM CEYLON.—The Queen of the North, sailing Indiaman, Capt. T. S. Green, R.N.R., belonging to the firm of Messrs. John Liddett and Sons, Billiter-street, City, arrived at Spithead on the 10th inst. from Ceylon, with the following troops and passengers on board under contract of transport with the Indian Government. Captain Harris, R.A., in command, Mrs. Harris, and three children; Staff-Surgeon Meadows, M.D., Mrs. Meadows, and child; Mr. Pearce, Mrs. Green, Mrs. Gorman, and seven children; twenty-six time-expired soldiers, with seven soldiers' wives, and seventeen children. The troops were disembarked from the Queen of the North at Spithead on Monday, and the ship would afterwards resume her voyage for the Thames to deliver her cargo of Indian produce.

DR. THOMAS ROBINSON, who has resigned the Mastership of the Temple, was educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, where he was Bell's Scholar. He took his B.A. degree in 1813, when he was thirteenth wrangler—the year in which Sir John Herschell, late Master of the Mint, was senior wrangler. In early life he went to India, and became chaplain to Bishop Heber, and Archdeacon of Madras. In 1854 he was presented by Lord Cranworth, who was then Lord Chancellor, to a Canonry Residentiary in Rochester Cathedral, and in the following year, by Lord Palmerston, to the Mastership of the Temple. In 1853 he was presented by the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's to the rectory of Therfield, which he resigned in 1860. He is the author of a translation of the Old Testament into Persian, a life of Bishop Heber, and "Lectures on the study of the Oriental Languages."

THE COUNCIL OF INDIA.—A Parliamentary return relating to the Council of India has been prepared in pursuance of a motion made by Mr. Baines. It states that Sir J. W. Hogg is 78 years of age; he practised at the Calcutta Bar above six years, and was Registrar of the Supreme Court for eleven years. Mr. Macnaghten is 61; he was officer of the Supreme Court for above fifteen years. Mr. Mangles is 67, Mr. Prinsep 76, Sir F. Currie 70; they were in the Covenanted Civil Service for eighteen and a-half, thirty-four, and thirty-five years respectively. Sir R. Vivian is 67; he was in the Madras Military Service for forty-four years. All these members of Council were directors of the East India Company. Sir H. C. Montgomery is 66, and Mr. Arbuthnot 61; they were in the Covenanted Civil Service for thirty-two and a-half and twenty and a-quarter years respectively. Sir T. Erskine Perry is 62; he was an Indian judge for eleven and a-half years. Major-general W. E. Baker is 60; he served in the Bengal Engineers for above twenty-nine years. Sir G. R. Clerk is 68, Sir Henry B. Frere 53, Sir R. Montgomery 59, Sir F. Halliday 62; they were in the Covenanted Civil Service respectively for thirty, thirty-two and a half (including his Governorship at Bombay), thirty-six and three quarters, and thirty-four years. Sir H. Rawlinson is 58; he was on the Bombay military establishment for above twenty-eight and a half years. The salary of each of these gentlemen as member of Council is £1,200; eleven of them have also annuities, civil service pensions, or military pay. The ages of the six secretaries of departments are 56, 62, 56, 54, 59, and 51 years; they had all been in the Indian service, out or at home, before they received these appointments. So also had the Director-General of Stores, who is 49 years of age. The Accountant-General, who is 45, was transferred to the Indian home service from the permanent Civil Service of the Crown. The auditor, who is 67, was in the Bombay Infantry for forty years. The salaries of these gentlemen range from £1,000 a-year to £1,720; and three of them have also military pay or pension, or Civil Service annuity. The Civil Service annuities are partly paid for by subscriptions of 4 per cent. on salaries during service in India.

MISS CAMPBELL (daughter of the late Princess Gorum, of Coorg), accompanied by Lady Login, had the honour of an interview with her Majesty at Buckingham Palace on Friday last.

MALVERN COLLEGE.—The first term was brought to a conclusion on Thursday, the 8th April, the prizes being distributed by the Rev. G. Fisk, member of the College Council. The following awards were made:—Beauchamp Prizes: English Verse, T. Bardwell; Latin Prose, E. Corfe; Latin Verse and Greek Prose, J. Haworth; Greek Verse, E. Jones. Gully Prizes: French, J. Scholfield and J. Darley; German, H. Goldingham. Council Prizes: Divinity, J. Cramp and H. Ingleby; Composition, J. Haworth and E. Corfe; English Literature, &c., H. Barnes, H. Goldingham, H. Rogers, F. Wilcox, &c.

MILITARY SERVICES OF BISHOP SELWYN'S SUCCESSOR.—The Rev. William Garden Cowie, M.A., of Trinity Hall, Cambridge, Rector of Stafford, has accepted the Bishopric of Auckland, in succession to Bishop Selwyn. In 1857 Mr. Cowie was appointed a chaplain on the Bengal establishment, and immediately on arriving in India he proceeded to join the army in the field, and served under Lord Clyde throughout the campaign ending in the final siege and capture of Lucknow. He was then attached to the flying column under Sir Robert Walpole, and was present with the Highland regiments and the Rifle Brigade at the actions of Rooyeah, Allygunge, and Bareilly. At the conclusion of the war he was stationed for some years at Bareilly, near which place he founded a native Christian village, since known as Cowiegunge. In the autumn of 1863 he was ordered to join Lord Elgin's camp and act as chaplain with the Governor-General during his official tour. On Lord Elgin's death, Mr. Cowie volunteered to serve as chaplain with the field force on the north-west frontier, under Sir Nevill Chamberlain, and his services having been accepted, he joined the force without delay, and experienced all the hardships of the short but severely contested Umbeylea campaign, and was present at the crowning assault and capture of Laloo by Sir John Garvoek. That campaign over, he was summoned to Calcutta to act as domestic chaplain to Bishop Cotton, who had become acquainted with him at Bareilly during a tour of visitation in the diocese; and he continued to act in that capacity—showing himself an ardent supporter of the great educational scheme propounded by the late lamented bishop—till it became necessary for him to return to England to recruit his health in 1866. In the spring of 1867 he was presented by Lord Chancellor Chelmsford to the rectory of Stafford. His labours there in a large and populous district seem to have attracted the notice of Bishop Selwyn—the bishop of the diocese—who was not acquainted with him before becoming Bishop of Lichfield. The Staffordshire Advertiser of May 7th, 1867, in announcing Mr. Cowie's appointment to Stafford, speaks thus of his Indian services, for which he has received the Indian war medal and is entitled to the Frontier medal about to be issued:—"In these various exciting fields of labour, during which he was present in no less than ten engagements with the enemy, we are informed that Mr. Cowie so discharged the duties of his office as a Christian minister as to establish a very considerable influence over both officers and men, which he turned to good account by many successful efforts for the improvement of the physical, moral, and religious condition of the troops. And he also extended his labours to the native converts then undergoing persecution, and a very striking proof of the estimation in which they held him is found in the fact that the Christian village which he founded with a missionary school under native teachers has been named after him, Cowiegunge."—Broad Arrow.

SILK CULTIVATION IN INDIA.—The first of a series of six conferences on Indian subjects was held at the Society of Arts on Friday evening, April 2. The chair was taken by Dr. Forbes Watson, and the attendance included numerous gentlemen interested in the commerce of our Indian dependency. An able paper was read by Mr. P. L. Simmonds, the honorary secretary of the recently-formed Silk Supply Association. He pointed out that the growth of silk in India had for many years been a matter of anxious consideration amongst persons interested in the manufacture. So far back as 1808 a movement was commenced to extend the manufacture of Bengal silk, and although since then the supply from China, Japan, and other eastern countries had increased, Bengal silk was still more and more in demand, largely as it was capable of improvement. Last year our total imports of silk were nearly seven millions of pounds—considerably less than those of 1858. So far back as 1757 the East India Company sent out persons to improve the cultivation of native silk. The district of cultivation was then chiefly Bengal, it being alleged that the North-West Provinces were too hot and dry for the existence of the worm. Attempts to introduce it in the west failed, but some excellent silk had been produced in Mysore, and it was now generally thought that the valleys of the Himalayas would be a fine field for silk cultivation. Provided skilful reeling were everywhere adopted, no one could tell how great would be the silk produce of the East. At the present time this was being done, the natives selling the cocoons to Europeans, who, upon the Italian system, worked up silk that would compete in many respects with that of Europe. The poverty of the cocoon was, however, a difficulty demanding the admission of new seed from Japan or elsewhere. Our highest imports of silk from India were in 1829, when they reached over two millions of pounds; the average was now less than half that quantity. One of the most interesting portions of the paper was that which detailed the various efforts made to breed silkworms and establish a growth of mulberry trees. It seems that for a hundred years or more experiments upon experiments have been made, some with no encouragement, others with successful results. The different climates, so often unfavourable to the growth of the worm and the plant upon which it feeds, have proved the chief obstacles, and the incapability of the natives giving the matter the perpetual care it required was enumerated amongst the difficulties to be overcome. The general deduction was that, with care and skill and the employment of capital, large districts in India might develop a vast wealth of silk. In the discussion following the paper, Government encouragement, if not direct support, was asked for by some, while others held that if people wanted to make money out of silk culture they must rely upon their own enterprise. As to the desirableness of extending the cultivation of silk in India there was no divergence of opinion, and the author of the paper received the cordial thanks of the meeting for the information he had given.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS, TUESDAY, April 6.—GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.—The Duke of ARGYLL announced that on Thursday week he would proceed with the Bill introduced last session in the House of Commons by Sir S. Northcote having reference to the constitution of the Council of India.—The Marquis of SALISBURY inquired whether the Bill would contain any clauses relating to the financial control of the Council.—The Duke of ARGYLL replied in the negative.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, April 6.—JUNJEERA.—MR. EYKYN asked the Under-secretary of State for India whether his attention had been called to the petition of Nawab Seeda Abdoul, claiming to be the rightful Nawab of Junjeera; whether it was true, as stated in such petition, that the reigning Nawab had kept for many years, and was still keeping, the family of Nawab Seeda Abdoul in confinement in a fortress at sea; and whether the Government had taken any and what steps for their release.—MR. GRANT DUFF: To the first part of my hon. friend's questions I am able to give a direct answer. My attention has been called to this petition, and there is no validity whatever in the claim of the petitioner. To the second question I cannot give so direct an answer, for the following reason:—our relations with the small maritime State of Junjeera are of the most curious kind. Unconquerable by our predecessors in the sovereignty of Western India, this little State, although absolutely insignificant in point of material strength, has been unconquered even by us. The attitude of Junjeera towards the British Government is partly courteous, partly apprehensive, partly repellent. This attitude our authorities respect, never interfering except when absolutely forced to do so. Although Junjeera is so near Bombay, its rude independence is not tempered by the presence of a British resident, and hence we have not the same facilities for knowing what goes on there that we have with reference to most native courts. The tenor of such information as has reached us about the affair to which my hon. friend calls attention is at variance with the information that has reached him, but we intend to make some further inquiries.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, April 8.—RUSSIA IN CENTRAL ASIA.—MR. GLADSTONE made an appeal to Mr. Eastwick to postpone his motion on this subject. He said, the hon. member has a motion which stands for to-morrow (April 9), to call the attention of the House to the state of affairs in Central Asia, and to move for papers in relation to it. Her Majesty's Government, having considered the terms of that motion, are of opinion that, although it might in some respects be inconvenient to have some parts of that subject discussed, there are others which might with advantage be discussed; yet, on the whole, it would not be for the interest of the public service that a discussion should be raised in this House in regard to it. Some misapprehensions have undoubtedly gone abroad with reference to the nature of the transactions in Afghanistan which might be cleared up. The chief misapprehension is as to an annual subsidy to be paid by the Indian Government to the Ameer of Afghanistan. This is an entire misapprehension. But the Central Asian is a much larger question. There have been communications, I am happy to say, of a very friendly and favourable character between her Majesty's Government and that of the Emperor of the Russias, but those communications have not reached a conclusion, and it would not be, in our opinion, advantageous or conducive to the satisfactory progress of the subject if the matter were prematurely discussed. When the conclusion has been reached I shall be very happy to make it known to the hon. gentleman and the House, and I trust to his kindness and prudence that he will accede to the request I now make, that he will postpone his motion, reserving, of course, an unfettered discretion for its renewal at any future time he may think fit.—MR. EASTWICK was most anxious, as he believed other members were on both sides of the House, that the motion of which he had given notice for to-morrow should be discussed. He had given a previous notice on the subject, but at the intervention of the Government he had postponed it. He was quite aware that there might be a critical point at which, when negotiations were pending, public discussion might be disadvantageous; but if postponement of discussion were to become a system, it must be detrimental to the public interest, as tending to stifle all discussion on foreign policy. (Hear, hear.) But after the appeal made to him, he felt bound to give way on this occasion, trusting, however, that on an early day he should be enabled to proceed with his motion. (Hear, hear.)

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, April 9.—CENTRAL ASIA.—Mr. EASTWICK said that, in consequence of the appeal made to him by the First Lord of the Treasury last evening, he should postpone his motion on this subject till May 7, when he trusted that all objection to the discussion of the question would be removed.

INDIAN FINANCE.—Mr. MITCHELL asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether, the Indian Government having inserted in its Budget for 1869-70 an item for disbursements in India of £8,400,000 as "bills drawn by the Secretary of State for India," it was the intention of the Home Government to carry out the notice so given, all such drafts having been discontinued since December 16 last; and, if so, when.—Mr. GRANT DUFF said it was their intention to recommence drawing at an early date. The precise day was not yet fixed, but it would be duly announced.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

OUR INDIAN POSITION.

The Morning Star does not believe in the policy of buying the friendship of Shere Ali. That journal believes that by maintaining ourselves in a position of strength within the Hindoo Koosh and the Suleiman ranges, with a network of railways behind us, and the command of either sea, strong in arms, but yet stronger in the just Government that we have given India, we can afford to defy Russian aggression, if that bugbear of Palmerstonianism have any but a fictitious existence. The further Russia advances from her base of operations in Europe, across deserts and through a hostile country towards inhospitable Afghanistan, and the natural ramparts of our north-west frontier, the weaker does she become, and the more unequal to cope with our compact and well-disciplined strength. By all means let us prepare for the contingency, distant though it be, of a Russian invasion; but let us do so by organising our forces internally, not by scattering them into dangerous and doubtful regions, where they can make no effectual resistance, but must excite animosity. It is idle to say that we have not interfered in Afghanistan. A system of subsidies necessitates intervention sooner or later, and intervention means aggression and extravagance, perhaps disgrace and disaster.

SIR JOHN LAWRENCE'S NEW DIGNITY.

The Asiatic observes that Sir John Lawrence, who has held the charge of our Eastern Empire for five years, and has, whatever his political shortcomings, sustained that weighty office with all due dignity, is to be created Baron Lawrence of the Punjab, and of Grately, in the county of Hants. It remains to be seen whether the country will consider that this is a sufficient recognition of long and brilliant service. If a title has any real value as a reward, the Viceroy of India, the saviour of the Punjab, has most certainly a claim to higher rank in the peerage than a barony. Such a distinction is conferred upon the eminent lawyer as a complimentary recognition of superiority in his profession, and of stanchness in political views. We contend that the Governor of our Eastern dominions has a higher claim than the successful advocate, or even the eloquent debater. Both for active service and administrative success, Sir John Lawrence merited a recompense of national gratitude as high as any viceroy ever gained—certainly equal to that conferred on Viscounts Gough and Hardinge. Sir John is not a politician, nor a man of influential friends; but the Liberal party, which boasts its freedom from backstair solicitation, might have shown itself more generous on that account.

THE HAZARA CAMPAIGN.

The Broad Arrow thinks it impossible to look at the long list of honours and rewards conferred for the Abyssinian campaign without comparing it with those granted for Hazara. Both campaigns were eminently successful; both comparatively bloodless (the casualties on the Black Mountain far exceeded those at Magdala); the hardships and privations of both were as nearly as possibly equal; indeed, in this one particular the Hazara force can more than hold its own (if a three weeks' bivouac 10,000 feet above the level of the sea, without a change of raiment, counts for anything), and we certainly read of no march during the advance on Magdala so disastrous as that of the 6th Royals from Rawul Pindee to Abbotabad, or that of the 38th Foot from Sealkote to Rawul Pindee, the deaths from heat-apoplexy in which two regiments amounted to over fifteen. Yet for the one campaign have been granted two K.C.B.'s, twenty-eight C.B.'s, six A.D.C.-ships to the Queen, ten brevet colonelcies, eighteen brevet lieutenant-colonelcies, thirty brevet majorities, a medal, and six months' batta; and for the other—what? We believe we are right in saying nothing, except a K.S.I. or two! Not only this, but the officers of the force have actually been called upon to pay for their carriage (mule and camel), which the authorities compelled them to keep up from the first outbreak of hostilities in August to the breaking-up of the force in November. Can this be the act of the same Government which in its extreme generosity has ordered that regiments which were under orders for Abyssinia, but did not actually land, are to receive the medal and six months' batta? We believe not. We believe the Government is not aware that such an act of injustice has been committed, and it is for the purpose of giving publicity to the fact that we place this matter before the public. Putting medals, batta, and brevet promotions altogether on one side, surely it seems but right and just that officers should be protected from suffering any actual pecuniary loss by a campaign which was a tolerably hard one while it lasted, but unfortunately not possessing the advantage of being "popular," has been consigned to oblivion, with all those concerned in it.

RETIREMENT.—The following officer has retired from the service:—Deputy Insp. Gen. J. A. Guise, on a pension of £550 per annum, with the additional pension of £250, under the provision of paragraph 37 of G.G.O. No. 1,060, dated Dec. 23, 1864, with effect from March 31,

ENGLISH HOMES IN INDIA.

PART I.—THE THREE LOVES. | PART II.—THE WRONG TURNING.

PUBLISHERS' NOTICE.

The writer of these volumes—an accomplished member of a family whose name is conspicuous in Indian story—being now resident in India, they have not had the benefit of her final corrections. It is hoped, however, that this inevitable drawback will detract but little from the pleasure to be afforded by the perusal of the tales, which are, indeed, what they profess to be, stories of English Homes in India, represented as such homes are in different parts of the country and under various social and professional aspects. They endeavour fairly and without exaggeration to illustrate Anglo-Indian life as it is, in its many varying phases, and to bring upon the scene, in their everyday costume, many kinds of Anglo-Indian workmen, from the Resident at a Native Court, to the subaltern officer and the railway employé; and it is believed that all who have visited the countries described will recognise the truth of the portraiture.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

Rheumatic and nervous pains are often more provoking than more serious complaints. The chilly mornings and evenings will provoke these tortures in constitutions susceptible of these maladies. Nothing affords so much relief as Holloway's Ointment well rubbed upon the skin after repeated fomentations. Thousands of testimonials bear witness to the wonderful comfort obtained from this safe and simple treatment, which all sufferers can instantly and successfully adopt without any further advice than is afforded in the accompanying directions. Holloway's Ointment, assisted by the judicious use of his Pills, is especially serviceable in assuaging the sufferings from cramps, other muscular pains, and the great inconvenience of varicose veins.

SARSAPARILLA.

WILKINSON'S (late Bridge's) ESSENCE or FLUID EXTRACT OF RED JAMAICA SARSAPARILLA, prescribed by the Faculty for purifying the blood, debility, liver complaints, and freeing the system from the effects of mercury. Exclusively used in India and the Colonies as a prevention to tropical diseases.

"Superior preparation that may always be relied upon."—Sir Astley Cooper.

"We are in every respect satisfied with it."—Lancet.

"We recommend your Sarsaparilla as the best."—Medical Review.

Sold in quarter, half, and pint bottles.

CAUTION.—Many spurious, worthless, and injurious preparations are offered to the public. See that both bottle and label have the name and address.

No European in India or tropical countries should be without it.

QUINTESENCE OF JAMAICA GINGER AND CAMOMILE.

WILKINSON'S PREPARATION OF GINGER and CAMOMILE has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine. It is a most efficient stomachic tonic, and the best remedy for flatulency and disorders arising from impaired digestion.

It is not affected by climate.

No European in India or tropical countries should be without it.

Sold in one-eighth, quarter, and half-pint bottles.

A NODYNE CEMENT, for decayed and tender TEETH, allays most violent pain, becomes hard as enamel, answers when the Teeth are nearly broken to the gum. Artificial Teeth (an entirely new description), without springs, used only by Mr. ALFRED JONES, Surgeon-Dentist to their late R.H.H. Princess Augusta, Duchess of Gloucester, the late Louis Philippe, and ex-Royal Family of France, &c. At home from Eleven till Four.

61, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body."

It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guaranteed not to turn black, or make the Teeth look unsightly.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell.

Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. Webb's residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. Eschall, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1861, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 6d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.

The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, March 27; Agra and Calcutta, March 23; Madras, March 22.

On the 18th March Sir R. Temple brought up the Select Committee's Report on his Income-tax Bill. The amendments were few and inconsiderable. One of them extended the tax to insurance companies, who had been previously exempted. By another persons living and drawing their interest from Indian funds, &c., abroad are exempted, while those who draw the interest through agents in India are liable to pay the tax. The privilege of paying by instalments is extended to amounts of Rs. 24 and upwards—a concession to the poorer classes. Sir R. Temple defended the justice of taxing land as well as other property. Mr. Bullen expressed some anxiety to know whether the repayment of the money advanced by the Indian Government for the Abyssinian campaign would include the high rate of interest at which the money had been borrowed from the Banks of Bengal and Bombay. Sir R. Temple assured him that that point had been carefully considered, and Lord Mayo saw no reason to doubt that the conditions of the advance, as clearly laid down by the Secretary of State in the House of Commons, would be "strictly fulfilled." The Income-tax Bill was then passed.

ANOTHER Bill, passed the same day, empowers the Government to substitute a fluctuating for a fixed tariff on goods paying ad valorem duties. The new tariff has already come into effect. It charges only 1 per cent. on iron for railways and other purposes, an anna a gallon on malt liquors, Rs. 1-8 a gallon on sparkling wines and liqueurs, one rupee on other wines, and Rs. 3 on spirits. On piece goods the duty will be about 5 per cent., with 7½ per cent. as the highest rate on imported goods. On exports the duty will average 3 per cent.

THE last sitting of the Council was on March 19, when four other Bills were passed, including the Revised Stamp Act and a Bill for obtaining the Evidence of Prisoners. Mr. Strachey also introduced his Bill for Amending the Law on the Acquisition of Land for Public Works.

THE expedition against the Looshais seems to have ended in smoke. Of the two columns sent out to punish the raiders into Cachar one has already been turned back by the heavy rains, while the other, which did make its way to some Looshai villages, found the Chief dead, his clansmen all submission, and retraced their steps after a friendly interchange of fowls and fruit. From all we hear, the police alone could have settled the business, but perhaps it was thought that a military demonstration would ensure success to the movements of the police.

THE papers give many details concerning the Afghan Ameer's progress from Peshawar to Lahore and his doings at the latter place; but our readers have already learned all that is worth mentioning here, unless they care to know the names of all the officials present at the durbar, or to hear that Shere Ali is said to have ordered five hundred suits of English clothes for his party at Peshawar. What is more to the point is that Yakoob Khan, the Ameer's son, has taken steps to put down the rebellion in Turkistan, where the ex-Ameer's sons seem to have been making head against Shere Ali's lieutenant. A more competent officer however, Sirdar Ismail Khan, has been ordered to take the command against the rebels.

So good on the whole are the prospects of the rubbee crops in the North-West, that the old rates for the carriage of grain by rail were to be resumed from the 23rd March. In the Rohilkund, Meerut, and Agra divisions the average outturn will not be much below par. A full crop is expected in Kemaon. In the other divisions, the outturn will be less or greater according to the want or abundance of irrigational means. Relief works however must still continue to supply the worst sufferers with temporary aid both in the North-West and Rajpootana. Distress is still severe in Gwalior, especially about Sepree and Goona, where the roads are strewn with bodies of people who died of hunger on their way to the relief-houses.

WHEN Indian toll-collectors have used up their supply of the tickets given to travellers who happen to need them, they are wont, it seems, to fall back on the primitive practice of marking the persons of the said travellers with streaks of colour. Against this practice the Government of the North-West Provinces has lately issued a strong decree, declaring it to be "distasteful to at least the higher classes of natives," and threatening the punishment of any toll-collector who shall henceforth refuse to supply the needful ticket. The Commissioners of Divisions are requested to see that "a supply of proper tickets be kept by all the toll-collectors, and that marks on the person be in no case resorted to except with the free-will of the passenger." Would not an absolute prohibition of such marks have been the safer course? There would then, at any rate, be no room for misunderstandings or false statements on either side.

THE coffee-planters of Wynaad are complaining bitterly of Government neglect. One of the most hopeful industries in the Madras Presidency is being starved for want of decent roads. When the interests of the Government are directly concerned, a want of this sort is soon supplied, as in the case of a road lately made from the foot of the Annamallays up to the entrance of the Teak forests. But private cultivators may wait till doomsday for their share of official aid, especially if they belong to the same race as their rulers. The main grievances of the Wynaad planters were embodied in a memorial drawn up at a meeting of the Planters' Association of South Wynaad on the 10th February. The petitioners pray for a labour ordinance based on that of Ceylon; for a law between master and servant, employer and employed; for the rapid completion of the Ghat road and other main lines of communication; for a reduction of the coffee-duty to the rate now levied on tea; and for a reduction of the tax on crown lands. They also ask that an experienced executive engineer should be selected for the Wynaad district.

THE Friend of India thinks that Dr. Macleod is "justly severe, as all visitors are, on the unprepossessing and unarchitectural character of Bombay." If the present writer's experience may count for anything, both the reverend doctor and the journalist are unjustly severe in their estimate of one of the most picturesque cities in India. It is not "the surrounding scenery" alone that makes Bombay interesting to the traveller. The fort, with its narrow streets of quaint old many-storied houses, might have been transplanted from Edinburgh or some old Continental town, while the native city offers the visitor a feast of bright-coloured wooden balconies, and varied costumes not to be matched in any part of Upper India or Bengal. Bombay may lack the architectural grandeur of Benares, the Malta of India, but for striking effects of colour its bazaars could hardly be surpassed. In that respect Cairo alone may take the lead of it. For variety of national types and costumes even Calcutta falls behind the Western capital. In the matter of dirt Bombay ten years ago was nothing like so bad as most Indian cities, Calcutta included, and to say that "no Irish village of the worst kind has a look of greater poverty, confusion, and utter discomfort," is a flight of fancy with which we should hardly have credited Dr. Macleod.

A BENGALIE paper, the Som Prakash, evidently "understands its epoch" as well as the Emperor of the French. It boldly proposes to do away with the Governor-general altogether as a mere anachronism in these days of advance. Once indeed a Viceroy wielded all responsible power in India; but "now that this power has been wrested from the Governor-general, and his orders are subjected to the approval of the Secretary of State for India, there is no actual need for the continuance of the office." In the present state of communications with England, all matters of importance, thinks the journalist, "might be submitted for approval direct to the Secretary of State." As a preliminary step to abolishing the Viceroy, he would give Bengal a full Government. "The choice of war or peace should rest with the Commander-in-Chief, who should receive counsel from the Governor of the Presidency in which a disturbance might occur." In this way the State would save more than six lakhs of rupees yearly. The framer of this very radical project has evidently been taking lessons of the present Minister for the Board of Trade.

THE Indian papers are already complaining of the way in which the new Intelligence Department of the Government carries out its ostensible duty of providing early information on public matters for the Press. In many cases the promised boon seems to have proved a worthless mockery. The "information" is discovered to be very stale news. In March, for instance, the Daily News is presented with a report on the state of the crops for the fortnight ending 5th January. Plenty of rain having fallen in the meanwhile, such information must be extremely valuable, especially when it refers to districts not fifty miles off from Calcutta. Another set of papers for the "information of the press," received by the same journal on March 8, turned out to be merely written copies of papers printed in the Gazette for February 10. If these are fair samples of the intelligence supplied by the new department—and several other journals are endorsing the complaints of the Daily News—we may congratulate the Indian public on the handsome return secured to it by the increased outlay on Government clerks for its especial benefit.

FROM a Bombay telegram of April 9 we learn that the Times of India has published a detailed statement of the Abyssinian outlay, as defrayed by the Bombay Government. It is rather more favourable than Mr. Lowe's estimate. The total outlay was £6,820,000, which includes £3,250,000 for transport-service, £850,000 for coals, stores, and commissariat, and £200,000 for landing troops, stores, &c. The accounts were forwarded to the Home Government by the mail of April 10.

THE news we have elsewhere printed regarding Dr. Livingstone turns out to be entirely false. Authentic tidings from Zanzibar have been received in England up to the middle of March, and not a word about the doctor. Had the news in question been correct, we should long since have heard it direct from the Vice-Consul at Zanzibar.

ON Monday the Secretary of State for India brought in his India Bill, No. II., for altering the conditions of service in the India Council. Henceforth members are to be appointed for ten years instead of life, with power reserved to the Secretary of State to reappoint a specially able councillor for five years more. The salaries of the members will remain, according to the Bill, at the present rate of £1,200 a-year, which his Grace thinks quite large enough to "secure the services of the very best men." The present system of pensions he would abolish altogether, merely allowing any of the existing members to retire if he chose after ten years' service on a pension of £500 a-year. To this clause of the Bill both Lord Salisbury and Lord Lawrence, who delivered his maiden speech on this occasion, objected, as bearing hard on members disabled from ill-health, and as tending to keep the best men out of the Council. Lord Lawrence would give all members pensions after ten years' service, and a sum proportionally smaller for members "run down in less than ten years," an arrangement which would certainly enable the Secretary of State to get rid at any time of an incompetent councillor. This limit of ten years is an immense improvement on the present plan, which ensures a general stagnation of administrative energy at the head of affairs. But might not the term be shortened even more without harm to the service? The power of reappointment would still keep the best men in, while a yet larger number of retired Indians would get their turn of an office honourable in itself, and more suited to the habits of their past career, than loafing about a watering-place or vegetating in a club-room. It will of course be said that less than ten years would hardly give fair play to a councillor's ability, in a post where he would have so much to learn; but after all he must be a dull scholar who could not master his duties in half that time.

THE Duke of Argyll also gave a complete answer to Lord Salisbury's complaint that the power of the purse lay not with the Secretary of State, but with the India Council. It was complete at least according to his interpretation of the Act of 1858 by the light of Pitt's Act of 1788, and Lord Salisbury expressed himself glad to hear a statement which declared the Secretary of State "alone responsible for all the acts of the English Government in the government of India." But if the Duke's construction be the right one, the wording of the Act with regard to "grants and appropriations" needs revision.

LORD LAWRENCE's speech was mainly a survey of his Afghan policy, and a very clear and sufficient defence of that policy will it convey to all who look at the whole question with unprejudiced eyes. It is no longer possible to doubt that Lord Mayo is merely walking in his predecessor's footsteps.

PUBLIC WORKS IN INDIA.

ANGLO-INDIAN opinion on the subject of public works for India has made some considerable advance since the day—not so very distant—when one of their body declared before a committee of the Commons that “India itself was one great road.” A certain pressure from without has by this time forced many a stanch admirer of old use and wont to admit a possible connection between progress in well-being and an extended system of roads. Recent famines and threatenings of famine have instilled into the dullest minds some small belief in the virtue of works of irrigation. Indian railways are getting on, not too quickly; a fraction of the revenue, not too large, is yearly expended on the making of new roads; and the Indian Government is once more borrowing money for the construction or completion of long needed canals.

These signs of life are encouraging, so far as they go. But, in the words of a writer in the North British Review, “much, very much work yet remains to be done. Districts as large as half-a-dozen English counties put together, and possessing a soil more fertile than is to be found in Europe, are without roads for the conveyance of their crops to market. Others, equally rich and extensive, are liable to periodical visitations of famine, owing to the want of water, which might with care be led along channels, to irrigate their fields.”* In spite of the merciful reprieve from widespread starvation brought by the rains of the late cold season, many parts of Hindostan Proper are still sorely suffering from the previous drought; and some fears have not unreasonably been expressed, that relief-works begun in the near prospect of a dire calamity may in some places be too readily put on one side, now that the worst of the storm has blown over. So much indeed remains to do everywhere, with means not always readily attainable, that a thrifty Government naturally catches at any fair excuse for putting off till to-morrow what ought, if possible, to be done to-day. And the tendency to delay is strengthened by the very organisation of the Public Works Department. What with time wasted in endless correspondence between ever so many heads of offices, in references between India and England, not to speak of the difficult task devolved on the Home Government of choosing between rival and rejecting impracticable or ill-weighed schemes, the wonder is not that so little, but that anything at all has been done at the right moment.

A new day however of enlarged activity seems just now dawning over India. The present Secretary of State has avowed the will and must surely find the way to improve on the teaching of his predecessors. Lord Mayo's known dislike for official circumlocution has already borne good fruit. If his shrewdness extends to some other points of first importance he will insist on large reforms in the present system of public works, and will obtain leave from home to push them forward on a scale commensurate, not with India's present income, but with her actual wants. The writer of the article above referred to complains bitterly, but not without justice, of the hindrances which the present system throws in the way of every effort to satisfy the most pressing of those wants. A few miles of road are needed in a certain district. The officer in charge lays the matter before his departmental chief, who passes it on with his own criticisms to some yet higher official, who, in like manner, forwards it another stage on the way to the central Government. By the time it reaches the Governor-General a whole library of manuscript, critical, explanatory, and controversial, has grown around the original project. Precious months have been lost in this preliminary scrutiny. Even when the matter has been duly considered on all sides and finally sanctioned by the Viceroy, its execution may have to be deferred for want of funds. At the best the work will get itself done piecemeal at uncertain intervals. Not seldom a heavy rainfall will sweep away the unfinished labours of the previous season, labours which might have been properly completed had the order to begin them gone forth in good time, or the engineer been less hampered with clerklly drudgeries. Haunted by the dread of retrenchments for unavoidable mischances, overburdened with an absurd mixture of incompatible duties, disheartened by unforeseen delays, by untimely failure of means and appliances, the public works officer would be more than human if he did not frequently sink from his old ambitions into a listless acquiescence in the dominant routine.

Some remedies for the faults of the present system are not far to seek. In the first place, it is quite possible to dispense with many of the stages through which a projected public work has to pass before it touches the hard ground of an instituted fact. In the next place there are many works in every province, the funds for which and the direct control might easily be furnished by the Local Government, without reference to the Central Power. Great too would be the advantage of relieving the engineer officer from the harassing requirements of a vulgar clerk. At present half his time is taken up with small financial reckonings, which ought to be reserved for some specially paid subordinate. A public works officer should have quite enough work on his hands without being required to account from week to week for every rupee he spends or needs. He should also be allowed a wider discretion with regard to forestalling outlay on unfinished works. If a certain bridge, for instance, ought to be finished before the rains set in, on pain of their undoing the labours of a whole season at least, it is surely the worst economy to stand on red-tape restrictions and withhold the trifling over-payments that might make all the difference between success and failure in such a case. Due checks of course there must be on the spending powers of public-works officers, but the curb need not be applied at all times with the same uniform pressure. Fairplay for the department is impossible without due freedom of play. And, lastly, as we have often said before, the carrying out of public works on a scale suited to the emergency involves a much larger outlay on loans than the rulers of India have hitherto ventured to sanction.

FROM RANGOON TO KIANG-HUNG.

AMIDST the general development of Indian railways during the last decade British Burmah has for many reasons been fated to stand still. Out of the four thousand odd hundred miles already near completion, not one has yet been laid in the easternmost province of our Indian Empire, a province twice the size of England and Wales together. In those ten years the population of British Burmah has doubled itself, and its trade has swollen from almost nothing to the handsome figure of nearly ten millions sterling. With an imperial revenue of more than a million it pays all its government expenses, and puts by a considerable surplus at the end for imperial uses. That the well-being thus apparent is capable of indefinite increase there is every reason to believe. Within the last twelvemonth a new trade with Burmah Proper has sprung out of the treaty concluded with the Court of Ava in 1867. In the five years from 1864 to 1868 the inland trade of Pegu grew from little more than a million to two millions and a-half, the great bulk of which crossed the frontier at Thayetmyoo. In exchange for its betelnuts, rice, cottons, silks, and woollen goods, Pegu takes from its Burmese neighbour an evergrowing amount of raw cotton, gram, molasses, lacquer-work, silk and cotton goods, oils, and "pickled tea." The last-named article, unknown and inconceivable in British households, is so dear to Peguan palates that the imports of it were more than doubled in the last official year.

For the full development of this inland trade a safe and easy road towards Western China is specially needed. The removal of frontier duties in 1863 has borne excellent fruit; so have the treaty of 1867 and the establishment of a political agency at Mandalay. But it has long been felt that the commercial prosperity of British Burmah could be thoroughly ripened only by a revival of the long dormant intercourse with the countries eastward of the Burmese Empire. To that end it was that Captain Sladen last year explored with a perseverance not wholly fruitless the road from Mandalay, through Bhamo, to Momein and Talifoo, the capital of the Panthay insurgents against Chinese rule. The courage which enabled him to dodge the thousand pitfalls spread in his way by Burmese treachery proclaims itself in the report on that journey which one of his fellow-travellers, Captain Bowers, has lately published. It seems pretty clear that the safety of the exploring party was due to anything rather than Burmese goodwill. Not only was every possible hindrance thrown in the way of their advance beyond Mandalay, but a plot was apparently concerted against their lives between the Burman officials and the robber tribes in the neighbouring hills. Be that as it may, it is certain that but for Panthay friendliness none of the party would ever have reached Momein. The danger must have seemed great indeed, when two of the party, one of them a British officer serving as engineer to the expedition, were persuaded or permitted to return to Mandalay, while the rest were struggling forwards to the desired goal. That goal, which was really Yunnan, some fourteen marches south-east from Talifoo, none of them reached; but to have got even so far as Talifoo was under the circumstances no small achievement.

To say nothing of traitors in camp and robbers along the road, nearly the whole of the journey beyond Bhamo would over range after range of lofty hills. First came a desert plain, impassable in the rains, beyond which rose the Kakhyen mountains in a belt about seventy miles broad and four to seven thousand feet high. This barrier to intercourse with the Shans and Panthays surmounted, the travellers had to climb range after range of mountains, eight to ten thousand feet high, and never more than ten miles apart. The rivers they had to cross were broad torrents that thundered along between great walls of rock. Villages ruined or nearly empty, and hill sides and valleys showing chiefly traces of bygone cultivation, suggested no cheering prospect of commercial gains to come. Talifoo itself seems to be the centre of a considerable trade with all parts of China, while the country around Momein is said to contain mines of silver, iron, copper, and lead. Fields of rice and tobacco the travellers found everywhere along the road, and the salt mines at Kito yield the Government a handsome profit. But Momein's commercial glories are matters of tradition rather than existing fact, and the great tea-growing country lies far away to the South. Of the willingness of the Panthays to trade with India there seems to be evidence enough; but if Burman jealousy adds fresh barriers to the natural drawbacks of the Bhamo route, what chance is there of cementing an early union between friends thus awkwardly dis severed? And Captain Bowers for one has not the smallest doubt that the Burmese monarch has secretly set his face against any attempt to open a trade with China by way of Bhamo.

All these things considered, we hope that the Indian Government will think twice before sanctioning a railway from Rangoon to Prome, as part of a larger scheme for connecting British Burmah with China by the road through Bhamo and Talifoo. A railway to Prome may not in itself be open to much objection, and it would doubtless be easy to build along the Irrawaddy an embankment strong enough at once to keep in the waters of that river, and to bear the passage of railway trains. But so far as the opening of trade with China is concerned, a railroad towards Mandalay would tend in the wrong direction. An easier and shorter road to the same goal was long since pointed out by Captain Sprye in a paper printed by order of the House of Commons. His plan, to which Captain Williams, Inspector of Public Works in the Rangoon Division, lent all the support of his engineering knowledge, provides for a road direct from Rangoon by Shooaigheen to a point on the Salween River, about 250 miles north-east from Rangoon. From thence he would carry the road by Kiang-Tung to Kiang-Hung on the Maiking or Upper Cambodia, where it would touch the Chinese frontier. Of the whole length of 500 miles one half would lie within British territory, while the remainder would pass through a country of friendly Shans and Karens, whose desire and ability to trade with us is already known. The survey of this road, begun under Lord Cranborne, was left incomplete, owing to the countenance which the Government, under pressure of a demand from Calcutta for direct commercial intercourse with China by way of Dacca, Munipoor, and Bhamo, gave to the rival project whose feasibility Captain Sladen was sent forth to ascertain. But we hear of no engineering difficulties to compare with the Herculean task of cutting a broad road through the sea of robber-haunted mountains that divide Bhamo from Talifoo. For half the distance, as General Fytche himself allows, "no serious obstacles to the construction of a railway, as far as the natural features of the country are concerned, were met with;" and the other half, if somewhat more difficult, would be found mere child's play for our engineers in comparison with the mule-tracks over the Kakhyen Hills. The whole line moreover would be less than half the distance from Rangoon to Talifoo, would pass through a part of Burmah least subject to the jealous oversight of Burman officials, would tap the tea-districts of two countries at their natural outlet, and would enter China at its south-western corner, where the hills are fewer, and the commercial prospects not less inviting than those further north. To all this may be added the manifest advantage of making Rangoon the main outlet for Chinese trade with all parts of India. Nor should it be forgotten that a road by Kiang-Tung would take in a good deal of traffic with Siam and other countries to the south of Burmah. If the Indian Government would but look at this question from an imperial rather than a provincial standpoint, we strongly suspect that the first railway begun in British Burmah would not have Bhamo for its goal. Lord Mayo is said to resemble Lord Dalhousie in a way he has of looking into everything for himself. If he will devote some of his spare time at Simlah to a careful study of the rival schemes, we venture to think that Captain Sprye's will be found the more practicable of the two. In default of a railway, a good carriage-road might surely be made as far as our own frontier, at no great cost.

OUR CENTRAL ASIAN POLICY.

The Indu Prakash thinks it is not improbable that the British Government, taking advantage of the present needy state of his Highness Shere Ali Khan, aims at the establishment of something like a permanent and effective Residency at the Court of Cabul, or the stationing of a British garrison in some distant and outlying fort of the new Afghan Chief in order to keep itself intimately acquainted with what is going on in Central Asia. So it is not altogether chimerical to suppose that both parties look to the formation of an alliance at least defensive, if not offensive and defensive, in meeting at Umballa. We however hope that our Government will do no more than establish friendly relations with Shere Ali, for we are convinced that if the non-interference policy of the last Government with respect to Central Asian questions be given up, the step is sure to involve us sooner or later in an expensive and useless struggle, the issue of which no one can predict, and in which we have everything to lose and nothing to gain, whether we come out victorious or vanquished. Every additional extension of the British Indian Empire now, and especially towards the North-West, will simply be a source of so much weakness, and will entail a diminution of the prestige of the British arms; for hard experience has taught us what folly it is to try to maintain any authority over Afghanistan. History abounds in instances of premature dissolution of empires simply because of the "earth-hunger" of their rulers. So we hope that at the approaching interview our Government will do nothing in the way of binding itself to any particular line of policy with regard to the Central Asian question.

INDIA AND EVERYTHING IN IT A MISTAKE.

The Pioneer declares that India is all a mistake, so people tell us—one horrible, incomprehensible, but unmistakable mistake. Indian foreign policy, be it "masterly inactivity," or annexation, or Afghanistan diplomacy, what can it be called but a mistake? Our internal administration, our taxes, our finances, our land-settlement schemes,—are all a mistake. The same dreadful doom has always hung over all our rulers. What was Lord Dalhousie? A mistake. Lord Canning? A mistake. Sir John Lawrence? A mistake. Everything in and around and concerning this blighted country is undoubtedly a mistake. England's taking possession of India at all in the first place was a mistake. Each individual Englishman, when he comes out to India makes a grand mistake. Coming out to India is a gross mistake, and so is going home again on furlough. The P. and O. Company is all a mistake. Their new postal contract, their steamers, their cabins, their wines,—all, all wrong, as bad as can be. The Indian railways were all badly planned from the very first. They run in the wrong directions, through the wrong districts, and are all laid down on an entirely wrong principle. The bridges tumble down, or soon will. From the engine to the guard's van,—from the station-master to the stoker,—from Bombay to Calcutta,—all a mistake. And so are the dawks, and the whole dawk system. As for the canals and irrigation, and water bunds and Port Canning bonds, who will defend them? Our houses, our bungalows, our churches are all wrong. Our furniture is bad, very bad. Nothing can be worse than punkahs, except tatties. They, as well as thermantidotes, are all a mistake; they produce rheumatics, pains in the back, and pains in the leg. Our clothing, too, is on a wrong principle. Indeed, all our habits in India are a mistake. Eating so much and so often, or so seldom and so heavily as we do, is all wrong. The necessary consequences are pains in the stomach. Drinking is also very bad. Pains in the side and liver are the certain result. As for smoking—cavendish, golden-leaf, bird's-eye, cigars, cheroots, cigarettes, are all a mistake. Thank goodness, hookhas, those injudicious hookhas, along with certain other things equally injudicious, have gone out of fashion of late years. They were all a mistake, as everyone now confesses. Ladies are also a mistake. About a hundred years ago, when a cargo of English spinsters arrived at Calcutta, the then Governor-General would not allow them to land, but sent them all straight back to England. Perhaps that was a mistake too—perhaps it was not. Flirting in such a climate as this is at any rate a mistake. As to balls, they are the height of folly. The ancients had a belief that no man ever danced when sober. If that be true in Europe, how much more in the tropics? Rackets are also a mistake: much too violent exercise. Going to the hills in the hot weather is all a mistake: one feels the heat all the more upon return. Staying in the plains is also an egregious error. To be fried and stewed, and roasted and boiled, and baked and steamed by turns! It is not to be thought of. Even ice is a mistake: it always fails when most needed. Then what on earth are we to say in favour of India? If it be all one grand mistake, why do we stay here? The answer is clear, pertinent, obvious. There is one thing in India which is no mistake. The pay is good; it may be safely pronounced satisfactory. About this, and about this only, there can be no mistake.

THE UMBALLA DURBAR.

According to the Bombay Gazette, that Shere Ali desired and requested this personal interview with the British ruler, that he left his unsettled capital, and that he advanced so far from home to profit by it, is strong evidence that he felt the need of our support far more than we can feel the need of his politic goodwill. Nor should we assume that we know better than he does the danger incurred in leaving a turbulent people without their strong-handed chief, or that the very fact of his meeting with the head of the British power will not raise him in the opinion of his own people. No doubt, if he is ousted during his absence, we shall be unpleasantly bound to him, and not able to abstain honourably from direct intermeddling in Afghan politics; yet here again the risk he runs is greater than the risk we run, and the event feared, though far from possible, is not probable. The argument that we may be making too much of the Afghan Prince is hardly worthy of comment; because when once the boon of an interview was accorded to him, surely a handsome and generous reception, an ungrudging hospitality followed as matters of course. His journey from Peshawur to Umballa across the breadth of the Punjab, the show of soldiers and of weapons on the road and at the end of the journey, and the influence of that undefinable quality we call personal character to which he will be exposed throughout, must impress him with our strength, and convince him how desirable it is that he should stand well with the masters of Hindostan. If he could be brought to Bombay and shown our wealth of shipping, the sight would no doubt impress him as profoundly as the forests of masts at Calcutta impressed Dost Mahomed. We are therefore inclined to augur favourably of the Umballa durbar, and to think that it will cement the relations already created by the gifts of money. At all events Lord Mayo and his advisers have now one of those golden occasions which are the tests of statesmanship, and if they possess the high qualities of their predecessors in power, Shere Ali Khan will go back to Cabul a firm friend of the British, and the friendship will be based on the strongest reason which influences States—an enlightened and natural self-interest.

OUR RELATIONS WITH PERSIA.

The Delhi Gazette thinks that the visit to India of the Ameer of Afghanistan, and the numerous speculations and surmises to which the event has given currency, are likely to throw the visit to the Viceroy of the Consul-General of Persia in India into the shade. And yet it has a significance of its own equal to, at any rate second only to that of the event receiving the more prominent attention. The friendship and intimacy of the Ameer and his people may be the more difficult to secure, and the more difficult to keep when secured, but we doubt that they would in the end prove more serviceable to the British power in India, for the purpose in view of course, than an alliance with the Shah. We have no other reason to suppose that the Persian Consul, who generally resides in Bombay, has gone to Calcutta with any political motive, than that he goes there armed with a letter of introduction from H.M.'s Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. If his business were connected merely and solely with questions arising out of the commercial connection of his country with British India his negotiations would be with the Governor of Bombay in the first instance, and, if necessary, referred by that functionary, or by the Secretary of State for India at his suggestion, to the Governor-General. The mere commercial relations of the two Powers are neither of such magnitude nor so intricate as to need the direct interference of the Foreign-office. The concession sought by the Shah and supported by the Governor of Bombay, that Persian opium should be permitted to pass through India, has been granted. The fact of the British Government having so readily agreed to the admission of a rivalry interfering or calculated to interfere most materially with a rich monopoly, on which a large share of the revenue depends, is of itself sufficient to indicate an important object in view, and the intention of seeking something in return greater than empty compliments and barren good-will. It is not impossible that to play the old game of thirty years and more ago again with Russia is part of the programme of the "new policy" about being inaugurated at Umballa. The Shah will be delighted no doubt, for he knows how much he is at the mercy of the British power in the South, but then he cannot afford any terms short of that power renewing the old treaty of protecting him against all enemies. Russia is her greatest, and will England secure her against aggression from that quarter? We doubt it—at present at any rate.

MR. G. H. M. RICKETTS, C.S., C.B., left Allahabad on the evening of the 24th March, on six months' leave to England.

ENGLISH INTRIGUE IN COCHIN CHINA.—It is very droll to find the French using the same arguments, and almost the very words, regarding us and our imagined intrigues in Siam and Cambodia, which a number of excellent people among ourselves are constantly employing with reference to Russia in Persia and Afghanistan. We are "Russia" from the French point of view, Siam is our Persia, Cambodia our Afghanistan; and the French colony of Cochin China, with "the glorious delta of the Mekong where Camoens paraphrased the Psalms," is to us (according to M. de Carne in the last number of the Revue des Deux Mondes) what India is to the Russians. We think it very likely—just what India is to the Russians, and about as likely to be invaded. In the meanwhile, the French Government of Saigon has not been so supine as ours of Calcutta. Disdaining the policy of masterly inactivity, they have taken the advice of the Friend of India, and established M. de Lagree, capitaine de vaisseau, with an adequate French escort at a Khoorum (only not so cool), which by its position strategically holds the King and country of Cambodia at mercy—and all this is done to forestall us! And now our influence in Cambodia is supposed to be checkmated! Now, thanks to the vigour of the Governor of French Cochin China, Admiral de la Grandiere, and the tact and firmness of the French envoy in Cambodia, M. de Lagree, Saigon may at last be considered safe!—Pioneer.

Bengal.

CLOSER DETAILS OF THE LATE RAID ON THE BEZOOTIES.

The Bezootie village of Gara is about seven miles from Kohat, three of which are within our border and five in the enemy's country, the foot of the hills being the boundary. The pass over the range of hills is called the Obelan. It was on a hill on the right entrance or ascent of the same that poor Major Ruxton fell in the previous disastrous affair with the tribe. The force employed for the service was as follows:—The 1st P.I. and 4th P.I., with two mountain guns, with the 2nd P.I. and the 1st P.I.F.B. in reserve, which remained at the foot of the pass in our own territory. About 360 levies of sorts accompanied the column of attack, which was led by the 4th P.I. The troops marched from cantonments at about half-past one o'clock A.M., and reached the crest of the hill unopposed. The 4th P.I., supported by the 1st and mountain train guns, descended the pass and entered the village at early dawn. Not a shot was fired up to this moment, the inhabitants, during the short time allowed them to prepare for our reception, being engaged in sending off their women, flocks, &c., into the mountains in rear of the village. The enemy then fired two shots at the columns, which was the signal for both sides to begin work. They had greatly the advantage of position—our men of numbers. In about twenty minutes they were driven into the surrounding rocks and precipices, and the village plundered and burnt. The hills are so situated as to command the place, which is an aggregate of villages built on a small elevated plateau intersected by deep ravines. Fortunately for our casualties, the false attacks threatened from Peshawur, and on the Allezaie Frontier of the Meranzaie Valley, succeeded in withdrawing some four hundred men from our point of attack, with whom we should otherwise have had to cope. But the men who were left were good men and true, and fought pluckily; and as they were increasing rapidly in strength, and pressed sharp on the retiring column, our troops had reason to think themselves fortunate in reaching their own borders with a loss as follows:—1st P.I., killed, 1; wounded, 13; 4th P.I., killed, 1; wounded, 18; Artillery, wounded, 1; Levies, wounded, 3; total killed, 2; total wounded 35.

The ascertained loss of the Bezooties is twelve killed and about six wounded.

Under ordinary circumstances, with the tribes on the alert, we do not hesitate in asserting that it would take 8,000 good troops to carry the "Obelan" Pass; for the hills on both sides of the Pass would have to be strongly occupied, as they completely command the ascent—the crest of the Pass itself being dominated over by the neighbouring mountains—and the whole are of such a stiff and precipitous nature as to be difficult of ascent to an unarmed man, and present an infinite number of positions capable of being held by a few brave men against large odds. The Pass itself is not practicable for guns "except such as can be carried on mules," and is in many places only passable for troops man by man. Nothing could have been finer than the dash and will with which the troops went in at a known dangerous enemy "on his own dunghill," whom every one thought there was little chance of our catching asleep.

This raid has had the best possible effect; and it is known that in consequence the peace party are coming to the surface, and most probably the tribes will submit themselves to our terms, which now, as victors, we can afford to relax.—Pioneer.

STATION TALK.

LAHORE, March 14.—It is 10 A.M. when I write this letter to you. The Ameer has not yet arrived at Shahdora, but will reach it late in the afternoon. Twenty-two Khans, the companions of Ameer Sher Ali Khan in his journey from Cabul, reached Lahore on the evening of the 12th by dak gharries. More arrived yesterday by shigrams, and the remaining, with his Highness the Ameer himself, are expected to reach this day. In addition to the Sirdars accompanying the Ameer, and whose names I have already communicated to you, are mentioned the names of Sirdars Mahomed Ali Khan, Mahomed Zikrya Khan, and a grandson (daughter's son) of the Ameer Sahib. All these are to be lodged at the Summun Boorj or the Sheesh Mahal of the Lahore Fort, which, although used in the times of the mighty Moguls as their Harem Serai, was greatly improved and tastefully decorated by the late Maharajah Runjeet Singh, the founder of the Sikh dynasty. Next Wednesday, when illuminations and a show of fireworks are to take place at the Shalimar Gardens, the road leading from the Fort to those gardens (three kosses distant from the city) is to be illuminated. The Ameer displayed liberality worthy of his name during his short stay at Peshawur, and it is anticipated that he will do the same during his stay at Lahore and Umballa. His nuzranah to Major Pollock, C.S.I., Commissioner of Peshawur, consisted of sixteen Turkistan horses, sixteen Bagdad camels, and a like number of Herat mules of high breed, laden with a variety of articles from Khorassan, Turkistan, and Persia. From the 4th to the 10th of March the number of fruit trays or Kharnas presented by the Ameer to different officers, civil and military, at Peshawur reached nearly four hundred, all containing varieties of delicious Cabul fruit. With the exception of a hundred sowars and upwards of twenty Khans, the Ameer has left all his companions and followers at Peshawur under the care of Shah Murdan Khan. Sirdar Jellalooddeen Khan, the Ameer's son-in-law, had come from Rawul Pindie to Peshawur to see the Ameer, and is still stationed at the latter place. The Khans of the Ameer's camp say his Highness will take the unfortunate Sirdar to Cabul on his return from Umballa. On his departure from Peshawur the Ameer stated to his audience that he would confer khilats on all those people of Peshawur who had served him in any way during his stay there, immediately on his return from Umballa.

March 16.—The Ameer arrived at Lahore on the 14th instant in the afternoon. A Ziafutana of Rs. 21,000 was sent to him the day he arrived, and it has been decided that during his stay in the Punjab he should receive Rs. 10,000 as Ziafutana and Rs. 5,000 for table expenses every day. In addition to the names mentioned in my previous letters, I find one more Sirdar of the Ameer's Council accompanying his Highness. He is Meer Afzul Khan Candaharee, the Ameer's father-in-law, and also his Wazeer, and whose name is most familiar to those acquainted with Afghan politics. He is wonderfully fat, and it is a difficult task for him to move about. The ceremonies observed at the reception of the Ameer were in accordance with the programme that was previously published. It has been continually raining here since the Ameer's arrival. The clouds have, however, cleared up to-day. Yesterday evening the Ameer, accompanied by Major Pollock and Lieut. Col. Chamberlain and the Ameer's staff, inspected the museum and the railway workshops. This morning, at eight A.M., when I write this letter, the Ameer has gone to Government-house to pay the Lieutenant Governor a private visit, and is accompanied by Wazeer Meer Afzul Khan, Atta Mahomed Khan, and other military Sirdars. At noon he will go to the Katce of the Commissioner, Lahore Division, Major Cracroft, to pay him a private visit.

CACHAR, March 18.—The troops that left Silchar on the 17th February to invade the Loshai territory are still in these provinces. The party under General Nuthall, which went by the Hylakandy Valley, is at Pukwa Mookh, and the other, consisting of the 7th N.I., under Major Stephenson, is at Ram Lakkuneelab, a spot on the Sonaie river, not far from the Salt Springs. The Commissioner, Deputy-Commissioner and Magistrate, are with this party. Neither party has been able, to advance a foot since the 26th, on account of the heavy rain. A deputation of three men arrived from the Loshais a few days before the expedition started, bringing an elephant's tusk, Kookie gongs, and a few seers of beeswax with them as a token of their goodwill towards our Government. Their story was a very ingenious one, namely, that they were at war amongst themselves, and that one tribe had attacked the gardens to bring the others to grief. It was successful; and the cunning rogues after being regaled on all the good things to be had here, set out with the expedition to show the way to their villages. That anything but fair play was in the wind none of our long-headed civilians ever doubted, as the men were allowed to retain their knives; but that they had a purpose in view is now beyond doubt, for after a day or two one of them professed to be taken seriously ill and could proceed no further. Another cut his way past the sepoys who guarded him and bolted into the jungle, escaping scot free to his countrymen with all the news. What has become of the third man rumour sayeth not, but he is probably the one who was recognised as a runaway coolie from the Monierkhall Garden. A story is going about Cachar that the authorities telegraphed to Calcutta for glass beads and looking-glasses, but it is surely too rich to be true. That they should be taken in by the savages is possible, but to such an extent is simply laughable. The news we hear of the Sylhet party is far more encouraging. They have been pushing on with great perseverance and alacrity, for when we last heard of them Captain Logan and Mr. Kemble were on top of the Jampie range and in sight of Chuppeel's villages. The military were averse to the affair from the first, and had it not been for Mr. Edgar telegraphing over the country for all the infantry available, nothing more would have been heard of the Loshais than that they had committed a dacoity. It will be a benefit to the province in one respect, for four lacs of rupees are not to be seen here every day, but the party or parties are to be pitied who have to account for the outlay.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

LUCKNOW, March 17.—The annual examination of candidates for pleaderships commenced on Monday last, when forty-seven presented themselves for the lower grade and eight for the higher. The examination is still going on, under the presidentship of the Civil Judge, with the Judge of the Small Cause Court and the Principal of Canning College as members of the examining committee. On Saturday last the Soldiers' Industrial Exhibition was opened at Mahomed Bagh, in due form, by Major-General Brooke Taylor. A goodly company of visitors being assembled, the General made a short speech congratulating the Central Committee on the results of their labours, and thanking the regiments and batteries that had contributed. The band then played the National Anthem, and the Exhibition was declared duly opened. At first sight the room presents rather a scant appearance compared with the display made last year. This is chiefly owing to a lack of large and bulky articles.

Last year one or two dog-carts, a mail phaeton, and a number of velocipedes occupied one side of the room and were well worth looking at and admiring, but nothing so pretentious is to be found in this year's Exhibition. Contributions have been received from eight batteries, from three cavalry, and eight infantry regiments. The catalogue contains a list of nearly four hundred articles, of which the first Battalion of the 11th Regiment at Fyzabad contributed no less than two hundred and thirty. The 102nd and the Rifle Brigade stand next best as regards the number of contributions. The furniture exhibited by privates MacDonald, Horner, Marsten, and others of the 11th, was first-class, and attracted a good deal of attention. All these articles were exceedingly well polished, the credit of which is due to private McCoy, of the same regiment. The 11th also came out strong in tailoring, shoe-making, iron work, printing, and calligraphy, of which there were some most curious productions, as well as in artificial flowers, woolwork, and stuffed animals. The last-mentioned filled a room by themselves, and were exhibited by private Hollins, who, in a most intelligent manner, explained questions put to him about his handiwork. The 55th were great in patchwork, the 102nd in pictures and photographs, the Lancers and 11th Hussars also in pictures and paintings, most of the batteries of artillery in horse-shoes, whips, and brushes; but the C battery, 8th Brigade, Royal Artillery, appeared ambitious of carrying all before it, in slippers, babies' requisites, and ladies' bonnets. The Exhibition is open from seven to nine in the morning, and from four to sunset. It remains open the whole of this week, and so far has been well patronised by the men of the garrison.

DINAPORE, March 19.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief arrived here on Tuesday afternoon by the ordinary express train, and on the following morning reviewed the troops in the station. Sir William, who took his departure by the up express on Wednesday, was accompanied to and from the railway station by Brigadier-General Bouchier, C.B., whose guest he was during his stay at Dinapore. The Chief was accompanied by Colonel Lumsden, Quartermaster-General, Captain Elles, Assistant Adjutant-General, and his aides-de-camp, Captain the Hon. W. Harbord, and Lieut. Byng; Captain Heedyut Allee, native Aide-de-Camp, being also in attendance on his Excellency. The Viceroy's body guard, or that portion of it which was in Calcutta during the season, passed through here on the 17th, en route to Umballah, to "assist" in the coming ceremonies. The general commanding the Allahabad Division, accompanied by Major Iremonger, Assistant Adjutant-General, arrived yesterday at Dinapore on his half-yearly inspection. It is expected that the gallant General's stay at our station will extend over five or six days. Captain Etison, of H.M.'s 3rd Buffs, lately appointed to the Brigade Staff, took up his duties as Brigade-Major of Dinapore on Monday last. Weather fine and cloudy to-day, and tempered by a cooling breeze.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

HERAT.—Cholera is said to be raging terribly at Herat.

LADY MAYO'S DEPARTURE FOR THE HILLS.—The Countess of Mayo left Calcutta for Allahabad on the evening of the 23rd March.

BENARES.—The Bishop of Victoria was expected to preside on the occasion of the distribution of prizes at Jay Narayan's College, Benares, on March 26.

DEATH AT UMBALLA.—We learn from the Pioneer that Mr. A. F. Wallace, of Umballa, died suddenly on Saturday last, having ruptured a blood-vessel.

MAJOR W. W. ARBUTHNOT.—We hear that Major W. W. Arbuthnot, of the 18th Hussars, who was lately mauled by a panther at Secunderabad, is going home, on sick leave.

IMPORTANT MEASURES.—The 1st of April witnessed the introduction of three measures of importance—the Divorce Act, the Income-tax, and the increased weight allowed by the Post-office regulations.

STAFF RETIRING BONUS.—The Pioneer hears, on what it fears will prove valid authority, that the Home Government decline to entertain any retiring scheme whatsoever, whether by bonus or otherwise. The Englishman makes a similar assertion.

THE MEDICAL SERVICE.—It is said that the Secretary of State has been requested to take early steps towards increasing the establishment of Medical Officers required for civil and military duties in the Bengal Presidency.

MEDICAL FURLONGHS.—It has been decided that for the present no more furlough on private affairs can be given to officers of the Bengal Medical Department, the percentage to whom leave of absence can be given without impairing the efficiency of the service being now complete.

GOVERNMENT ECONOMY.—We hear of a departmental arrangement having been made, by which Government will pay in cash for all canal water used by its troops. Water thus supplied necessarily causes a certain reduction of the quantity available for the public, and the object of payment is to avoid waste, and to limit the supply to Government departments to what is strictly essential to their wants.

A RUMOUR.—It is considered not unlikely that Major-General Lumsden's presence at the Umballa Darbar precedes the constitution of a separate political department for the frontier.

RIOTS AT FERROZPORE.—The Kooka disturbances at Ferrozore were quelled, not, as the Mofussile asserts, by the military or the police, but entirely owing to the intervention of a soli who possesses great influence in that district, and who, venturing among the rioters, by himself, induced them to lay down their hatchets and to surrender themselves to the police.—Indian Public Opinion, March 19.

FULTAH.—The necessary land has been taken up for a battery at Fultah, near Diamond Harbour; the ground selected is about 196 beegahs. The fortification is comprised in the plan of military works for all India, for which eleven millions sterling was sanctioned. The necessary land, about thirty-five beegahs, has also been taken up for a musketry range for native infantry at Balgurrish. It runs parallel to the Calcutta Volunteer Rifle range, about 300 feet apart.

SMUGGLING OF FIREARMS.—Our recently extended acquaintance with the Loshais has brought to light the existence of a vigorous contraband trade in firearms carried on with these non-Armys across the border. The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has therefore prohibited such traffic in Assam generally, and in all districts bordering on the north-east frontier, except under licence granted by one of the Commissioners.

CROPS IN MALWA.—Malwa, writes the Friend, is teeming with rich crops bearing opium and with yellow cornfields. Generally the produce will be above the average, but in spots on the westerly borders there may be a loss of four annas in the rupee. The sustenance of the cattle has been difficult. There is hope that the worst is over in their case. Those which have been kept alive to this time may now remain so, though their appearance belies the idea of life being in them.

LEGISLATION.—The Viceregal Legislative Council met on the 19th March, for the last time this season. Four Bills were passed, Mr. Maine's amending the procedure of the High Court in the North-West Provinces, Mr. Shaw Stewart's amending the law relating to District and Subordinate Civil Courts in Bombay, and two in Mr. Cockerell's hands, the revised Stamp Bill, and that for obtaining the evidence of prisoners. Mr. Strachey also introduced the Bill to amend the law for the acquisition of land needed for works of public utility, a measure which he fully expounded at a sitting of the Council many weeks ago. The new Stamp Act will not come into operation before October.

LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA.—The creation of a peerage often makes a very great difference to a large number of persons. Thus the calling of Sir Robert Napier to the House of Lords has—o mio—the Madras Mail—acquainted the world with the existence of his son-in-law, Mr. H. Dundas of Calcutta, and Mr. Melbourn of the Bengal Civil Service, whose wives are now honourables; and it has added one honourable Miss and six honourable Mistresses to the already numerous list of Napiers. His heir is his eldest son by his first marriage with the daughter of Dr. Pearce, late Principal Inspector-General, Medical Department, Madras.

CASHMERE.—The Maharajah of Cashmere at length receives credit in the Punjab press for a genuine desire to merit the favour of the Government of India, by carrying out all the reforms that have been urged upon him. The Punjab Government are said to be desirous of the credit of this, "in spite of the censure which ignorance of Eastern matters had caused the late Secretary of State to pass on the manner in which a courteous, though firm, khurecta was sent to our feudatory." We take leave to doubt whether his Highness has been driven to reform by the ill-concealed threats of the Punjab Government, or led thereto by Sir John Lawrence's last assuring and encouraging despatch.

CALCUTTA POLICE.—We observe that Mr. J. H. Reilly, of the Detective Department, has been appointed Extra Deputy Commissioner of the Calcutta Police, in addition to his present duties, and made a magistrate and justice of the peace for the city. Calcutta, as a centre of road and railway communication, and as affording great facilities for escape and evasion, is always an anxiety to a North-West detective, and extending his power and privileges such as a detective officer will not only reduce his chances of failure, but infuse a spirit of co-operation into the city police that may lead them to seek, with greater energy than they have yet done, for men hunted down from the mofussil. Do the Wahabee ramifications extend as far as the metropolis?

NEWS FROM THE CACHAR FORCE.—The following telegram has been received by the Secretary to the Government of Bengal:—From Cachar, from Commissioner of Dacca, to Calcutta to Lieutenant-Governor, Bengal.—March 17, 1869. We reached Bonga Ghat, on the Sonae river, on Friday, 12th. The Losh messenger were sent to the village. The headmen came to us with fowls, &c. They stated that Vompilal died a week before our arrival; that they were guiltless of late outrages, and that Impanoo, Vompilal's mother, would agree to any measures proposed. No punitive proceedings could go on. The force will now return. I shall go back to Sylhet and Dacca at once. The setting in of continued rain has necessitated the return of Brigadier-General Nuthall's column to Cachar, its further progress having been found impracticable.

CAPTAIN SLADEN.—We (Rangoon Times) are happy to be able to correct the error which both our contemporary, the Rangoon Gazette, and ourselves have lately fallen into in saying that Captain Sladen was about to go home on sick leave. Such is not the case. True, he has been very sick, and suffered much from the effects of his expedition to Yunan; but he has work to do, work which both he and the Chief Commissioner are anxious to see accomplished before he vacates his post even for a time. It is quite probable, however, that he may accompany General Fytche to England in the early part of next year, by which time, doubtless, many of the roughest points of our diplomatic relations with Upper Burmah will be rounded off, and comparatively easy times established for those who may be appointed to officiate in their stead.

REWAH.—The feudatory State of Rewah is still the scene of intrigue of the lowest character. The chief has never been on other than good terms with Rajah Sir Dinkur Rao, and speaks gratefully of the services which that upright administrator has rendered. But so long as Rewah is open to what may well be characterised as loafing raids, the Maharajah will oscillate, for with good intentions he is weak and uncertain. His only chance is in the presence of an agent, a British officer, at his Court, and this he dreads unless he can name his man, for past experience has filled him with distrust and bitterness against Englishmen. Were a political agent there—merely his presence would suffice—then Rajah Dinkur Rao would work out beneficial changes in such a way as to insure prosperity.—Friend of India.

HYDERABAD.—A gentleman, writing to a contemporary from Hyderabad, asserts that Sir Salar Jung, on the death of the Nizam, ordered the city gates to be closed to prevent foolish and evil people from making a disturbance. The city was not closed to Mr. Saunders. "Our informant further says that three native medical men who attended his late Highness are in custody by order of the Prime Minister; and that though his Highness repeatedly ordered Sir Salar Jung to be sent for, it was not until he thrice insisted on it that the Minister knew of the important event that was about to happen. When he received the news he at once hastened to the bedside of his dying master, but was met on the road by the news of his decease. The only inference to be drawn from these facts is that the Nizam was neglected in his last hours, and might have got over the illness of which he complained. It is a pity that no English physician was in attendance."

THUGGEE.—Poisoning for plunder seems to be on the increase in this province. There have been several cases in the Sialkot, Amritsar, and Jalandhar Districts, but it is hoped that the case which we will presently narrate may lead to the detection of a gang of poisoners. We hear that there is now a prisoner committed to the sessions at Lahore for poisoning three travellers, whom he met near Taran Tarun, in the Amritsar district. He accompanied them on the pretext of being engaged on the same pilgrimage to the Pind Dadan Khan shrine. The thug administered datura to them in some sweetmeat which he had purchased, and after robbing them of some of their valuable left them, as he thought, dying, under a tree, near the Lahore city gates. A constable discovered them, and, after calling in medical aid, the three men recovered, and were able to describe the poisoner, who has been traced and arrested at Atari, and has confessed his crime.—Indian Public Opinion.

CHILD MARRIAGES IN INDIA.—A coroner's inquest was recently held on a case of murder followed by suicide, in Puttoreahgattastreet, Calcutta. The facts reveal a very common phase of Bengalee society. Heeralall Bysack, a young man of about twenty years of age, who had been educated in Dr. Duff's College, and who, with his wife, a girl of thirteen years of age, was supported by an aunt with whom they lived, resided in a house in the proximity of some prostitutes, and a wall had been built to shut these out from view. One evening Heeralall was enraged to find his wife looking over the wall. Next night he cut her throat and afterwards his own. His aunt described him "as a bad tempered young man who took offences at trifles." The jury returned a verdict of "murder against Heeralall Bysack who subsequently committed suicide, and is a felo de se." The progress of female and the higher male education has, says the Friend of India, no greater foe than baby marriages, while prostitution and murder are fed by forbidding widow marriage.

ARTILLERY GEAR.—Permission has been given by the Government of India to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief to convene a committee in Bengal for the purpose of reporting on the articles of line gear actually required in troops and batteries, and their period of duration. Similar committees are to be assembled in this presidency and in Madras. The question to be settled, the Pioneer states, is the nature and description of the articles of stable gear to be provided out of the petty contract allowance, and the sufficiency or otherwise of that allowance for the purpose. It has been decided also to place the gun and carriage contract allowance in Madras and Bombay on the same footing as in Bengal, by the issue to officers commanding batteries of "half wroughts" from the magazines, at Bengal rates. The vexed question of the proprietorship of stable gear has been settled in favour of the Madras officer, who is to be placed on the same footing as the officers of the other two presidencies, and must receive a first grant-in-aid by the Government of Rs. 6 a horse.

SEPREE.—There is still severe famine here and there in Central India, especially about Sepree. Hundreds are said to flock to the station in every stage of starvation. There are some 1,500 paupers, many of whom are past work. Day by day bodies are found of those who have fainted and died before they could reach the relief-house which the few English have started. All have joined to support the fund for food—every European, the sowars of the 1st Cavalry, and the traders of the bazaar. The Maharajah Sindia subscribes to it, and has given 2,000 rupees to build a travellers' serai, and so give present employment for those who can labour. At Goona similar scenes are going on. The political agent, Captain Bradford, has organised a fund to feed the sufferers who gather there, and to this also the officers and men of the Central India Horse have subscribed. The Government of India, without reference to the territory of the starving wanderers, has given 2,000 rupees as a grant-in-aid at Sepree, and will no doubt be equally liberal at Goona.—Times of India.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—We regret to have to record a sad and fatal accident, which occurred on Wednesday to one of the European staff at the Calcutta Mint. It would appear that Mr. Thomson, an engineer engaged in the copper mint, was, about half-past eleven, superintending the putting on of a new roof over the melting-room, when a rope gave way and brought a portion of the tackle into violent contact with Mr. Thompson, throwing him off the roof to the ground from a height of some forty feet. The poor fellow's legs were both broken, one near the ankle and the other above, and he furthermore sustained serious bruises and internal injuries. He was taken immediately to the Fever Hospital, where he received surgical assistance; but having lingered for several hours, succumbed at last to the great shock to the system, about four o'clock in the afternoon. Deceased was much respected at the Mint, where he has been employed for about four years, and, we regret to say, leaves a widow and three children.—Englishman, March 19.

FOOD PROSPECTS IN THE NORTH-WEST.—The reports submitted by the Commissioners of the various divisions of the North-Western Provinces show that at the end of February the prospects of the coming harvest had greatly improved. In consequence of this, the Lieutenant-Governor directed that the old rates for conveyance of grain by rail shall be resumed on and after the 23rd March. The Commissioner of the Meerut division estimates that the rubbee will not be much under three-fourths of a full crop, excepting in Saharunpore, where it will not exceed nine or ten annas. The agricultural population have worked hard, and the irrigated crops around Meerut are reported to be magnificent. In the Agra division, the crops, on the whole, will not be much below the average. Wheat and barley are in excellent condition around Muttra; in Etawah, all rubbee crops irrigated from the canal are also good; wheat, barley, and gram are in first-rate condition. Nowhere are the crops poor except where they had to depend solely on the rainfall. In Furruckabad, Etah, Mynpoory, and Agra, wheat and barley are up to the average, and only poor where no means of irrigation existed. In the Allahabad division the out-turn will not be quite so good. Much has been done around Allahabad and Jounpore by well irrigation, and around Cawnpore, where there is canal irrigation, the crops are exceedingly fine. In other collectorates the crops are very light, and here and there distress exists. In the Jhansie division the out-turn at best cannot be half an average crop. The Benares division shows generally poor crops, though better than was expected. In Kumaon a full crop is expected; in Rohilund it is estimated at three-fourths of that of ordinary years. Notwithstanding the improved prospects, relief works must be continued until the khurree harvest is ripe.

MAJOR-GENERAL TAPP.—The Deccan Herald says that Major-general Tapp, C.B., and A.D.C. to the Queen, is about to proceed on furlough to Europe for six months.

LADY NAPIER.—It was understood in Madras that Lady Napier, accompanied by her eldest son, the Master of Napier, would leave Madras on a visit to England by the Messageries Imperiales steamer on the 9th April. The Hon. J. C. Napier, of H.M.'s 92nd foot, at Jullundur, has obtained six months' leave to Madras.

MR. BLACK, the engineer sent out by the Secretary of State for India for the repairs of the Madras Pier, and who arrived in Madras in the middle of August last, has, owing to ill-health, been obliged to return to England by the P. and O. steamer expected at Madras on the 20th March.

DIAMOND MINES IN THE CUDDAPAH DISTRICT.—An enterprising East Indian gentleman of Madras has obtained the sanction of the Board of Revenue for sixty odd acres of land called the Diamond Mines, in the village of Kunupurthy, in the Cuddapah taluq, on a lease for five years. An annual assessment of one hundred rupees is to be paid to Government. This application was first made to the Collector of Cuddapah, who submitted it for the consideration of Government.—Madras Mail.

MADRAS UNIVERSITY.—The Senate of the Madras University have resolved to introduce a most desirable change into their examinations. Hitherto these have been conducted entirely by papers, a mode that is peculiarly adapted for favouring the system of "cram" that has now usurped the place of real education. For the future there are to be visa voce examinations, in addition to the test papers, and the examiners will thus have some opportunity of testing the real knowledge of the candidates.

THE UNIVERSITY SENATE-HOUSE.—The foundation of the University Senate-house was laid by Lady Napier in May last year, and on Monday, the 8th inst., Mr. Fitzgerald, to whom the building of the edifice has, we believe, been entrusted, made a beginning of the excavations. On Wednesday morning last Lord and Lady Napier visited the place, and her ladyship planted a few date trees around the building. About five hundred of these will be planted within fifteen feet of the boundary walls of the Chepauk ground, and will present a picturesque appearance when grown up.—Madras Standard, March 19.

CORPS OF ENGINEERS.—We (Madras Athenæum) understand that the Secretary of State has authorised the Seconding in the Corps of Engineers of all such engineer officers who are on the permanent civil staff of the army or other civil employ. Any loss of military pay that may be sustained by those officers who draw the allowance in addition to their staff pay will have to be made up by the department in which they are employed. This order will, we believe, affect the Consulting and Deputy Consulting Engineers of Railways and the Irrigation Company, the Accountant General of P.W. accounts, and others similarly employed.

MAJOR HOBBS.—We are sorry to learn from a Madras contemporary that the health of Major Hobbs, H.M.'s 45th Foot, has been such as to compel him to go home on medical certificate by the P. and O. steamer Surat, which was to leave last Saturday. The command of H.M.'s 45th was to be assumed by Lieut.-colonel Parish, C.B., who has arrived at Bombay by the Jumna from Suez, to rejoin the corps, which, says our contemporary, he would find in as high a state of discipline and order as he could desire. Pending the arrival of Colonel Parish, the command of the regiment devolved upon Major Griffin.—Bombay Gazette, March 27.

MILITARY DRESS.—It appears that the Madras Government has issued an order directing that all instances of alleged irregularities in regard to dress on the part of military officers serving under the immediate orders of Government be submitted to Government for disposal, through the department of the Secretariat under which the officers concerned may be serving. The Madras Athenæum believes "that this order owes its origin to the circumstance of an officer of high rank and some influence, and holding a civil staff appointment at the Presidency, having been recently taken to task by the Commander-in-Chief, through the Adjutant General, for appearing at Government House in other than the prescribed dress."

PERVERTS TO MAHOMEDANISM.—In the heart of Black Town there was enacted last Monday evening, an extraordinary scene by certain of the Mahomedan population of Madras. From the mosque on the second line beach there proceeded by torch light a numerous cavalcade of the disciples of the Arabian prophet, accompanied by music which was not of the most melodious description. Dancing girls in fantastic attitudes formed a portion of the motley spectacle. At the van of the procession there were about a dozen respectable looking conveyances, and in the foremost of these sat in Moslem garb the five European perverts to Mahomedanism of whom the public have already heard. The whole tamasha of Monday evening was apparently got up to celebrate this unwonted accession to Mahomedanism from the Christian fold.—Madras Standard, March 17.

MADRAS BREAKWATER.—The committee appointed to consider the practicability of constructing a harbour for Madras have reported in favour of Colonel Orr's plan for a straight breakwater at the cost of a little over a million sterling. The Government, while generally approving of the committee's report, expresses no opinion on the practicability or otherwise of the proposed breakwater, but remits the whole matter to the Supreme Government, with a request that the Secretary of State be moved to send out an engineer, specially acquainted with such works, to report upon the proposed breakwater. As usual, the Government are seeking to keep the papers relating to this interesting subject secret; but, as usual, they have been made public. The course pursued by the Madras Government offers a direct premium to dishonourable journalism. It tries to keep everything secret, while, in fact, there is hardly a paper in its archives that cannot be bought with an adequate number of rupees. The result is that, while some journals refuse to stoop to such a practice, others carry on a regular trade in buying Government papers, and retailing them to their readers.—Madras Times.

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY EXTENSION.—The Madras Mail gives the following items of news regarding the Great Indian Peninsula Railway extension beyond Sholapore:—"We are informed that Messrs. Adamson and Clowser, the contractors for the Great Indian Peninsula line between Sholapore and Kulburgah, have, in consequence of disagreements with the company about prices for work, given up their contract. The company have accordingly decided to commence working departmentally at the beginning of next month. We trust that this portion of the Great Indian Peninsula line will now be pushed on vigorously. We are glad to hear that the company intend to lay the permanent way at once over the whole line from Sholapore to Kulburgah, and that every effort is to be made to keep communication open between these places while the condemned bridges are being rebuilt. Colonel Pears, our Postmaster-general, should now apply to the company to carry the Madras and Bombay mails so far as the rails are laid. He will probably find it easier to deal with the company than with the contractors. Great activity is being displayed at Kulburgah. A large post-office and a railway station are to be built there, and Sir Salar Jung has sanctioned funds for pulling down all the empty houses, cleaning the streets, making roads, and planting trees. These improvements are being superintended by Captain Dobbs, Judicial Superintendent of Railways in the Nizam's territory."

DEPARTURE OF TROOPS FOR ENGLAND.—The s.s. San Mandel has sailed with invalids for England, via the Cape of Good Hope.

THE G. I. P. RAILWAY.—Henry Conder, the new general traffic manager of the G. I. P. Railway, has assumed charge of his office.

COTTON.—The cotton shipped from Bombay during the month of February last amounted to 36,835,756 lbs., valued at Rs. 1,21,08,479. Of this considerably more than one-sixth went overland.

BHOPAL.—It is rumoured in Indore that Colonel Thompson, 1st Assistant Agent, is to officiate as Resident at Bhopal during Colonel Osborne's absence on leave to England.

CONFIRMATION.—The Bishop of Bombay held a general confirmation in the Cathedral on the 24th March, when fifty-two candidates were presented for the rite.

STATUE OF THE QUEEN.—A remarkably good statue of Queen Victoria, the gift of H.H. the Gaekwar, and executed in marble by Noble, is on its way out, and will add another ornament to the rapidly improving esplanade at Bombay. The cost of the statue is £15,000.

JEYPORE.—Dr. Valentine is to superintend a printing press at Jeypore, and the issue of a weekly newspaper. It will be an easy matter for a long time to tell the Indian public generally what they never knew before regarding Rajpootana.

THE COTTON COMMISSION.—It is expected that either Major Ashburner or Captain Ricketts will act for Mr. Rivett-Carnac as Cotton Commissioner, should that officer be compelled to take furlough to Europe.

THE "JUMNA" TROOP-SHIP.—H. M.'s Indian troop-ship Jumna went out of harbour on the 24th March for a trial of her machinery, having on board a committee of engineers, consisting of Mr. Mackinlay, of the Government Dockyard, and other gentlemen.

MHOW.—The Dilli Gazette hears from Mhow, under date the 16th March, that a camp has been pitched on the parade-ground beyond the fort, which some 300 of the Bays are to occupy, chiefly the married men and their families, as it is in the married quarters that the cases of cholera have occurred, and which have ended fatally. Up to the above date seven deaths had taken place.

MISS CARPENTER.—We regret to hear that Miss Carpenter is compelled by continued ill-health to return to Europe, which she does by the mail of the 10th April. Her interest, however, in the special work she was desirous of inaugurating seems unabated, as we hear that she purposes returning to India in November next.—Times of India.

THE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.—The Times of India learns that the tedious duty of discharging the followers engaged by Government for the Abyssinian expedition has been brought to a satisfactory close by Major F. S. Hewett, of the Bombay Staff Corps, whose services will now revert to the Military Department. The long period over which this duty has extended, we are given to understand, is owing to the intricacy of the accounts and the absence of specific information regarding many of the men, a delay which we hope will not be prejudicial to the interests of Government in the event of their requiring the services of large bodies of men on any future similar occasion.

ARRIVAL OF TROOPS FROM ENGLAND.—H.M.'s Indian troopship Jumna arrived in Bombay harbour from Suez and Aden on March 20. She brought thirty-two officers, eleven ladies, eight children, 814 non-commissioned officers and privates, 110 women, and 108 children of the 1-21st Fusiliers; four officers, eighty-nine men, two women and five children of the 108th Foot; four officers, two soldiers' wives and two children belonging to the Royal Artillery; two officers of the Royal Engineers, one man of the Madras Ordnance Department, and wife and child, one man of the Bombay Ordnance Department, one woman and one child, belonging to the 49th Foot, one man belonging to the 79th Highlanders, and sixteen officers of various corps, also one lady. The 21st Fusiliers will be transhipped to-day with their baggage for conveyance to Kurrachee, on board the S. S. Dalhousie, Dacca, and the Dilbarce. The Dacca takes the head-quarters, consisting of seventeen officers, eight ladies, six children, four staff sergeants, four wives, four children, 205 rank and file, thirty women and twenty children. The Dilbarce conveys eight officers, two ladies, four staff sergeants, four wives and four children of ditto, 420 rank and file, fifty women, and fifty children. The Dalhousie takes seven officers, one lady, two children, two staff sergeants, and two wives, and one child, 179 rank and file, twenty women, and twenty-nine children. The passengers included—108th Foot: Capt. J. R. Gordon, Ensign C. B. Anderson, Ensign F. B. Peile, Ensign G. B. Radcliffe. Royal Artillery: Captain R. A. Stevenson, Lieutenants S. C. Nicholas and R. Warburton. Royal Engineers: Lieutenants C. F. Call and M. Greer. Ensign J. Corse Scott, 1-19th Regiment; Lieutenant H. F. Seagram, 1-23rd Regiment; Ensign G. Winter, 26th Regiment; Lieut. Col. H. W. #### GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

NEW AIDES-DE-CAMP.

No. 304.—The following military letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 28, dated Feb. 4 last, is published for general information:—

India-office, London, Feb. 4, 1869.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. Gen. of India in Council.

My Lord,—Her Majesty's Government have for some time had under their consideration, in communication with H.R.H. the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, the question of an addition to the number of paid aides-de-camp to her Majesty, in consequence of the increase to the British army resulting from the transfer of the various corps from the Indian forces.

With the view of carrying this measure into effect, it has been determined that the whole number of aides-de-camp to her Majesty during the time of peace shall in future be as follows:—

British army, paid	...	...	...	...	6
unpaid	...	...	...	...	6
Indian army	...	...	...	...	4
Militia and yeomanry	...	...	...	...	12

—28

In this classification the Indian army is held to comprise officers of the local service, the staff corps, the royal (late Indian) artillery and engineers, and the new line regiments.

Of the four aides-de-camp allotted to the Indian army, two will be paid their allowance, forming for the present a charge upon Indian revenues. Colonels Tapp and Orr have, under this arrangement, been brought on the establishment of paid aides-de-camp to her Majesty.

On the occurrence of a vacancy, by the promotion, resignation, or death of either of these two officers, the next in seniority of the aides-de-camp chosen from the Indian army will succeed to the allowance; but an officer of the Indian service will not have a claim to the position of paid aide-de-camp in consequence of any vacancy among those chosen from the British army, even though he may be senior among the unpaid aides-de-camp of the Queen.—I have, &c., (Signed) H. W. NORMAN, Sec. to Govt. of India.

WIVES AND FAMILIES OF CHAPLAINS—TRAVELLING EXPENSES.

March 9.—No. 1,548.—The following letter to the addresses of the deputy-accountant general, N.W.P., is published for general information: From R. B. Chapman, Esq., Officiating Secretary to the Govt. of India, Financial Dept., to the Deputy Acct. Gen., N.W.P.

Sir,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 7,560 p.a., dated Jan. 30 last, soliciting, with reference to financial resolution No. 2,902 of Oct. 18, 1868, instructions as to the title of the wives and families of chaplains to their travelling expenses by road and by rail, in addition to the charge for passage, and adding that the extent of charge to be allowed for baggage should be fixed.

2. In reply, I am desired to state that the Gov. gen. in Council sanctions, in addition to the charge for passage by sea, for the wife of a chaplain an allowance of three annas a mile by rail; for a child above twelve years, seven and a-half annas; and for a child under twelve years, nine pie a mile, without any further allowance for luggage. For dak journeys, eight annas a mile for the wife, half this rate for those children above six years, and nothing for other children.

R. B. CHAPMAN, Offctg. Sec. to Govt. of India.

WINTER CLOTHING OF NATIVE CAVALRY AND NATIVE INFANTRY.

March 12.—No. 295.—The Right Hon. the Secretary of State having decided that the material for the winter clothing of native cavalry and for the great coats of native infantry regiments, when supplied from the Army Clothing Agency, should be charged at their full cost to the State, the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council is pleased to fix the following rules for the repayment by native regiments for such supplies:—

The "cost price" will include all bona fide charges up to receipt into the Army Clothing Agency, together with the actual cost of packing and freight to their destination, with an additional charge of 5 per cent. to cover the risk of loss by damage, deterioration on the passage out, in the Agency, or in the transit to the regiment.

The object in sanctioning these supplies through the Army Clothing Agents is to enable regiments, which may avail themselves of the indulgence, to obtain the materials of good quality at wholesale prices, without either gain or loss to Government.

It is further notified that all indents for cloth and material for great coats for native infantry, or for clothing for native cavalry, are to be submitted to the superintendent and agent for army clothing at least 24 months before the same are required, to enable that officer to include them in his annual departmental requisition on the Secretary of State for India.

Forms of indent will be supplied by the superintendent and agent for army clothing.

All articles so obtained must be paid for in full by the regiment receiving them within twelve months from the date of their despatch to the corps from the Clothing Agency at Calcutta.

It is optional with commanding officers of regiments to make use of the Agency on the above terms, or to make their own arrangements for the supply of clothing for their corps, but with the previous sanction of Government if obtained from England, and in the latter case all risk of loss or deterioration must be borne by the regiment.

The above rules apply also to the artillery, cavalry, and infantry of the Punjab frontier force.

ASSIGNMENT OF FURLOUGHS.

March 10.—In continuation of the notification, dated Feb. 22, published in the Calcutta Gazette of the 24th idem, it is hereby notified that the Lieut. gov. of Bengal has assigned furloughs to officers named below, under chapter 1 of the Covenanted Civil Service Furlough Rules of 1868, viz.:—

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

STAFF CORPS—PROMOTIONS.

Adjutant General's Office, Poona, March 12.—The following G.O. by H.E. the Commander in Chief in India, is published for information and guidance :—

No. 180.

Head Quarters, Simla, June 3, 1868.

In continuation of the G.O. [* G.O. No. 66, March 21, 1867; † G.O. No. 64, Feb. 29, 1868; ‡ G.O. No. 145, May 5, 1868]. H.E. the Commander in Chief is pleased to publish, for the information of the army in India, the following letter from the military secretary to the Horse Guards to his address, dated April 8, 1868, together with the memo. which accompanied it :—

"With reference to my telegram of the 1st inst., requesting you to be good enough to 'make no more provisional promotions in succession to staff corps probationers,' I am directed by the Field Marshal Commanding in Chief to transmit herewith a memorandum on the subject, which H.R.H. wishes your Excellency to promulgate in G.O. to the army serving under your command.

"Your Excellency will observe that in order to carry out the regulations contained in the enclosed memorandum and avoid complications, it will be necessary to limit provisional promotions to be announced in your G.O. to such vacancies as are caused by the transfer of British officers to the staff corps, with more than four years' service on full pay from the date of first commission, and which vacancies will, as heretofore, continue to be filled up without purchase, provisionally, in India.

"In the twelve regiments of the line, in which the purchase system does not exist, your Excellency will of course continue to carry out in your local orders provisional promotions without purchase in succession to officers transferred to the staff corps, irrespective of their length of service, as these latter will not be entitled to receive the value of their commissions on appointment to the staff corps."

THE PREVENTIVE SERVICE.—The undermentioned appointments have been made in the preventive service :—Mr. T. Jervis has been appointed to act as superintendent, preventive service, v. Mr. W. Leibschwager; and Mr. W. Stewart to act as deputy superintendent, preventive service, v. Mr. T. Jervis.

Mortimer, R.H.A., 15 mo., to England, on urgent private affairs; Major Boyd, 11th N.I., staff corps, 30 days' leave of absence, preparatory to proceeding on furlough to Europe; Capt. McNair, Punjab regiment N.I., 2 years on m.c. The undermentioned officers and warrant officer have been granted extensions of leave for period specified, viz. :—Capt. Walsh, for 1 year, from April 28; Capt. Watts, for 2 mo.; Capt. Jones, for 3 mo.; Lieut. Nicholls, for 6 mo.; Lieut. Owen, for 4 mo.; Conductor Furlong, for 6 mo.; Capt. Sibthorpe, staff corps, officiating wing officer 6th regiment N.I., for 2 years; Surg. Ward, presidency surgeon 1st district, and professor of midwifery, Grant Medical College, to Europe for 2 years; Major Watson, Bombay staff corps, having elected the furlough rules of 1868, the portion of leave to Europe enjoyed by that officer after July 1, 1868, dated March 13, 1867, is to be considered as furlough under clause 4, rule 29, and rule 15 of furlough regulations of 1868.

* Vide Bombay G. O. C. No. 312, 11th April, 1867.

‡ Vide Bombay G. O. C. No. 233, 29th April, 1868.

MOVEMENTS OF TROOPS.—ANNUAL RELIEFS.—It is officially notified that the undermentioned troops from England, Feb. 22, per Euphrates, are expected to arrive at Bombay on April 1, 1869, viz.:—Troops 752, 1 field officer, 8 captains, 7 subalterns, 5 sergeants, 5 trumpeters or drummers, 3 wives of officers, 15 wives of soldiers, and 17 children. The troops will be despatched to their destinations in different parts of the Bombay presidency under the orders of the Brig. gen. commanding Bombay garrison. It is notified that the number of officers, and probably the number of soldiers' families, would be increased, of which due notice would be given by the home authorities.

BARRACKMASTERS.—The following subordinate appointments have been made:—(February)—First-class Barrackmaster Knapman, having obtained a furlough to Europe on m.c., the following transfers and acting appointments in the barrack department are ordered:—Toft is transferred from the Mhow to the Rajpootana circle, v. ### LORD LAWRENCE AT THE FISHMONGERS' HALL.

On April 14 the Court of Assistants of the Fishmongers' Company gave a banquet to the Archbishop of Canterbury, Prince Teck, Lord Lawrence, and other distinguished guests, in their noble hall, London bridge.

The Prime Warden (Mr. George Moore), in proposing "Our Indian Empire," in connection with the health of Lord Lawrence, remarked—In the eventful life of such a man it is no easy matter to say little when there is so much that might be said. Although a native of India, it is now just forty years since (after finishing his education at Derry and Haileybury, where he very soon distinguished himself by attention to his studies and by his force of character) he returned to the land of his birth, and with but slight intermission he has been at his post ever since, discharging the most onerous responsibilities. He has lived to attain the highest office, and held it to the term of its expiration, and now, full of honour and in apparently good health, he returns to this country to receive the plaudits of his fellow subjects and the approval of his Sovereign, who has conferred upon him the highest dignity it is in her power to bestow by enrolling him as one of the peers of the realm. (Cheers.) It is not for me to refer in detail to his distinguished career. It was not until the crisis of the Sikh war that he rose to celebrity, not by patronage, not by favour, but by work—(cheers)—by conscientiously and persistently doing his public duty. (Hear.) In 1848 another more serious crisis shook the whole fabric of our Indian Empire, but it issued in the annexation of the Punjab, and in 1852 he became its supreme ruler. In 1857 the Sepoy mutiny occurred. Under his government, the Punjab stood firm in its allegiance. Delhi was retaken by his lieutenant, John Nicholson, and our Eastern Empire was saved. (Hear, hear.) There is one characteristic of Lord Lawrence which cannot be better expressed than in the inspired words of the Nehemiah of old:—"He was a faithful man, and feared God above many." (Hear, hear.) He has ever acted the part of a Christian in duty, while his public and private example has helped to remove stumbling-blocks in the way of the conversion of the natives. The address presented to him by the bishop and clergy on his retirement is a striking testimony to the rapid spread of education and civilisation during the five years of his government. Perhaps no other country in the world has made so great a material progress as India during these last five years, whether we look to exports and imports, or to the extension of telegraphs, railways, canals, and other great social improvements. The legal system has been amended, schools have been multiplied, and everywhere a more generous consideration has been extending itself to the native race. With that modesty which is the true emblem of greatness, we are sure Lord Lawrence will acknowledge there are great changes in store for that country, and it is to be hoped that his influence in the councils of India will still be felt after his return to this country. In honouring Lord Lawrence we feel we are honouring the whole body of Anglo-Indian civilians from which he sprang, of which he is the natural and most illustrious representative, and we give him a hearty welcome to this hall.
